IMPERIAL BYZANTINE COINS
IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM

Warwick Wroth

The most excellent and thorough reference handbook ever written for the study and identification of the coinage of the Byzantine Empire. The collection in the British museum is the largest and most complete in the world. Long out of print and sold at high prices at auction (from $260-500), this work has not been available anywhere in the United States except in some of the largest libraries and in the hands of a very few numismatists who treasure it more than some of their most rare coins.

Now for the first time in over half a century, the two volumes of this rare but renowned reference work are offered in a limited numbered edition to libraries, scholars, students of Byzantine history and numismatics and collectors who we believe will be overjoyed by this announcement.

Because we are publishing this series as a public service, and in appreciation of the continuous patronage of the libraries, scholars and numismatists of the United States, our limited edition will be offered for sale only in the United States for the first three months. Orders from overseas libraries, scholars, and dealers will receive priority numbers and will be serviced while our supply lasts, after the initial orders from the United States have been filled.

PREFACE BY THE KEEPER OF COINS

THE present Catalogue describes in two volumes (paged continuously) the coinage of the later Roman or Byzantine Empire from the accession of Anastasius I in A.D. 491 to the Fall of Constantinople in 1453. With the exception of some of the specimens arranged under the headings of 'Italian' and 'Provincial' coinages, the coins here catalogued are those that are believed to have been issued by Imperial authority at Constantinople and the other mint-places of the Empire. The coinages of the so-called 'Empires' of Nicaea, Thessalonica and Trebizond, as well as those of the Vandals, Goths, and Lombards, which have often been confused with the true Imperial coinages, are reserved for treatment in a subsequent volume.

The size of the coins is given in inches and tenths, and the weight in English Troy grains. Tables for converting grains into grammes and inches into millimetres, as well as into the measures of Mionnet's scale, are placed at the end of the second volume. Two lists of Emperors, one a brief alphabetical list, the other chronological and more detailed, will be found at the end of the Indexes.

The whole work has been written by Mr. Warwick Wroth, Assistant-Keeper of Coins and Medals, and the proof-sheets have been read by myself and by Mr. G. F. Hill, Senior Assistant in the Department.

INTRODUCTION

§ 1. EXTENT AND ARRANGEMENT OF BYZANTINE COINAGE.

SABATIER, in his well-known work entitled Description générale des monnaies byzantines, published in 1862, has dealt with the coinage of the later Roman Empire from the reign of Arcadius onwards. But in choosing this reign as his starting-point he was influenced—as he admits (ch. i, p. 151)—by motives of convenience and the desire to make his book a supplement to Henri Cohen's Corpus of Imperial coins. Cohen's descriptions extend to the reign of Romulus Augustulus, but do not embrace the coinages of Arcadius and his successors in the Eastern division of the Empire.

Although collectors and compilers of catalogues have usually followed Sabatier in regarding the reign of Arcadius as the point de départ of the later Roman or 'Byzantine' coinage, there is really no historical justification for such a view. It may, no doubt, be convenient for a historian of the later Roman Empire to adopt the year 395 (Arcadius and Honorius) as a starting-point,¹ but (as Prof. Bury remarks²) just as there is no question of two Roman Empires in the days of Constantius and Constans, so 'the relation of Arcadius and Honorius, the relation of Theodosius II and Valentinian III, the relation of Leo I and Anthemius, were exactly the same as the political relation which existed between the sons of Constantine. However independent one of another, or even hostile, the rulers from time to time may have been, theoretically the unity of the Empire which they ruled was unaffected'.

If this is true of the general political relations of East and West, it is no less true of their financial relations—at any rate so far as coinage is concerned. The coins of both great divisions of the Empire from the reigns of Arcadius and Honorius till the reign of Romulus Augustulus are homogeneous in style, type and fabric, and cannot be profitably studied except as a whole.

The position is simplified when the Emperors of the West (and their mints) disappear from the scene with the resignation of Romulus Augustulus, A. D. 476. This event is coincident with the early part of the reign of Zeno (A. D. 474–491), but it seems better to begin a description of the later Roman coinage, not with Zeno but—a few years later—with Anastasius I (A. D. 491–518), who, though he adhered, in the case of his gold money, to the models of his predecessors, instituted an important reform in the bronze coinage and inaugurated the large folles (Pl. I. 8, 9) which long remained characteristic of Byzantine coinage.

It may be added that several distinguished numismatists—such as de Saulcy (in his valuable pioneer Essai de Classification des suites monétaires byzantines, 1836); T. B. Burgon (Catal. of Pembroke Collection, 1848, p. 310); Barthélemy (Rev. num., 1863, p. 456); Babelon (Traité, i, p. 14), and, apparently, de Salis—have already expressed the opinion that a descriptive catalogue may best begin with the coinage of Anastasius I.¹

In the arrangement of the coins the important factors are the mint-place, the denomination and the date of issue. An arrangement according to ‘metals’ such as Sabatier adopted can have no scientific justification, and it can hardly be questioned that, both on historical and numismatic grounds, the primary classification, in each Emperor’s reign, must be according to mints. Under each mint the coins would probably be arranged most scientifically if they were placed in strict chronological order. Thus, all the coins of year 1 of each Emperor’s reign—of whatever denomination—would be placed together; all those of year 2, of year 3, and so on. But an arrangement of this kind presents some practical difficulties in the case of the catalogue of a large collection; one objection being that the description of each denomination would have to be again and again repeated under each year. It seems best, then,² under each mint, to group the coins according to denominations, the specimens of each denomination being, of course, arranged chronologically, wherever possible. In this way an important feature—the denomination—is brought into relief, while the chronological sequence is not greatly, if somewhat, obscured.³ In each reign, therefore, the great bulk of the coinage will be placed first, under ‘Constantinople’; then will follow the coins of Thessalonica; those of the Asiatic mints (Nicomedia and Cyzicus), and then the coinages minted at Antioch, Alexandria and Carthage, in Sicily, and at Rome and Ravenna. Under the mint-heading ‘Constantinople’ (e.g.) we shall have (i) the gold solidi (or nomismata), semisses and tremisses, described in their approximate chronological order; (ii) the silver coins; (iii) the bronze coins, which, till the seventh⁴ century usually bear their own dates, and can be arranged mechanically year by year.

² As proposed in a paper on the ‘Study of Byzantine Numismatics’ contributed by the present writer to Corolla Numismatica (Oxford, 1906), pp. 325–335.

§ 2. HISTORICAL AND NUMISMATIC SUMMARY.

The first ruler whose coins are described in these volumes is Flavius Anastasius, who was proclaimed Emperor in April, 491, in succession to Zeno. Anastasius was an Imperial guardsman (silentiarius) and owed his promotion to Ariadne, the widow of his predecessor, whom he married shortly after his accession. There are coins of Ariadne with her portrait, but these were all issued during the lifetime of her first husband.

ANASTASIUS I,
—1 July, 518.

The reign of Anastasius was, on the whole, a prosperous one, though troubled by an Isaurian war, by Bulgarian invasions of Thrace and, especially, by a war with Persia lasting from the summer of 502 till 506, when the Persians restored their conquests in return for a large indemnity. In the religious disputes of his time the Emperor ranged himself on the side of the Monophysites. A rising in 514 in defence of the Orthodox party was headed by the general Vitalian. In the following year Vitalian advanced to Constantinople, defeated the Imperial troops, and compelled the Emperor to come to terms. The coins that have been usually attributed to Vitalian are undoubtedly barbarous pieces of the time of Justin I or later.¹

Revolt of Vitalian,

Anastasius is described by Procopius (Hist. arc., xix. 2) as προνοητικώτατος τε ἄμα καὶ οἰκονομικώτατος πάντων αὐτοκρατόρων. He built for the protection of the Capital the Long Wall stretching from the Sea of Marmora (at Selymbria) to the Black Sea, and rendered service of a rarer kind by giving his personal attention to the details of finance, by abolishing the Chrysargyron, the oppressive tax on receipts that weighed on the humblest of his subjects, and by practising economy in the Court and public expenditure. He was thus able, in spite of the large disbursements of his reign, to leave his successor a treasure of 320,000 pounds of gold.

The great currency-reform of his time was the introduction, in A.D. 498, of the large bronze² folles of 40 nummia, with its smaller denominations of 20, 10 and 5 nummia (Pl. I. 7, 10, 11; Pl. II. 1). The new coinage was welcome to the people as taking the place of bronze coins that were usually of very small module, and which had evidently become scarce. It also commended itself by the conspicuous way in which each denomination proclaimed its value on the reverse—M = 40; K = 20, &c.³ These coins were struck at the three mints which were in operation under Anastasius—Constantinople, Nicomedia and Antioch. The Imperial gold and silver money, from this reign onwards, is struck chiefly at Constantinople, or at Carthage and in Italy.

Anastasius was succeeded by Justin I, an illiterate man of peasant-birth, but a good soldier and at that time commander of the Imperial Guards. His reign has been described as a mere prelude to the reign of his famous nephew Justinian. In 521 Justinian assumed the Consulship, and by his display of magnificent Games won the favour of the populace.

JUSTIN I,
1 July, 518
-1 Aug. 527.

On 1 April, 527, Justinian was created Augustus, and reigned jointly with his uncle till 1 Aug., when Justin died. The coins of the joint rule are now rare, especially the bronze pieces, but the gold coins were probably struck in considerable numbers, as there are two varieties of the solidus, each with its own set of officinae-numerals. The Constantinople mint must have been active during the short period—four months—when these solidi were issued.

The gold coins of Justin I are of rude work, and it is difficult to separate them from the numerous 'barbarian' pieces that bear the name and head of IVSTINVS (see infra, p. 21). A silver coin with the name of 'Justin' (rev., FELIX CARTA), assigned by Sabatier to Justin I, is probably a Vandalic piece (infra, p. 13, n. 2, and p. 21).¹

(Berlin, 1851), p. 123 f.; cp. p. 135 f. and in his Hist. monn. rom. (ed. Blacas), iii, p. 100; cp. p. 108; see also O. Seeck in Zeit. f. Num., xvii, p. 164; Finlay, Hist. Gr., i, p. 445; Babelon, Traité, i, p. 770. The text in Roncallius, Vet. Lat. Script. Chron. (1787), p. 305 = Mon. Germ. H. xi, p. 95 is:—'Nummis quos Romani Terentianos vocant, Graeci follares, Anastasius princeps suo nomine figuratis placibilem plebi commutationem distraxit.' The text apparently contains several corruptions. Scaliger and later critics read placabilem for placibilem: for follares is read phollares (Babelon) or phollerales (Scaliger); for Terentianos or terentianos some read teruncios or teruncianos; for commutationem Nipperdey proposed computationem direxit. Mommsen, who was inclined to read commutationem instruxit, supposed the passage to mean that Anastasius marked each coin with its respective name (suo nomine figuratis), i.e. with its mark of value, M, K, &c., and thereby introduced a change that was welcome to the common people. Pinder and Friedlaender (Beiträge, p. 135 f.) declare that suo nomine figuratis must mean that Anastasius issued coins stamped with his own name. The words may certainly (and perhaps more easily) bear this latter meaning (subsequently adopted by Mommsen, Hist. monn. rom., iii, p. 101), but the passage thus translated seems to lose its force, because the novelty or reform introduced by Anastasius was surely not the stamping of coins with the Imperial name or monogram—a thing done by his predecessors—but the stamping them with their marks of value in a conspicuous manner. Another reading that has been proposed by Mommsen (ap. Pinder and Friedlaender, p. 135) is implacabilem plebi commutationem distraxit, i.e. 'die bisherige dem Volke unbequeme Art des Münzverkehrs beseitigte der Kaiser.'

The close of the year 527 ushers us into the spacious times of Justinian, of Belisarius and Tribonian. The character of Justinian was one strangely compounded of elements of strength and weakness, and even his ability has been depreciated as of a mediocre type. Yet he was certainly the cause of greatness in others, and was himself inspired with an exalted, or at least grandiose, sense of the dignity of Empire. His great ideals were those of Imperial and Christian unity¹—ideals to be attained by the re-conquest of the ancient Empire of Rome and by the organization and surveillance of State and Church in every detail.

JUSTINIAN I,
-14 Nov. 565.

Yet Justinian, the law-giver and diplomatist, the theologian, the master-builder of church and fortress, the patron of the Arts, hardly here concerns us, and it is remarkable that his coinage so imperfectly reflects the general artistic achievements of his reign. He did nothing to improve its mechanical execution or to vivify its reverse designs, though he certainly made an effort in the direction of portraiture so far as his own head is concerned.² But the head of Theodora is absent from his coins, though the representation of an Empress had for centuries been familiar on Roman coins, and though his immediate successor (Justin II) associated his wife with himself on most of his obverses. It is the more remarkable because Theodora had immense political influence and shared to the full her husband's Imperial honours. Her name in inscriptions accompanies that of Justinian; mosaic portraits and statues of her were everywhere displayed.³

But Justinian the organizer of victory has left ineffaceable traces on the coinage, and in place of the five mint-centres of Justin I we have the eleven or twelve mints of Justinian. The conquest of northern Africa, of Sicily and Italy, made Carthage, Catania,⁴ Rome and Ravenna Imperial mints which will interest us till they are lopped off one by one, through the loss, in the seventh century, of Africa; of Sicily in the ninth century; of Italy in the eighth and the eleventh centuries.⁵ We are concerned, moreover, with Justinian on account of the great attention that he paid to iv, p. 293) is in the highest degree doubtful. I suspect the coin to be a badly preserved example of the piece with rev., Tyche of Antioch, like Pl. IV. 4, infra; cp. de Saulcy, Essai, p. 11.

³ Diehl, Justinien, pp. 52, 53, and his Figures byzantines (1906), 'Théodora,' p. 67.

economics, at least as understood by him.¹ His reign, in spite of grinding taxation, of devastating plague (A.D. 542), of extravagant expenditure and maladministration of the public finances, witnessed a great development of commerce. His coinage is remarkably abundant and was evidently regularized with care. This was especially the case with the bronze money which, from his twelfth year (i.e. A.D. 538/9) onwards, is made to indicate by regnal years the date of issue, so that at the mints of Constantinople, Nicomedia and elsewhere we can follow the currency year by year.

Constantinople. The principal mint, as at all periods, was at the capital. Under Justinian, though not in most later reigns, the issue of gold was confined to this centre, nor was silver elsewhere coined, except at Carthage. The important city of THESSALONICA, and the Asiatic cities, NICOMEDIA and CYZICUS, continued to issue bronze on the model of Constantinople.²

Antioch. The usual legend on the coins is 'Theoupolis',³ a name assumed by the city after the disastrous earthquake of 29 Nov. 528.

ANTIOCH.

The name 'Antioch' is not found on the coins after this period though of course it was never really superseded by the new name. After the destruction of the city by Chosroes in June 540, it was rebuilt and beautified by Justinian.⁴ We shall note in later reigns that in this great city of Greeks, Syrians and Jews, Latin seems to have been imperfectly understood by the Antiochene die-engravers, and even under Justinian the Latin legends are sometimes most barbarously reproduced.

Alexandria. This mint, after having been long dormant, once more comes into operation.⁵ It was never important, its coins being usually small bronze pieces, undated, and, as time advances, of barbarous style. The highest denomination is IB (12 nummia).

ALEXANDRIA.

Carthage. The conquest of Africa necessitated a new coinage, and the establishment of a mint at Carthage, the capital. Carthage had fallen into the hands of Belisarius shortly after his victory at

CARTHAGE.

Decimum, 13 Sept. 533. The native chieftains hastened to make their submission, and Belisarius disbursed large sums as presents. It is possible that the issue of a silver coinage may have taken place at once (the coins with CONOS = CONOB, p. 63, infra), but the minting of the bronze (marked KART), and, it may be, of the silver, was probably not carried out till about Sept. 534, when the organization of the new province was proceeding. Africa was placed under a Praetorian Prefect who had his official residence at Carthage. This city was also the residence of the African commander-in-chief (magister militum).¹

It was perhaps in this year (A.D. 534), the date when Belisarius celebrated at Constantinople his triumph for the overthrow of the Vandals and king Gelimir, that the enormous gold medallion, formerly in the French Collection (see frontispiece, vol. I and p. 25, infra), was produced, no doubt, at the mint of Constantinople.

Sicily. The conquest of this island by Belisarius followed hard upon his African success. By the end of 535, Sicily became an Imperial province under the governorship of a praetor (στρατηγός). Its scanty bronze coinage does not seem to be earlier than A.D. 538.²

SICILY.

There are numerous gold, silver and bronze coins bearing the name of Justinian which can be identified by style, &c., as the products of an Italian mint. (In some cases ROMA is named on the coins). The difficulty is to determine whether these coins, or any of them, were struck by the Imperial mint-masters.

ITALIAN MINTS. i. ROME.

Speaking broadly, and without dwelling on details partly discussed infra, pp. 73, 74, it may be said that several considerations lead one to suppose that the whole of these coinages, with the exception of a few bronze and possibly a few gold pieces, are not Imperial but Ostrogothic. A comparison of the heads of Justinian on these coins (silver and bronze) with the heads of the same Emperor on undoubted Ostrogothic coins (i.e. those with the King's name or monogram), suggests that the entire series was issued under the same (Ostrogothic) authority.

From the accession of Justinian in 527 till the taking of Rome by Belisarius in 536 the Imperialists had no foothold in Italy, and it was not till 552, on the defeat of Baduila (Totila) and the Ostrogoths by Narses, that Italy really became Imperial.³ There was thus ample time and opportunity for the Ostrogothic mints to continue their operations.

If, moreover, we consider the output of the mint of Rome in the reign of Justin II and other immediate successors of Justinian, we find that its issues are exceedingly scanty and chiefly confined to bronze pieces of the denominations XX and X.⁴ No doubt a great mass of Ostrogothic coins bearing the name of Justinian long remained in circulation, and even continued to be imitated over a long series of years, but it is certain that the Imperial Roman mint was not important under the immediate successors of Justinian, and it is probable that in his reign it had not assumed a position of any significance.

² The coins are undated, but have the full-face obverse which was first introduced on Justinian's coinage in A.D. 538/9.

The only coin assigned in this work to the Roman mint is the bronze piece (p. 70), marked XX, which is dated year 26, i.e. A.D. 552/3, the year of the practical conquest of Italy.¹

Ravenna. This city passed from the Ostrogoths to Belisarius in 539/40, but money does not seem to have been coined there till about fifteen years after this event. The establishment of the Exarchate of Ravenna apparently dates only from the reign of Maurice Tiberius (A.D. 584).

Cherson and uncertain mints. Justinian had various friendly relations with the interesting city of Cherson,² which was an outpost of commerce, an oasis of Hellenic civilization, in a desert overrun by barbarian Huns. Some small bronze coins, no doubt of 5 nummia, have been attributed to it. They bear the head of Justinian, and on the reverse a monogram which may be read as the name of Cherson.³ This coinage was scanty and unimportant, though it is possible that it may have been supplemented by the somewhat similar bronze pieces described, infra, pp. 72-73, under 'Uncertain Mints'.

CHERSON AND UNCERTAIN MINTS.

Corsica and Sardinia, which fell to the Empire along with Africa, seem to have had no independent mints. So long as Carthage remained Imperial these islands doubtless used the coins that emanated from that centre.

Nor do the successes of Justinian in south-eastern Spain (from A.D. 554) seem to have led to the establishment of Imperial mints, for the gold coins with the name of Justinian which are discovered in Spain appear to be chiefly the currency of the Visigoths.⁴

Justinian died on 14 Nov. 565, and his successor was his nephew, Justin II. He was married to Sophia, niece of Justinian's wife, Theodora. The conspicuous events of the reign of Justin II⁵ and of his successors Tiberius II and Maurice Tiberius are concerned with the exhausting struggle with the Persians; with the devastation of the Balkan Peninsula by Slavs and Avars; and the conquests (from A.D. 568) of the Lombards in Italy.

The general disintegration of the Empire reaches a climax in the reign of Phocas¹ (A.D. 602–610), but in the course of the seventh century the Empire is rescued from destruction and revived by the energy of Heraclius.

During the last four years of his life Justin II was insane, but in a lucid interval in Dec. 574 he created Tiberius II Caesar, and, till the death of Justin II in 578, Tiberius ruled (as a subordinate co-regent) with the Empress Sophia.

Sophia, unlike her aunt Theodora, assumes a prominent place on the Imperial coinage from the very first year of Justin's reign; the usual type of the bronze coins being a group of the Emperor and Empress enthroned (Pl. XI. 8–11). She does not appear on the gold and silver. On the coins of Carthage, not only the effigy but the name of the Empress is added to that of her husband, in the inscription DN IVSTINO ET SOFIE VITA (p. 99, infra). Perhaps these figures reproduce actual statues such as those which are known to have stood in public places at Constantinople—statues of Justin II and Sophia, of his daughter Arabia and of Helena his niece.²

The Empress Sophia.

During this reign all the mints of Justinian continue in operation, and gold coins seem also to have been struck at Ravenna. At the Capital, a new reverse type is introduced on the solidus, a seated figure of Constantinople (Néa 'Ρώμη: Pl. XI. 1). John of Ephesus³ says that on his 'darics' (i.e. solidi) Justin 'introduced a female figure which was generally compared to Venus', but that his successor Tiberius II discontinued this design and, in accordance with the dictation of a vision, caused the Cross to be represented on the reverse of his coins. It seems strange that the armed and draped figure of Constantinople should have been mistaken, even by the most ignorant, for the Goddess of Love, yet John's statement is at any rate correct as to the reverse-type substituted by Tiberius.⁴

The coins of Antioch are remarkable for the entirely barbarous legends of the obverses, which must have been prepared by engravers who were unacquainted with Latin.

At Carthage, the variety of types is noteworthy. We know that in Justin's reign some special care was bestowed on the administration of Africa and the regulation of its finances. Carthage erected statues in honour of this Emperor.⁵ The silver coins (Pl. XIII. 3) bear Tiberius II, Constantine,³ Count of the Excubiti, who had been appointed Caesar by Justin II in Dec. 574, became Augustus and sole Emperor in Sept. 578, in the month preceding the death of Justin II. In the dates on his coins he usually reckons his 'reign' as beginning with his Caesarship, but there is no evidence that decisively proves that he struck money till he became sole ruler and Augustus.⁴ His wife Anastasia now received Imperial honours and took the place of his former co-regent, the widowed Empress Sophia (cp. obv. of coins of Thessalonica, Pl. XV. 2, Tiberius II and Anastasia).

TIBERIUS II,
CONSTANTINE,
Caesar, Dec. 574

Tiberius merited praise as a ruler for the attention which he paid to the army and for his remission of taxation throughout the Empire. But his popularity was largely achieved—to the great detriment of the Imperial treasury—by the most extravagant donations to all sorts and conditions of men. One of the most politic of his gifts was the presentation to Chilperic, King of the Franks, of gold coins or medallions each of a pound's weight (cp. infra, p. 105).

The election of Tiberius to the (sole) consulship gave occasion at Constantinople and several provincial mints for a new obverse type representing the Emperor in Consular dress. The earliest of these coins belong to 578/9 (regnal year '5'). The bronze coins of this type are large and well struck, and the solidus is of relatively good work (Pl. XIV. 5; XVI. 3; XIII. 20). We have already noticed (p. xix, supra) that he introduced a sacred reverse-type—the Cross—on all denominations of his gold money. Another innovation was the introduction of a bronze piece of XXX nummia.

Tiberius died on Aug. 13, 582. A few days earlier (Aug. 5), realizing that he was dying, he had elected as his successor Mauricius, the Count of the Foederati (barbarian auxiliaries), a good general who had recently returned from the campaign in Persia.

Maurice—who had assumed the additional name of Tiberius—had a reputation for piety and moderation. He was stigmatized as avaricious, but he seems only to have practised a wise economy which contrasted strongly with the lavish expenditure of his predecessor. Until the peace of A.D. 591, the Persian War was a perpetual drain upon his resources, while he was further harassed, during his twenty years' reign, by the struggle with the Avars and Slavs.

TIBERIUS,
13 Aug. 582
—22 Nov. 602
(d. 26 or 27 Nov.).

His unsympathetic treatment of the army, or perhaps his disciplinary zeal, led to a revolt in which the centurion Phocas took a leading part. Phocas marched on Constantinople and Maurice fled to Chalcedon, but was captured and put to death by Phocas on 26 (or 27) Nov. 602.

The mints of this reign continue as before, and the coinage is abundant. At THESSALONICA, the flourishing city where the Prefect of Illyricum resided, the dated coinage extends from the second to the last year of the Emperor's reign, but there are apparently no coins of years 16, 17, 18, i.e. from A.D. 597/8 to A.D. 599/600. It seems to have been in the year 597 that the city experienced a siege at the hands of the Avars.¹

The coinage of CARTHAGE—partly dated by Indictions—is fairly important. In this reign the Exarch of Africa (in place of the Magister militum Africae) is mentioned (A.D. 591) for the first time. The Exarchs were selected judiciously by Maurice, and they governed and defended the country with success against native risings. The insurrection of 595 was the last revolt of the Africans against the Byzantine authority.²

The coinage of Rome continues to be very scanty, but that of Ravenna is more important: the Exarch of Ravenna was apparently first created in this reign, circ. A.D. 584.³

The bronze of Sicily, now marked with the mint-name Catina, becomes more abundant, and was issued during many years of the reign.

The Lombard and Gaulish imitations of the coinages of Maurice⁴ lie beyond the limits of this work, though they illustrate the history of his reign. The Duchies of Spolegium and Beneventum had already been formed by Lombard chiefs, and from 584 onwards the Lombardic conquests in northern Italy began to be consolidated and completed. Against the Lombards Maurice sought the help of the Franks, and sent a subsidy of 50,000 solidi to Childebert, whom he saluted as his 'son'.

The somewhat interesting family coinage of Maurice Tiberius must be noticed. It consists (i) of bronze coins (Pl. XX. 1) bearing the figures of the Emperor and his wife Constantina (the daughter of Tiberius II, Constantine), and—on the reverse—

Family Coinage. their son Theodosius, represented in youth or manhood. These coins were struck at Cherson, which, though commercially important and tenacious of its old Hellenic independence, was never one of the great mints of the Empire and had apparently issued coins hitherto only under Justinian I.¹ It is probable that Maurice had some special connexion with this city, and that the issue of coins from its mint was intended as a compliment, on one side or the other.² (ii) There are silver coins of Carthage bearing the name of Theodosius (Augustus) only. On one type of these (Pl. XX. 3) are three busts which may be best identified as those of Theodosius and of his father and mother.

As to the date of these family coins: Theodosius was born 4 Aug. 584. A few years later (about 589?) he was created Augustus. This is the earliest date at which these coins can have been struck, but unless we are to assume that the representation of Theodosius is purely conventional (a child represented as youth or man), it is better to place the issue a few years later when the precocious Augustus was at any rate about twelve or thirteen. Perhaps the issue of the coins took place about 596/7 when Maurice made a remarkable will by which he bequeathed the Empire to his sons. The share assigned to Theodosius as the eldest was Constantinople and the East. The coins are not likely to have been struck so late as 601/2, because in that year Theodosius was very much in disgrace with his father (who, indeed, chastised him with rods) on account of his connexion with Germanus, who was charged with rebellion against the Emperor. Theodosius was put to death by Phocas in 602, shortly after his father. His mother Constantina was imprisoned, and put to death in 605.

Phocas, who had been crowned Emperor on 23 Nov. 602, shortly before his execution of Maurice Tiberius, was an ignorant and brutal soldier, regarded by his contemporaries as a sort of monster—the 'New Gorgon'. His very appearance was repulsive, and Cedrenus³ describes him as short and deformed, with red hair and shaggy eyebrows that met together (but with a shaven chin),⁴ and a face disfigured by an ugly scar which darkened in moments of anger. On his coins (Pl. XX. 4, &c.) Phocas

According to Latyshev (cited B. Z., iv, 1895, p. 397) the Emperor in question is probably Maurice Tiberius and the date A. has an unkempt, almost ruffianly appearance: he is always represented bearded,¹ so that the description of Cedrenus must, in this particular, be inaccurate.² We may rely all the more on the testimony of the coins because, in this case, a bearded Emperor is a deliberate innovation on the beardless type of the previous reigns. Moreover, the leaden seals of this Emperor have the same legend and bearded bust as the coins.³

During the earlier years of his rule Phocas places on the bronze coins the two standing figures of his wife Leontia and himself, Leontia being usually nimbate.⁴ The coinage as a whole was fairly abundant, and was struck at nine mints. Many of the bronze pieces are restruck, chiefly on the coins of Maurice Tiberius.

'The reign of Phocas' (says Gibbon) 'afflicted Europe with ignominious peace and Asia with devastating war.' The peace was that which was concluded with the Avars in 604, when at the same time the Imperial tribute to them was increased. The Persian war was especially disastrous. In 606-607 the Persians overran western Mesopotamia and Syria, and in 608 their army advanced across Asia Minor to Chalcedon so that blazing villages could be seen from Constantinople itself.

The tyranny and stupidity of Phocas increased the disorders of a troubled period. His endeavour to constrain his Jewish subjects to accept the Christian sacrament of Baptism led to serious revolts (A.D. 609) in Antioch and Alexandria.⁵ The many conspiracies of the reign were successfully repressed by him, but, finally, on 4 Oct. 610, a new rival, Heraclius, the son of Heraclius the elder, the venerated Exarch of Africa, defeated the Emperor's fleet. The tyrant was put to death, and Heraclius was proclaimed Augustus and crowned by the Patriarch in Constantinople on Oct. 5.

A coinage of solidi (νομίσματα), now very scarce, was evidently prepared in haste for circulation with the name of Heraclius. This νόμισμα was closely modelled upon the corresponding coin of Phocas, and the portrait is not distinguishable from that of Phocas (see infra, p. 184, note 3; Pl. XXIII. 1). But Heraclius soon instituted a new νόμισμα on which the cross potent (already found on the tremissis of Phocas, but without steps) takes the place of the figure of Victory. From his third year onwards variations in the obverse type in all metals become frequent. Most commonly Heraclius appears with his young son Heraclius Constantine, who was born in May, 612 and crowned Augustus in 613. His son (by Martina, his second wife) Heraclonas, who was born in 615 and crowned Augustus in 638, appears on the coins with his father and elder brother, but not (at Constantinople) before the year 639/40.¹ When the Empress Martina is seen it is in conjunction with her husband and her stepson Heraclius Constantine.

⁵ Of Alexandria there are a number of extremely barbarous coins which appear to belong to this reign.

These family groupings are represented quaintly but not without a touch of artistic feeling (see Pl. XXIII. 7, 10; XXIV. 10), and it may be said that the engraving of the gold and silver coins of Heraclius (at any rate at Constantinople) is throughout fairly neat and skilful. Heraclius himself, according to the description in Cedrenus,² was a man of middle height, strongly built and broad-chested, with fine eyes and yellow hair: he had a long bushy beard, but when he became Emperor he shaved. The coins represent him in A.D. 610 with a pointed beard like Phocas,³ but shortly afterwards with a close beard (Pl. XXIII. 1 and 2). From about 629/30, the twentieth year of his reign, he presents a grotesque appearance with a long flowing beard and a moustache of enormous extension (Pl. XXIII. 9).

The earlier years of the reign of Heraclius were times of grievous disaster for the Empire. Persia was, indeed, a vetus hostis, but its hostility was now productive of unexampled misfortune. Phocas had lost Mesopotamia; but Asia Minor was now overrun by the Persians right up to Chalcedon. Syria was attacked, and in 611, Antioch, and in 614, Jerusalem were captured.⁴ A precious relic, the Holy Rood, was carried off to Persia. The new coin-legend, Deus adiuta Romanis, first adopted on the silver of 615,⁵ must have had an almost pathetic significance. In 617 the Persians captured Alexandria and robbed the Empire of 'Egypt', the granary of Constantinople. But in 622 there came a change. Heraclius had proclaimed a crusade which was welcomed with something like national enthusiasm. The churches of Constantinople lent their plate and treasure, and the free doles of corn to the populace were discontinued. The Emperor himself commanded in person, and by a long series of campaigns lasting from 622 to 628⁶ completely shattered the power of Persia.

In 628 the Persian King Chosroes died. His son made submission to Heraclius and peace was established. In the following year (629) the Empire was again in possession of Egypt and of the other provinces of which Persia had deprived it. The Holy Rood was given back to Heraclius and was solemnly reinstated by him at Jerusalem (A.D. 629).¹ The long cross seen on the coins of A.D. 629/30 in the hands of the Emperor may perhaps be not a mere cruciform sceptre but the Rood itself (Pl. XXIV. 5; XXVII. 20; infra, p. 234).

But a power more formidable than the Persian was already rising, and at a time when the Empire was exhausted by long warring and drained by new taxation, the great Islamic movement under Mohammad had to be reckoned with. In 634 the Arab conquest of Syria began. Damascus, Antioch and Jerusalem fell into the hands of the Saracens, and by 638 the conquest was complete. The Arab invasion of Egypt was reserved for the last melancholy years of the reign of Heraclius, and its capital Alexandria did not fall till some time after his death, which took place on 11 Feb. 641.

During this long and momentous reign no less than twelve mints were in operation, but no important changes were made in the coinage beyond the issue of the 'silver Hexagram' (= double miliaresion), a piece of six scripula, extant specimens of which weigh a little over 100 grains Troy. A curious feature of the bronze coinage, probably significant of an ill-supplied treasury and of careless administration, is the constant evidence of restriking. Instances in which new flans were prepared for the coinage of Heraclius are probably exceptional; the general rule being to utilize as flans any older coins that came to hand, especially those of Tiberius II Constantine, Maurice Tiberius and Phocas. Restriking has been noticed in previous reigns, but under Heraclius it was particularly extensive and slovenly. Little or no attempt is made to obliterate the first types, and the original dates and mint-names are often more conspicuous than those impressed by Heraclius. Sometimes the old coin restruck by Heraclius has itself been originally restruck. In Sicily, the large M coins of the fifth and sixth centuries (Anastasius I—Justinian I) and certain coins of Heraclius himself, struck at various mints, were reissued with no alteration beyond two countermarks which showed the reigning Emperor's head and the name of 'Sicily' (Pl. XXVIII. 3, 4, &c.). A curious parallel may be found in the history of the English coinage under George III, when the government of the day—as a makeshift for a much-needed new issue of five-shilling pieces—put into circulation a great mass of Spanish dollars, countermarked either with G. R. (Georgius rex) or with a small head of George III.

Of the twelve mints, the most important was CONSTANTINOPLE, where a long and nearly unbroken series of dated coins was issued from the first to the thirtieth year of Heraclius. In bronze, the only important denomination was the follis (marked M). The succession of the types can be studied conveniently on the dated bronze pieces of this mint. In years 1 to 3 we find Heraclius alone; from year 3 to 5, Heraclius and his son Heraclius Constantine; from year 6 to 19, the group of Heraclius, Heraclius Constantine and Martina. In year 20 (= A. D. 629/30) there is a new variety—Heraclius in military dress and Heraclius Constantine. In year 30 (A. D. 639/40) we find the three figures of Heraclius, Heraclius Constantine and Heraclonas.

CARTHAGE in this reign is also a mint of considerable importance. Heraclius as the son of an exarch of Africa had a peculiar regard for the province, and at one time contemplated the substitution of Carthage for Constantinople as his capital. Under Heraclius, Africa was prosperous and peaceful, though towards the end of his reign the disorganization of the province had already begun, and the Berbers and other native peoples were asserting their independence.¹ The African coins present several peculiarities, especially the representation of Heraclius and his eldest son in the guise of Consul. The first appearance here, circ. A. D. 629, of a Greek legend—ΕΝ ΤΟΥΤΟ ΝΙΚΑ—is also noteworthy.

ALEXANDRIA has a varied and somewhat curious coinage. The capture of the city by the Persians took place at the end of A. D. 617,² but in 627/8 the Persians evacuated Egypt, and the Imperial supremacy was restored and confirmed by the peace of 629. It is strange that there should be coins (see infra, p. 224, M) that bear dates from 622/3–623/4, and thus fall within the period of Persian rule. The undated coins (infra, p. 224; Pl. XXVI. 7, 8) with the star and crescent on the obverse are also remarkable,³ and these symbols may perhaps commemorate the victory over the Persian king Chosroes, whose emblems they were;⁴ and if this is the right interpretation the coins were probably struck in 628, the year of the death of Chosroes, or in 629.

The Persian invasion of Egypt was to be followed, after some years interval, by the still more important attack of the Arabs. This latter invasion began in Dec. 639,⁵ and in June 641 (i. e. a few months after the death of Heraclius) Alexandria was attacked. It capitulated in Nov. 641, and was finally evacuated by the Romans in Sept. 642. At the end of 645 the city was retaken by the Romans, but was finally regained by the Arabs in the summer of 646. It will thus be seen that there was opportunity for the intermittent activity of the mint of Alexandria during the earlier years of Constans II, the successor of Heraclius. I have not, however, ventured definitely to assign coins to his reign, though, as indicated, infra, p. 227, some of the more barbarous pieces described under 'Heraclius I, Alexandria' may have been issued A.D. 641-646, and thus during the reign of Constans. It seems likely that with the Arabian conquest in the summer of 641 the mint came to an end. Yet it is just possible that some of the coins with apparently barbarous legends, ΠΑΝ, ΠΟΝ, &c. (infra, p. 227), may have emanated from Alexandria even under the domination of the Arabs; for under the new rulers the old civil administration of Egypt was, on the whole, maintained unaltered, and many official posts were even filled by Coptic Christians.¹

The coinage of Rome is insignificant; that of Ravenna in gold, silver and bronze of much greater importance. In Sicily we have already observed (p. xxv, supra) the issue of old folles stamped with the Emperor's countermark. The smaller denominations in bronze were struck at Catina.

Antioch (Theoupolis), captured first by the Persians in A.D. 611,² and then by the Arabs in 636,³ issued no coins under Heraclius, though once so prolific a mint. The only exception is formed by the coins of year 7 (= A.D. 616/7) with the inscription ΣΕΥΣΥ, apparently a blundered rendering of 'Theoupolis'.

The old mints of Thessalonica, Nicomedia and Cyzicus continued in operation, and two other places now strike for the first and last time under Byzantine rule—Isaura Palaia, which issued coins of year 8 (= A.D. 617/8), and a Cypriote mint, doubtless Constantia, which struck in year 17 (= A.D. 626/7) or perhaps as early as year 15 (= A.D. 624/5).

Heraclius by his will left the administration of the Empire to his two sons Heraclius Constantine and Heraclonas, and to the Empress Martina. Heraclius Constantine died, after a few months' reign, on 24 May, 641. In September, Constantinus (III), called also Constans (II),⁴ the young son of Heraclius Constantine and grandson of the great Heraclius, was chosen Emperor. He was crowned in October, and Heraclonas and his mother, Martina, were deposed.

There are no coins that can, with any certainty, be assigned to this period between the death of Heraclius in Feb. 641 and the coronation of Constantinus III (Constans II) in October of the same year.

The coinage of Constans II is closely modelled on that of his grandfather, Heraclius, and in various series he associates himself with the figures of his son Constantine IV, Pogonatus (Augustus from A.D. 654), and his younger sons Heraclius and Tiberius. His coins were struck at five mints only—Constantinople, Sicily (Catina or Syracuse), Carthage, Rome and Ravenna—as compared with the twelve mints of Heraclius; in other words, Thessalonica, Nicomedia, Cyzicus, Antioch and Alexandria¹ have ceased to coin, as well as the short-lived mints of Isaura and Cyprus.

The gold coinage issued at the Capital is abundant and well struck and the number of dies employed is very remarkable. The bronze coinage, on the contrary, is very badly struck, and the types are usually impressed on earlier coins, which are sometimes the large coins of the sixth century cut up into two or three pieces. The chief denomination is the follis (marked M) which is now of small module: on most of these coins the inscription ἀναέωσις occurs (see infra, p. 266 n.).

The Carthage mint continues to be of considerable importance, though after the Arab invasion of 647 the Imperial domination of Northern Africa began to be seriously threatened. Sicily, in place of the old sixth-century coins which Heraclius had made current by his countermarks, has now types of its own, but even these are generally restruck on earlier money.

Under the rule of Constans, a man of energetic and independent character, the territory of the Empire was not materially curtailed, though in the earlier part of his reign Cyprus was attacked, Rhodes plundered and Armenia lost. Alexandria was razed to the ground in A.D. 646.² In 658/9 Muavia the Caliph made peace with the Emperor. In 663 hostilities were renewed and the Arabs made yearly invasions of Asia Minor.

² In A.D. 647 GREGORY the Patrician, Governor of Africa, revolted and assumed the purple. According to Ibn Abd-el-Hakam he struck coins with his own effigy (Kaestner, De Imp. Constant., p. 34; Diehl, L'Afr. byz., p. 557). Some small silver coins have been sometimes attributed to him (Rev. belge, 1856, p. 191, cp. p. 492; 1857, p. 22; Helbing Sale Cat., 13 May, 1907, lot 170 and plate. appears to be later than the time of the African Gregory. Two specimens in the British Museum are assigned to the series of Beneventum: one of these formed part of the large collection of Italian coins purchased by the Museum in 1847 from Baron Kolb.

Constans was unpopular in the Capital, and his famous Tύπος, which forbade all discussion as to the nature of the will and the nature of the energy of Christ, though intended to make for peace, seemed to his subjects to treat with contemptuous indifference the burning theological issues of the day.¹ In 662 he left Constantinople never to return. On his way to Italy he visited Athens, and it is likely enough that he and his courtiers brought with them the numerous gold coins that in our own time have been discovered buried at the site of the Asklepieion.² After ravaging the territory of the Dukes of Beneventum, which he was unable to recover for the Empire, Constans took up his residence at Syracuse, where he lived till 668, when he was assassinated by his bathing-attendant. He had reigned twenty-seven years.

His son Constantine IV had, since 654, been associated with his father as Augustus, and it is from this year that Constantine reckons his regnal years when—as is only exceptionally the case—a date is inscribed on his coins. He is said to have acquired the nickname Pogonatus from the circumstance that when he left the Capital for Sicily to avenge his father's death his face was smooth, but when he returned he had grown a beard. On the coins we find both beardless and bearded types, but 'Pogonatus' is an epithet more suitable to the enormous beards of Heraclius and Constans II than to the short close beard of Constantine as shown on his coins (Pl. XXXVI).

CONSTANTINE IV,
POGONATUS,
Sept. 668–Sept. 685.

During this reign the Bulgarians settled to the south of the Danube (their kingdom was established A.D. 679), and the Slavs more than once besieged Thessalonica, now no longer an Imperial mint. But the life-and-death struggle was with the Caliph Muavia and the Saracens. A great siege of Constantinople, extending over the years 672–677, was successfully resisted, and the army and fleet of the infidel suffered disastrous defeat. In 678 peace was made with the Caliphate on honourable terms, and Constantine, who played something of the heroic part of Heraclius and Leo the 'Isaurian', received the congratulations of the western world. It is probably not without significance that on the obverses of his coins this Emperor is represented—almost throughout—as an armed warrior. The design is borrowed from the earliest type of the solidi of the great Justinian (itself modelled on a type found in preceding reigns), and the characteristic feature is that the Emperor holds a spear and a shield (adorned with the device of a horseman attacking a prostrate enemy). On the second type of the solidi of Justinian I (and afterwards on the solidi of his successors) the Emperor holds the globus cruciger instead of the spear, but Constantine IV only exceptionally lays aside his spear for the globus.

² Svoronos, in Journ. internat. d'arch. num., 1904, p. 143 f.

Constantine's bronze coins struck at the Capital are of about the same large module as those of Justinian I, though it may be suspected, perhaps, that old coins of Justinian have been restruck with the types of the later Emperor. His Sicilian coins are like those of his father Constans. His Carthage coinage, though showing (on the thick solidi) traces of barbarism, continues to be important: in spite of the Arab invasion of Africa in 669, and of the foundation of Kairouan, south of Carthage, the Imperialists still held their ground, and at the end of the seventh century, Carthage and Hadrumetum and many citadels of the interior were still in their hands.¹

In the acts of his reign and on many of his coins, Constantine IV is associated with his younger brothers Heraclius and Tiberius, but he deposed them from their Imperial position, circ. 680. The extraordinary demand made by the army of the Anatolic district that Constantine should associate his two brothers in his rule because—being believers in the doctrine of the Trinity—they wished to be governed by a trinity of Emperors, may perhaps throw light on the feeling that inspired the frequent representation on Imperial coinage of groups of three (e.g. Heraclius and family and later Emperors).

Constantine died in 685, leaving his throne to his eldest son Justinian II, who was then sixteen, and who had been associated with his father (though not apparently on the coins) since 680.

Justinian II was successful in a war with the Bulgarians, but in 692 he quarrelled with the Caliph Abdalmalik, and the Imperial arms suffered defeat in Cilicia and Cappadocia at the hands of the Saracens.

Leontius reigned three years, and like most of the ephemeral monarchs who ascended the Imperial throne, probably issued coins, though none are known to be extant.³

With regard to the coinage of Justinian II during the period 685–695 it may be noticed that he introduced some interesting types, notably the head of the Saviour (in two forms), which now appears for the first time on the Imperial coinage (Pl. XXXVIII. 15–17).⁴ In one of his coin-legends the Emperor describes himself as Servus Christi; on other coins the word PAX is conspicuous. His mints are Constantinople, Carthage and Syracuse.

There are no coins (at any rate in the British Museum) belonging to the Ravenna mint, though bronze money may well have been struck there, as was certainly the case in one or two later reigns.

But the issue of the great bulk of the gold coinage of Ravenna (distinguishable by its bracteate-like fabric) seems to have ceased with the reign of Heraclius or Constans II.

Coinages of Central and Southern Italy in the 7th, 8th and 9th centuries.

Under Justinian II the coinage of Italian mints differs greatly in style and fabric from that previously issued by the Lombards (in the north of Italy) and by the Imperialist authority at Ravenna.¹ This Italian coinage continues throughout the eighth century and during the ninth till the time of Theophilus and Michael III, i.e. circ. A.D. 842. It consists of solidi and tremisses which, as a rule, reproduce the types of the Imperial coinage of Constantinople, reign by reign. But it may be distinguished from the Constantinopolitan money by the following criteria:—1. The coins are rudely engraved in high relief, and type and legend are very rough to the touch, almost, one might say, as if designed to be fingered by a blind man. They nearly always show some trace of barbarism, especially in the frequent blunders of the inscriptions. 2. The gold is often much alloyed either with silver or with baser metals: some of the coins have the appearance of electrum, others of silver, more or less debased. 3. Various letters and a star are often found in the field of the reverses.

These coins have been much neglected by numismatists, though de Salis, in arranging the British Museum collection, has rendered a useful service in bringing a number of them together under the heading of 'the Italian class'. I have arranged many others in the same way, but the great difficulty is to determine at what mints, and by whom, these pieces were struck. Their general provenance seems to be Italy, Central and Southern, and many bear a remarkable resemblance to the gold coins of the Lombard Duchy of Beneventum.² This ducal coinage of Beneventum on a rare solidus of Marcian, struck circ. A.D. 450. On the rev., the Saviour, wearing the nimbus cruciger, stands blessing the bride and bridegroom, Pulcheria and Marcian; see G. Macdonald, Coin Types, p. 234; Pl. IX. 8, solidus in Hunter Museum; cp. Dressel in Zeit. f. Num., xxi, p. 247 f.

¹ Even before the time of Justinian II there are gold coins, inscribed with the names of Constans II and of Constantine IV, which are not of the 'bracteate' fabric but resemble the Italian coins with the name of Justinian II here referred to.

² On the Beneventum coinage see Keary, Coinages of Western Europe, p. 99; Blanchet, Nouv. manuel de num., II, p. 212; Engel and Serrure, Traité de num., i, pp. 35, 288. The coins of the Principality of Salerno may also be compared, but these do not took its rise under Romoald II, circ. A. D. 698, and consists of imitations of the solidi of Justinian II, whose bust and legends (much blundered) are copied by Romoald and his successors. Grimoald III, the contemporary of Charlemagne, first places his own name on the Beneventine coins instead of the blundered name of Justinian II.¹

The provenance of the Italian coins now under discussion, and their resemblance to the Beneventum coinage, seem to authorize us in describing them as a coinage of Central and Southern Italy. They can hardly have formed part of the Beneventine currency, though another Lombard Duchy, that of Spoleto,² in Central Italy, might be a possible claimant. On the whole, it seems best to regard these coins—or at least certain groups of them—as Imperial issues minted at Rome and in the South Italian possessions of the Empire in the toe and heel of the peninsula. The barbarous style and blundered lettering are difficulties in attributing many of the coins to Rome; on the other hand (as Prof. Oman has pointed out to me) the style of the earliest Papal coins (those of Adrian I, A. D. 772–795; rev. R. M.)³ recalls the style of these Italian gold coins. Probably only a careful study of the provenance of these coins—such as could best be made by an Italian numismatist—will enable us to determine their classification. Meanwhile, I have catalogued all these pieces under the heading Central and Southern Italy, even though they are not demonstrably of Imperial mints; at the same time assigning specifically to Rome those specimens which by their style and from the presence of letters in the field seem to suggest this attribution.⁴

begin till the time of Siconolfus, A. D. 839–849: see Engel and Serrure, i, p. 291 and F. Gaetano, Le Monete delle Zecche di Salerno, Salerno, 1891.

¹ The coins before Grimoald III are assigned to different Dukes according to the letters and symbols found in the field of the coins.

² The earliest pieces hitherto assigned by numismatists to the Duchy of Spoleto are coins of Guido (d. 894): Gneccchi, Bibliogr., p. 368. It may be also remarked that the earliest coins of the Duchy of Naples—another conceivable claimant—are assigned by A. Sambon to the time of Leo III the Isaurian, A. D. 717. They are followed, but probably not till circ. 821, by the money of the later Dukes: Engel and Serrure, Traité, i, p. 293 f. The coins now in question are certainly not of the Lombard Kingdom of North Italy, where coinage inscribed with the kings' names probably begins with Grimoald, A. D. 662, and is continued by his successors of the seventh and eighth centuries. This regal Lombardic coinage is of thin, bracteate-like fabric. On the coinage of Central and Southern Italy, especially in the tenth and eleventh centuries, see J. Gay, L'Italie méridionale, Paris, 1904, p. 587 f. During those centuries there are abundant references in extant documents to the Byzantine solidi (solidi Romanati; soteriki, i.e. with the type of the Saviour; skyphati) as forming a medium of exchange in Italy, side by side with the local silver coins such as the tari of Amalfi. These solidi must have been the ordinary solidi minted at Constantinople, for our Central and Southern Italian class of gold coins does not seem to have been minted subsequently to circ. A. D. 842.

⁴ Some portions of this section are expanded from my article in Corolla numismatica (1906), p. 330 f.

In 698 Leontius, the supplanter of Justinian II, was dethroned and banished to a monastery by the admiral Apsimarus, who, as Emperor, assumed the name of Tiberius (III). During his reign the Imperialists took the offensive against the Saracens, invaded Northern Syria, and were victorious in Cilicia. We have coins of Tiberius III struck at Constantinople, Syracuse, and (in bronze only) at Ravenna.

TIBERIUS III,
APSIMARUS,

A few gold coins may be also, possibly, assigned to Carthage in 698, the year in which that city was finally taken by the Arabs.¹ After this capture, which was followed in a few years (A. D. 709) by the surrender of Septem (Ceuta), the Roman rule, and, with it, the Roman official coinage, ceased to exist in Africa. In spite of this, we find in the reign of Tiberius III, and in many subsequent reigns, till as late as the time of Basil I (died 886), a series of gold and bronze coins which bear Imperial types, and which by their provenance, style and blundered inscriptions seem to proclaim themselves as of African origin, or at least as modelled on coins of the old Carthaginian mint. The coins of this series are generally in high relief and often of alloyed gold (in these respects resembling the Italian coins discussed on p. xxxi), but they have other peculiarities; the heads, for instance, are very stiffly drawn, and the face presents the appearance of a mask. Count de Salis, who partially arranged the series of these coins in the British Museum, has labelled it 'African'. But it seems, on historical grounds, highly improbable that all these coins can have been minted in Africa and exclusively used there. I have therefore catalogued them (whether Imperial or non-Imperial) under the purposely vague title of the 'Provincial Coinage'. It is possible that this coinage may have been in use in Sardinia, while Sicily has, a priori, a still better claim, and there is some little evidence as to the Sicilian provenance of the coins.² Another alternative is that some of the coins may have supplemented the Arab issues in Africa, or have been struck by native tribes who had been previously accustomed to use the Imperial money issued at Carthage.³

Tiberius III was reigning only in fancied security. In 704 the dethroned Justinian managed to escape from Cherson, and in 705, with the aid of the Bulgarian army, made himself master of the Capital where, in the Hippodrome, he put to death the two usurpers, Leontius and Tiberius III, Apsimarus—‘treading’, as it was said in scriptural language, ‘upon the Lion and the Asp.’

Justinian caused his young son Tiberius to be crowned Augustus, and associated him with himself on all the coins struck after his restoration. These coins were struck only at the Constantinople mint. There are no coins of Syracuse or Ravenna. In 705 Syracuse had been attacked by the Arabs and great spoils taken from it: from this time the issue of Sicilian coinage appears to have ceased, unless the ‘Provincial’ coinage just referred to (p. xxxiii) is to be regarded as Sicilian. The Ravenna mint ceased to coin in the reign of Leo III (A. D. 717–741).

Justinian II was put to death in 711 by the Armenian Bardanes, called Philippicus, who had induced the army to revolt and seize Constantinople. The little Tiberius, a child of about six years, was torn from the altar to which he clung for safety and brutally killed. Such was the pathetic end of the last representative of the great House of Heraclius, once the bulwark of the Empire against its Persian and Arab foes.

Philippicus, as Emperor, proved himself a mere man of pleasure, who paid no attention to public affairs. He was dethroned in June, 713, as the result of a conspiracy, and his eyes were put out. On the obverse of his coins Philippicus is represented as holding in addition to the usual globus an eagle-headed sceptre (Pl. XLI. 11). It is tempting to connect the appearance of this sceptre with the story¹ that Philippicus had been banished by Tiberius III because of a dream in which Philippicus was seen with his head overshadowed by an eagle—an omen betokening future sovereignty. But on these coins Philippicus seems to be represented as Consul, this eagle-headed sceptre being a characteristic of the representations of Heraclius, Phocas, and their predecessors in their consular capacity: it is found also on the well-known consular diptychs.

PHILIPPICUS,

The coins of this reign are chiefly of Constantinople, but the solidus (Pl. XLI. 14) described, infra, ii, p. 359, No. 9, is undoubtedly Italian, and was apparently struck at the Roman mint. It must have been issued in the usual course immediately after the accession of the Emperor, for we know that as soon as it was ascertained at Rome that Philippicus was a heretic and a monothelite, there was a violent popular outbreak. The people refused to recognize his acts of sovereignty, and declined to use the solidi bearing his effigy:—*hisdem temporibus cum statuisset populus Romanus nequaquam haeretici Imperatoris nomen, aut chartas, vel figuram solidi suscipere.*² A new Duke of Rome sent by the Exarch on behalf of Philippicus was resisted by the former Duke, Christopher, and expelled from the city.

Anastasius II, the successor of Philippicus, was overthrown in 716, after a short reign, by the soldiers of the Theme Opsikion. As an orthodox Emperor he was welcomed by the people of Rome who had just rejected his predecessor, and his coins were struck at Rome as well as at Constantinople. On the coins, his private name 'Artemius' appears in conjunction with his assumed Imperial name 'Anastasius'.

ANASTASIUS II,
June 713—Jan. 716.

The place of Anastasius was taken by Theodosius III, an obscure commissioner of taxes, of Adramytium in Mysia, who under the stress of a great Saracen onslaught upon the Empire soon abdicated in favour of the distinguished general Leo, who was proclaimed on 25 March, 717.

THEODOSIUS III,
Jan. 716
—25 March 717.

Leo III, generally known in history as the Isaurian, though, as a native of Germanicia in Commagene, he was really a Syrian, was, like Heraclius and Constantine IV, one of the heroic defenders of the Empire and Christendom against the Moslem. From the great siege of Constantinople, which took place in the first year of Leo's reign, A.D. 717–718, the Saracens retired discomfited—with the great army of the Caliph decimated and his armada shattered. 'The date 718 (says Bury) is really oecumenical', and Leo is more important in history than Charles Martel.¹ Under Leo and his House the Empire now begins to acquire that new vigour which, in the ninth and tenth centuries, was to animate its still more expansive life under the dynasty of Basil the Macedonian.

LEO III
the 'Isaurian',
25 March, 717
—18 June, 741.

Leo was a great reformer. He reorganized the army, developed the system of the Themes,² and devoted attention to finance. By the issue of his Ecloga (a legal handbook written in Greek) and of military, agricultural, and maritime codes³ he rendered notable service to his subjects, to whom Roman law and the Latin language had ceased to be intelligible.⁴

The great iconoclastic movement—the centre of interest in this reign and in many succeeding reigns—was inaugurated by Leo III in 726 by

⁴ The coins, however, continue to bear Latin legends.

his decree commanding the total abolition of images, but it concerns us here only in one of its minor manifestations—its influence on the Imperial coin-types. Ever since the time of Tiberius II Constantine, the reverse type of the coins, whenever it was not a mere mark of value (M, K, &c.), had consisted of a representation of the Cross. Towards the close of the seventh century Justinian II made an innovation by introducing two interesting heads of the Saviour, with a cross shown behind the head. Justinian's successor (Tiberius III) once more displayed the cross on his coins, but there can be little doubt that but for the reforming zeal now directed against both iconolatry and mariolatry, the experiment of Justinian II would have been repeated and improved on, and that those figures of the Saviour, of the Virgin, and the Saints, which are common on the later Byzantine coinage would have appeared much earlier and probably in greater variety.

On his coins Leo retained the cross, with the symbolism of which he had no quarrel, for we know that when the great image of Christ was removed from the Palace gateway—to the outrage of a popular feeling which (according to the point of view adopted) we may account either devout or superstitious—he caused a simple cross to be set up in its stead. Under his successor (Constantine V) the coinage becomes more secularized,¹ and the ingenious device is adopted of placing the head of an Imperial personage on each side of the coin, instead of merely placing both the heads on the obverse and a religious device on the reverse. Constantine V is known to have set up in Constantinople many statues, in gold and silver, of himself, some of which, if Nicephorus² is to be trusted, occupied the site of images of the Saviour.

In 720 Leo III had crowned his infant son Constantine V (born 718). De Salis and others have denied the existence of any coins belonging to this joint rule, but certain pieces representing Constantine beardless and Leo bearded seem to have a good claim to fill the lacuna.³ The gold coinage of the Emperor Leo is fairly abundant, but his bronze, and still more the silver⁴ money is now extremely rare and can never have been very plentiful. At Ravenna, only bronze pieces were struck, probably at the beginning of the reign; but the coins that can be assigned to Rome and to the Central and South Italian class are fairly numerous. In what I am obliged to call vaguely the 'Provincial' class, there are solidi obviously modelled on the earlier products of the Carthage mint.

³ Cp. vol. ii, p. 366, No. 8, infra.

Leo died in 741 and was succeeded by his son Constantine V, a good soldier and a vigorous and intelligent statesman, who has too long suffered in the eyes of posterity from being known mainly through the distorting medium of biographers who were his theological opponents.¹ Like his father, he joined eagerly in the iconoclastic movement, with which (in the later part of his reign) he coupled a crusade of his own against monasticism—undertaken probably quite as much on political and social as on religious grounds. He was successful in defending his frontiers, and beat back the Slav, the Saracen, and the Bulgarian. In Italy he fared less well, and the year 751 is memorable for the taking of Ravenna by the Lombards under Aistulf and the overthrow of the Exarchate, which then passed by the donation of the Frank King Pepin to the Pope. In 773 Charlemagne destroyed the kingdom of the Lombards and sided with the Pope, Hadrian I, who was the first successor of St. Peter to strike a coinage independently of the Emperor.

CONSTANTINE V,
COPRONYMUS,
18 June, 741?
—14 Sept. 775

Constantine maintained the finances of the Empire in a flourishing condition,² though we hear much of his brilliant court and costly largesses, and of public works, such as the restoration of the aqueduct of Valens. On both sides of his coins he continues the practice that long subsisted of representing the heads and figures of various members of the Imperial family. His coins retain the head of his father, Leo III, and in A. D. 751 he introduces the head and name of the newly-crowned 'Leo the younger', i. e. Leo IV, his son by Irene, daughter of the Chagan of the Khazars.

At Constantinople, in addition to the gold and silver money, there is a fairly plentiful issue of bronze, most of which is dated in the thirtieth year of his reign = 749/50 A. D. The custom of dating the bronze coinage had fallen into desuetude, and it is doubtful if it was revived in later reigns.³ The coinage of the 'Provincial' class is also abundant, and the bronze coins with the title ΔΕΣΤ[ΟΤΗC] are well struck.⁴ The coinage of RAVENNA had long since dwindled down to the issue of a few bronze pieces, and had apparently come to an end even before the Lombard conquest of A. D. 751. The Imperial coinage struck at ROME, on the other hand, is somewhat important, in spite of the inauguration (already referred to) of a purely Papal currency and of the break between Pope and Emperor, which practically dates from circ. 756. What we have called the Central and South Italian class ceases to be of importance after the death of Constantine V, though Naples and Calabria and Sicily still adhered to the Empire.

The earlier part of the reign of Constantine V was disturbed by the rising of Artavasdes, the son-in-law of Leo III, who seized the capital and assumed the Imperial crown, which he also shared with his son Nicephorus. Both father and son were captured ere long and blinded by Constantine, but the coins figured in Pl. XLV exist as rare memorials of their reign. Fig. 16 is a neatly-engraved solidus of Constantinople, but Figs. 18 and 19 are of the Roman mint, and are closely modelled on the Roman solidi of the previous reign (Leo III jointly with Constantine V). The strange conjunction, in the case of Fig. 18, of Artavasdes with his rival Constantine V is perhaps due to nothing more than the error of an engraver, who more or less mechanically copied the reverse of a solidus of Leo III and Constantine V.¹

Leo IV (nicknamed the Khazar), who had ruled jointly with his father Constantine V since A.D. 751, became sole ruler on Constantine's death in 775. His health was weak, and special measures were taken to secure the succession² to Constantine VI, his son by Irene, the beautiful Athenian. On 24 April, 776, this son, a child of about six, was crowned at Constantinople, the governors of the themes and all classes of the citizens having already sworn allegiance to him. Constantine VI is associated with his father on all the coins issued by Leo IV, and appears on the solidi, e.g. Pl. XLV. 21, as his throne-fellow. The figures are of nearly equal size and height, but the chubby face of the child-Emperor is quaintly contrasted with the father's conventional oval visage and 'beard of formal cut'.

The gold and bronze money of this reign further displays the heads of Leo III and Constantine V, identified by the coin-legends as the 'grandfather' and 'father' of Leo IV.

On the death of Leo IV, 8 Sept. 780, the boy Constantine VI and his mother Irene began their joint reign. The whole soul of Irene was possessed by ambition, but it was the ambition (as Finlay drily remarks) of reigning alone, not of reigning well. It was not, indeed, till 790, when Constantine was about twenty, that he tried to break loose from his mother's control. Irene was then deposed by the soldiers, and her favourites were dismissed, though in Jan. 792 she was again restored by Constantine to her old position.

The rule of Constantine and his mother lasted till 797 when, on Aug. 15, Irene caused her son to be deposed and blinded. She then ruled—the sole occupant of the throne and the last representative of the 'Isaurian' dynasty—for about five years, until in 802 (31 Oct.) she was herself deposed by Nicephorus, her treasurer, and finally died in banishment in Lesbos.

On the coins of the joint reign, the heads of the two rulers are always associated. In the case of the gold coins of her sole reign the Empress adopts the unusual practice of placing her own bust on the reverse as well as on the obverse (Pl. XLVI. 10). She appears in a robe embroidered, like the consular dress of the Emperors, with a lozenge pattern and holds a cruciform sceptre and the globus; but the portrait is highly conventional, and does not materially differ from the portrait of her son. The bronze coins of Irene and, no doubt, some of her gold pieces were probably employed for the ὑπατεία or consular donative which Irene liberally distributed to the people on the Easter Monday (1 April) of 799, the day on which she went in procession from the Church of the Apostles to the palace.¹ This procession, we are told, was carried out with unusual pomp. 'The Roman world (says Gibbon) bowed to the government of a female; and, as she moved through the streets of Constantinople, the reins of four milk-white steeds were held by as many patricians, who marched on foot before the golden chariot of their queen.'

In style and types the coinage of Constantine and Irene follows the stereotyped model of the earlier 'Isaurian' rulers, i. e. it displays only Imperial busts and figures.² Yet a new departure in coin-decoration might well have been expected from Irene, for she reversed the policy of her iconoclastic predecessors, and at the Seventh Oecumenical Council, held (at Nicaea) in 787, the figure of the holy cross and holy images (especially figures of Christ, the Virgin, angels and holy men) were declared to be lawful in stone or any other material, inasmuch as they stimulated those who beheld them to think of the originals.

The annals of the two reigns include disastrous campaigns against the Bulgarians, and the payment to the Arabs of a great tribute of gold pieces to purchase peace for Asia Minor.³ But the most remarkable event of Irene's reign took place on the Christmas Day of 800, when the Pope (Leo III) crowned Charles the Great, King of the Franks, as Roman Emperor. The allegiance of successive Popes to the Imperial throne had

It is probably significant that there are, apparently, no Imperial coins struck at the mint of Rome under Constantine V,¹ the scourge of monks and image-worshippers, nor are any found under Constantine VI and Irene, though (in 785) these rulers were gratefully hailed by the Pope as a new Constantine the Great and a new Helena.

Nicephorus, Irene's successor, reigned alone till Dec. 803, when he crowned his son Stauracius. On the solidi of his sole reign he had restored the cross potent as the reverse type, but the solidi of the joint reign display an Imperial head on each side, after the model of his iconoclastic predecessors. On these latter coins Nicephorus has the title of βασιλεύς, his son being described as δεσπότης.²

The ex-treasurer turned his attention chiefly to finance. He imposed new taxes and tributes but practised a well-judged economy as a set-off to the extravagance of his predecessor. In this reign Haroun-er-Rashid again overran Asia Minor, and was again bought off by an indemnity. But the most interesting political event is the treaty of Nicephorus (A. D. 803) with Charlemagne, defining the limits of the eastern and western Empires. The authority of Charlemagne over Rome, the Exarchate of Ravenna, and the Pentapolis was acknowledged by Nicephorus, while at the same time the western Emperor admitted the supremacy of his eastern 'brother' over the maritime parts of Dalmatia and the south of Italy.

The cessation of the (eastern) Imperial coinage at Rome has already been noticed, but we still find under Nicephorus and in a few subsequent reigns solidi of Italian origin bearing Imperial types. These pieces have a quasi-barbarous appearance, and are of base gold, or electrum, but they presumably represent a currency issued for the use of Byzantine subjects in the south of Italy.³ Nicephorus was killed during a campaign in Bulgaria on 26 July, 811; Stauracius then reigned till October 2, when he was deposed by Michael I, Rhangabe, the husband of his sister Procopia.

² Δεσπότης had already first appeared on the 'Provincial' bronze of Leo III, where it is applied to Leo himself and to his son Constantine V. Again, on the corresponding coins of Constantine V, it is applied to the deceased Emperor Leo III and to the reigning Emperor Constantine V. On the coins of Nicephorus I, δεσπότης has more the sense of 'Prince', 'heir-apparent', and is applied to the Emperor's son, while βασιλεύς is reserved for the father.

³ Cp. p. xxxii, supra.

A few months after his accession Michael crowned his son Theophylactus, who appears with him on the coins. But Michael's incompetent conduct of the Bulgarian war led to the deposition of both father and son, after about two years' rule (813). Michael, although, like Irene, a supporter of the image-worshippers, made no change in the types of the coinage: the head of Christ which Sabatier and others have described as appearing on his solidi clearly belongs to the coinage of Michael III.¹

Leo V, the Armenian, the competent officer who had been chosen by the army to replace the weak Michael I, drove back the Bulgarians when they appeared before Constantinople, and after the death of Krum (815), their formidable ruler, concluded a thirty years' peace with King Omortag.

Leo restored the discipline of the army, purified the civil administration, and enforced a stricter dispensation of justice. But the trimming policy of the 'Chameleon' (as he was called) on the image-controversy pleased nobody, and at last the Council of 815 re-established the Acts of the Council (754) of Constantine V ordering the removal of images and pictures.

Leo's coins are of the usual character, and on nearly all he is associated with his son Constantine. He met his death in his own chapel on Christmas Day, 820, at the hands of conspirators who proclaimed the distinguished general Michael of Amorium his successor, and banished Constantine to a monastery.

Early in his reign Michael II crowned his son Theophilus, and all the known coins appear to have been issued in their joint names.² Michael died a natural death in Oct. 829, but his reign had been marked by many disasters.³ Crete was lost to the Arabs in 826, and held by them till an Eastern Emperor (Nicephorus Phocas) long after (961) recovered it; Sicily, often attacked in the eighth century, was now again invaded by the Arabs (827), who began gradually to settle there, with Palermo as their chief military centre, though the conquest was not completed till 878, in the reign of Basil I.

Theophilus was an iconoclast of a rather violent type, but some sympathy may be felt with his passion for building, and his taste for the acquisition of gems and embroidery, and all the productions of goldsmith and silversmith. The famous golden tree with its (mechanically) roaring lions and its melodious birds was an elaborate toy in which he delighted. More important was his reconstruction and improvement of the sea-walls of the capital, and his pride in this useful undertaking is proclaimed with unexampled frequency by inscriptions on the walls.¹ Theophilus was unfortunate in his wars with the Saracens, and lost Amorium, his family city, to the Caliph Motassem. In this reign the coinage that we have attributed to the South Italian possessions of the Eastern Empire apparently comes to an end. The 'Provincial' coinage ceases in the next reign but one, i.e. under Basil I.

Some space ought here to be devoted to discussing the family history of Theophilus in connexion with the coins. The wife of Theophilus was THEODORA, 'the Paphlagonian', and legend, wearing only, it is to be feared, the mask of history, declares that he chose her (as Paris chose the loveliest goddess) by presenting her—one among many fair competitors—with a golden apple. The marriage (however brought about) probably took place in A.D. 821,² during the lifetime of his father Michael II. There were several children of this union whose names occur on coins in conjunction with Theophilus, and these coins may be classified as follows:—

1. With the head of Theophilus alone.
2. Heads of Theophilus and Theodora and their three daughters (all otherwise known), Thecla, Anna and Anastasia (Pl. XLVIII. 14).³
3. Theophilus in conjunction with a 'Michael' (always bearded) and a 'Constantine' (always beardless).
4. Theophilus and Constantine (the latter, beardless).
5. Theophilus and a beardless 'Michael.'

Of these series, No. 2 (Pl. XLVIII. 14) is, in many ways, the most interesting and important. This coin can hardly have been struck during the lifetime of Michael II (with whom Theophilus was then associated as 'prince'), because Michael II (Emperor) finds no place upon it. The earliest possible date of its issue must therefore be Oct. 829, when Theophilus became Emperor after his father's death. From the fact that only the female household of Theophilus is represented thereon, it may be fairly assumed— as Schlumberger has suggested¹—that at the time when the coin was struck Theophilus and his wife had not been favoured with male offspring. Yet Theophilus had sons. The young Constantine on Nos. 3 and 4 in our list, though often said to be ‘unknown to history’ is evidently the ‘Constantine, son of Theophilus,’ of whom there is a bare mention in the De Cerimoniis.²

² Brooks in B. Z., x (1901), p. 540 f.

³ Mary, another female relation of Theophilus is sometimes supposed (Brooks in B. Z., x, p. 544) to have been his eldest daughter; by others (E. K. in B. Z., xi (1902), p. 256) to have been his sister. She does not figure on the coins. There is also a Pulcheria named as the daughter of Theophilus. She is likewise absent from the coins.

The bearded Michael on No. 3 has been sometimes assumed to be a son (otherwise unknown) of Theophilus. As he is represented bearded, his birth would have to be placed soon after the marriage of Theophilus (A.D. 821). But from our argument about the ‘family’ coin (No. 2), it results that Theophilus had no male children till after circ. 829. This bearded Michael, therefore, was probably not the son of Theophilus, nor do we know that he was his brother. I fall back, then, on the simple hypothesis that he is Michael II, the deceased father of Theophilus, who is placed on the coin (as was the practice under the Isaurian dynasty) in commemoration, and perhaps also to range symmetrically with previous types. It is, indeed, noticeable that this bearded Michael only appears as one of the family group of three, and not alone with Theophilus, as does the young Constantine (No. 4).

The beardless Michael (No. 5) is clearly the well-known son of Theophilus who became Michael III, and earned the unenviable nickname of ‘the Drunkard’. He was born late in his father’s reign (A.D. 839), and was only three when Theophilus died.

The course of events I suppose to have been as follows. At the time of his accession in 829, Theophilus had no sons. For a time he reigned alone, but in a year or two (circ. 832?)³ a son Constantine was born, and was associated in the Empire. This son died, or was displaced, probably in or before 839, when Michael (III) came into existence, Michael being crowned in 840 and associated with Theophilus on the coins.

In the coinage some innovations were made by Theophilus. He restored the cross (now the patriarchal cross) on some specimens, and on the folles, an inscription—in this case ΘΕΟΦΙΛΕ ΔΥΝΟΥΣΤΕ ΣΥ ΝΙΚΑΣ—takes the place of the familiar mark of value Μ.⁴ He also introduces on coins the legend Κύριε βοήθει τῷ σῷ δούλῳ so familiar on Byzantine seals and other monuments.⁵ On some of his coins Theophilus describes himself and his son Constantine as the δούλοι of Christ: Justinian II, on his solidi, had called himself Servus Christi.

Brooks (who cites this passage, u. s.) as to Constantine being sometimes bearded is caused only by a mistake of Sabatier’s: Constantine is always beardless on the coins.

³ Cp. Brooks, loc. cit., p. 544.

At the opening of the reign solidi were issued with the head of Theodora (styled ΘΕΣΡΥΗΑ) on one side, and on the other the little Emperor and his sister Thecla robed as 'Augusta' (Pl. XLIX. 14). On a solidus struck when the Emperor was a few years older, the busts only of Michael and Theodora appear, and the reverse presents the head of the Saviour (Pl. XLIX. 16). The reappearance of this last-named type is clearly due to the action of Theodora, who restored the worship of images, and brought the great controversy to an end by the overthrow of the iconoclasts. The divine image had been first introduced by Justinian II, A.D. 685-695, but was not destined to reappear on the coins till the reign of Michael III. There can be little doubt that it is reproduced from one of the old coins of Justinian II (Pl. XXXVIII. 16), though the encircling legend is somewhat altered. The sacred head is not nimbate, but the cross is seen behind it.¹

In 856 Theodora retired from the regency, and her daughter Thecla and the two daughters Anastasia and Anna, who once figured on a coin of Theophilus (Pl. XLVIII. 14), were at this time, or earlier, banished to a monastery.

Michael himself had grown up dissolute and sottish; he plunged eagerly into the contests of the Hippodrome, and lived on familiar terms with the charioteers: with his boon companions he mimicked the sacred rites of the church and the solemn religious processions.

A noteworthy incident in this reign is the appearance in the Bosphorus of a new enemy, the Russians, who attacked Constantinople (A.D. 860), though they were finally driven off. It has already been stated that the 'Provincial' coinage comes to an end in the ninth century (reign of Basil I), but a mint for several centuries dormant, that of Cherson in the Crimea, now displays some activity. Its coins are all of bronze, and are of very rude workmanship and design. This important commercial centre had been, from the time of Justinian II till the reign of Theophilus, governed by a president, πρωτεύων or πρωτοπολίτης, and a council of senators. Theophilus had in A.D. 833 sent thither a strategos, and an Imperial officer of this name thenceforward ruled there, with the πρωτεύων and senate in subordination.²

The end of the worthless Michael came on 23 Sept. 867 when, 'in the hour of intoxication and sleep,' he was murdered at the instigation of his familiar companion, the grand chamberlain Basil (I), whom he had associated with himself in the Empire since May, 866.

Basil, the groom and horse-tamer, who had risen to be a high court official and co-emperor, was the founder of the great Macedonian dynasty which was destined to rule the Eastern Empire for nearly two centuries. Though not himself a great soldier or a man of culture, he was of acute and vigorous intelligence; he recognized the immense opportunities of his position, and possessed the useful kingly art of choosing his agents wisely. He was a great builder and restorer of churches. He improved the navy; revived in his handbook (the πρόχειρος νόμος), and in the Basilica, planned by himself and completed by Leo VI and Constantine VII, the neglected laws and law-books of Justinian, and—a hardly less useful service—strove to regulate the public expenditure and to lessen the grievous burden of taxation.

BASIL I,

By the fall of Syracuse in 878 Sicily was finally won by the Arabs, but a compensation to the Empire may be said to have been found in the Imperial successes in southern Italy. In 875 Bari had surrendered and became the military centre of the eastern Empire in the west. The Arabs were driven out of Calabria, and the new theme of Longobardia was formed. These successes had, however, no influence on the coinage, and the 'Provincial' issues¹ cease to be struck after this reign, having dwindled down to little more than a currency of bronze. But the appearance is now to be noted at Naples of local coins bearing the name of the Emperor Basil.² The rude bronze of Cherson remained the solitary example of a currency issued beyond the walls of the Capital.

The Constantinopolitan money of Basil I is fairly abundant and neatly executed. Attention was evidently paid to the regular issue of the bronze currency, though cases of restriking occur. On the reverse of the solidus, which Basil must have struck about the time of his coronation, he introduces for the first time the figure of the Saviour enthroned ('Jesus Christus, rex regnantium'), whose head had already appeared on the money of Michael III.³ His sons Constantine, Leo VI, and Alexander, all appear on the coins in association with their father, and there is an interesting solidus (Pl. L. 13) of Basil with Constantine (his son by his first wife Maria) and Eudocia, Basil's second wife. Such family groups were represented in mosaic on the walls of the palace

Wise, who passed as his son, though generally supposed to be the son of Michael III by Eudocia Ingerina, who had been the mistress of Michael before she became the wife of Basil I. Leo's long reign and that of his son Constantine VII, Porphyrogenitus (died 959), carry us onward far into the tenth century. Leo and Constantine were not men of strong character or great rulers, but most scholars feel a kindness for these literary Emperors—punctilious and pedantic though they were—to whom we owe the Tactica,² the De Cerimoniis, and the De administrando Imperio.² The writers themselves, like other encyclopaedic compilers of their age had, no doubt, something more than a literary aim, namely, the desire of rendering the wisdom and experience of the past practically useful to their contemporaries—of producing in fact some κοινωφελὲς ἔργον.⁴

The administration of Leo was lax and incapable, and this Emperor, as Finlay has remarked, typified a bad feature of Conservatism—its 'idle spirit'. In some respects he much resembles 'the British Solomon', James I. If the army, as one may judge from the Tactica, was well organized and well officered, the military history of the reign is a record of disaster. Bari, in South Italy, was lost, at least temporarily, to the Langobards of Beneventum; Thessalonica, the second city of the Empire, was captured by the Saracens (904), and the invasion of Bulgaria, then ruled by a powerful king, Symeon, was unsuccessful. The Islamite pirates of the Aegean still continued a scourge of the Empire. Yet the Empire, as a whole, was not materially affected, and in the east the Empire of the Caliphs was breaking up, just as the Empire of Charles the Great had broken up in the west. The Bulgarians were being converted to Christianity and were settling down. One characteristic feature of the period of the Macedonian dynasty is the growth, in the provinces, of powerful families and their mutual strife, which tended to the weakening of the throne.

Basil I had died, leaving his sceptre to his sons Leo VI and Alexander, who had already been crowned in his reign. Little brotherly love subsisted between them,¹ and Alexander, a mere lover of pleasure without kingly tastes or habitudes, naturally fell into the background. The names of the two brothers are found at times conjoined in lapidary inscriptions as late as A. D. 904, but it has been thought² that after some years Leo practically reigned alone. It does not seem likely, however, that Alexander was ever formally displaced, for he was assigned by Leo as the guardian of his young son Constantine VII, and he himself for a time struck coins as sole ruler (Pl. LII. 1).

Turning to the coinage of Leo's period, we find Leo and Alexander associated only on the bronze money, but we have coins of Leo alone struck in gold, silver, and bronze. Sp. Lambros has supposed that the coins with the name of Leo alone were struck subsequent to A. D. 904, but an examination of the whole series (see infra, p. 448 f.) suggests, though not very strongly, that Leo's 'sole' coins belong to the beginning and middle rather than to the end of his reign. As the predominant partner Leo may have thought it sufficient, as a general rule, to place his sole name on the coinage, and the absence of the name of Alexander need not perhaps necessarily imply that he was not, at least nominally, co-emperor at the time.

Leo's coins follow the model of his predecessor Basil I, but he introduces (Pl. LI. 8) a new and important type—the Virgin MARIA. This type is a bust of the Virgin orans, and it is interesting to compare with it the ivory in the Berlin Museum, whereon the Blessed Virgin is represented as crowning the Emperor Leo.³

In 911 Leo crowned Constantine VII, his son by his fourth wife Zoe, and the young Emperor is portrayed on the solidi then struck—a tall, slim figure, almost equal in height to his father, though he was but six years old (Pl. LI. 9). This is an instructive instance of the conventionality of the coin-types when representing the younger members of the Imperial family.

Leo VI died on 11 May, 912, and was succeeded by his brother Alexander, the guardian of the young Constantine VII. It seems likely that Alexander, during his year's reign, struck coins in all three metals, but the only extant pieces are some rare solidi of Constantinople and rare bronze of the Cherson mint. On these coins the existence of Constantine VII is ignored, and on the solidus Alexander puts himself under the protection of a saint, no doubt his namesake, St. Alexander, who is represented placing the Imperial crown on his head (Pl. LII. 1). This type of a saint, or, more often, the Saviour or the Virgin, bestowing the crown upon Imperial personages becomes sufficiently common on coins and other monuments in later times, and on the solidus of Romanus I, struck circa A. D. 927, we find Romanus crowned by the Saviour (Pl. LIII. 2), as Alexander was by St. Alexander.

We pass on to the long reign of Constantine
CONSTANTINE VII, VII, Porphyrogenitus. For the first six years
PORPHYROGENITUS, after the death of his guardian Alexander, Con-
 6 June, 913 stantine was under the tutelage of his mother
 -15 (?) Nov. 959. Zoe and other regents, and the coins are issued in the name of mother and son.

During the next period, from A. D. 919 to 944, Constantine still remains in the background, and new co-emperors come forward to share his honours. The ruling spirit is Romanus I, Lecapenus (father of Constantine's wife Helena), who was crowned Emperor at the end of 919. Prof. Bury has remarked¹ that Romanus has been unjustly represented as a man of weak character. In foreign politics and war he was successful, and by his important law of 935 he attempted to stop the growth of enormous estates in Asia Minor, and their pernicious absorption of the small agricultural farmers.

In 921 Christopher (died 931), the son of Romanus I, was crowned co-emperor, and in 924 the two younger sons of Romanus, namely Stephen and Constantine, were likewise raised to Imperial rank. We possess coins of all these rulers: on some pieces, Constantine VII takes a secondary position; on others, he does not appear.

Romanus I was deposed by his sons Stephen and Constantine, 16 Dec. 944, but they were themselves shortly afterwards (27 Jan. 945) banished to the island-monastery to which they had consigned their father. 'Old Romanus (to quote Gibbon's version of his authority) met them on the beach with a sarcastic smile, and after a just reproach of their folly and ingratitude, presented his Imperial colleagues with an equal share of his water and vegetable diet.'

Constantine VII was at last independent. For about two months he reigned alone, and at this time doubtless issued the solidus and the numerous bronze coins which show his head bearded (Pl. LIII. 7). It is interesting to observe that nearly all these last-named pieces are struck on the bronze money of Romanus I, which had probably been hastily called in and put out of circulation. In April 945 Constantine crowned his son Romanus II, and placed his head on the coins.

Constantine was among the kings who reign but do not rule; yet his mild manners and the absence of great disasters under his government endeared him to his subjects. As a man of cultivation, as author, painter, architect, connoisseur and patron of the arts, he stands conspicuous among Byzantine emperors.¹ He died in Nov. 959, and was succeeded by Romanus II, the son for whose behoof he had written the De administrando Imperio, very much as Lord Chesterfield wrote his Letters to his son. Romanus, like Philip Stanhope, proved a disappointing pupil.

ROMANUS II,

—15 March, 963.

He grew up indeed handsome and fascinating, but, as Emperor, had only the interests of a man of pleasure. It is strange that we seem to have no coins of his reign² beyond the trivial currency of Cherson. He died at the age of twenty-four, leaving his wife, the beautiful but unscrupulous Theophano, regent for his young sons Basil II and Constantine VIII.³

(widow of Romanus II),
regent, 16 March
—15 Aug. 963.

This regency lasted a few months only, till 16 Aug. 963, when Nicephorus II, Phocas, the most distinguished soldier of his time, became Emperor, and in the following month married Theophano, of whom he was deeply enamoured. The young Emperors, Basil and Constantine, though necessarily kept in the background, were not ousted from their position. On the coins, Nicephorus appears alone, except in the case of the solidus, Pl. LIV. 4, whereon he is represented with Basil II; and this piece we may conjecture to have been struck immediately after his accession, in order to show that he was the guardian, not the supplanter, of the young Emperors. On the solidi with his sole name the bust of Nicephorus is associated with the effigy of the Virgin.

Under Nicephorus II and his great successors, John Zimisce and Basil II, the Empire reached the zenith of its military glory. Already under Romanus II Nicephorus had recovered (A.D. 961) for the Empire the island of Crete, which had been so long the stronghold of the Saracen Corsairs. In 962 he had been victorious over the Saracens in Cilicia, and taken Aleppo from its Emir Sayf-al-dawla, the redoubtable Hamdanid dynast. Further successful campaigns in Cilicia and northern Syria followed later, leading up to the capture in 969 of the great city of Antioch, which was henceforth to remain, almost continuously, in the hands of the Imperialists for more than a century. In 965 the fleet under Niketas had recovered Cyprus from the Saracens.

The great military services of Nicephorus had made him popular at the time of his accession, but his religious policy alienated ecclesiastic and monk,¹ and the imposition of taxation, necessitated by a succession of important campaigns, aroused the discontent of the laity. Cedrenus² and Zonaras³ tell us that he tampered with the coinage, and issued two kinds of νομίσματα (solidi); one, of the usual weight and fineness, in which payment of taxes had to be discharged; another, of diminished weight, which had to be accepted in payments made by the Treasury. The latter coin is stated to have been called τεταρτηρόν or τεταρτερόν. This was probably not its official denomination, but its popular nickname—as if we were to speak of a debased English sovereign as a crown (i. e. five-shilling piece). It is further stated that the Emperor refused acceptance, except at a discount, of the solidi of his predecessors.

Now with respect to the debasement of the coinage, it is important to observe that the extant νομίσματα of Nicephorus are of the usual weight and, so far as is known, of the ordinary fineness. There is thus no evidence to support the statement that the Emperor issued base money. Suspicions to the effect that the solidus was only a quarter of what it purported to be may have been rife among the subjects of Nicephorus at a period when he was unpopular and when—during a time of famine—he, or his brother Leo Phocas, was suspected of buying up corn to sell it at an enhanced price, and the historians may have confounded suspicion with fact.⁴ The whole story of debasement and of the issue of more than one kind of νόμισμα has probably been antedated, for it would be true of some of the successors of Nicephorus.⁵

The end of the great soldier, and stern, ascetic ruler was tragic. On a December night of the year 969, as he slept alone on a tiger's skin spread in a corner of his palace, he was attacked by a band of assassins and murdered. The chief conspirator was another distinguished general, John Zimisce, the Armenian, and the Empress Theophano, who had become his lover, was privy to the act.

Zimisce was at once proclaimed Emperor by his friends, but as the price of his consecration in St. Sophia's he had to promise the Patriarch to repeal the ecclesiastical legislation of his predecessor, and to banish the guilty Theophano. This remarkable soldier, who is described as short of stature but of great bodily strength and beauty, carried on the work of Nicephorus in the East, and his campaigns of 974 and 975 justified his own boast that 'all Phoenicia, Palestine, and Syria were delivered from the tyranny of the Unbelievers and had become obedient to the Romans'. But his great service to the Empire was his complete overthrowing of the Russians who, under Sviatoslav, had invaded Bulgaria, and were threatening Constantinople itself. As a further result of this Bulgarian war (A. D. 970–972), Bulgaria—or, rather, the Eastern kingdom of Bulgaria—was annexed to the Empire, and the Imperial frontier was once more extended to the Danube. The marriage (in 972) of Theophano the younger¹ (daughter of Romanus II and Theophano) to Otto (II), son of the Emperor Otto I, brought the Eastern Empire, in this reign, into intimate relations with the Western.

John had been proclaimed as guardian of the two young co-emperors, Basil II and Constantine VIII (sons of Romanus II), but their names do not appear upon the coinage, though their existence is implied in the inscription (= τοῖς βασιλεῦσι) on the silver coin, No. 7, p. 476, infra. John's gold and silver coins are not now very common, though he gained popularity by his charitable distributions, and by the unusual lavishness of his largesses. He abolished the kapnikon, a hearth-tax that had been instituted by the unpopular Nicephorus I.²

In the choice of types, John, who was known for his piety and for his approval of monasticism, seems to have been influenced by his devotion to the Blessed Virgin. He engraves on his solidi the bust of Mary, who places the crown on his head, while the Manus Dei is stretched over him in blessing. The remarkable silver coin, Pl. LIV. 14,³ which there is good reason for attributing to this Emperor, may have been struck in 972, when he celebrated at Constantinople his triumph after the victories in Bulgaria, and displayed the ikon of the Theotokos that had been captured during the war.

There are no bronze coins bearing John's name or effigy,⁴ and this is true also of his successors until Constantine X Ducas (A. D. 1059) once more issued bronze money with the Imperial name. We have, however, the formal testimony of Scylitzes that John first issued (in A. D. 972) bronze coins with the head of the Saviour and a religious inscription in Latin, and that a similar practice was followed by his successors:—προσέταξε δὲ καὶ ἐν τῷ νομίσματι καὶ ἐν τῷ ὀβολῷ εἰκόνα ἐγγράφεισθαι τοῦ Σωτῆρος, μὴ πρότερον τούτου γενομένου· ἐγράφοντο δὲ καὶ γράμματα ῥωμαῖστί ἐν θατέρῳ μέρει ὧδέ πη διεξιόντα· Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς Βασιλεὺς Βασιλέων. Τοῦτο δὲ καὶ οἱ καθεξῆς ἐτήρησαν βασιλεῖς.¹

There are extant a large number of bronze coins bearing a sacred type and legend as described by Scylitzes (or with similar types and legends), which must undoubtedly be assigned to John and his successors. An attribution of these types to various Emperors has been attempted in this Catalogue,² and is discussed in detail infra, p. 480 f. A clue to the arrangement is afforded by the restriking, and by noting the varying ornamentation of the nimbus of the Saviour.

John died suddenly on 10 Jan. 976, on his return from the East, and Basil II and Constantine VIII (the sons of Romanus II) were now left as joint Emperors. Their busts appear side by side on the gold and silver coins, but Constantine was the faint Imperial shadow of his brother Basil—the ascetic warrior, abrupt of speech, who was feared rather than loved, and indifferent to all the refining influences of art and literature.³ The person of Basil is known to us from a description in Psellus and from the miniature representing him as a soldier in the Venice Psalter.⁴ His portrait on the coins seems conventional, or of little value as a likeness.

In the earlier years of his reign—for we may speak of it as his—Basil was absorbed by the serious rebellions of Bardas Phocas and Bardas Skleros. But in 991 he entered on the task of his life, the subjugation of the Bulgarian nationality in both its eastern and western kingdoms. The great struggle continued under Czar Samuel and his successors, and did not close till 1018, when Basil—'Bulgaroktonos'—celebrated his triumph at Constantinople. By the subjugation of the Slavs and—a more doubtful policy—the annexation of Armenia, the Empire acquired a greater extent of territory than it had possessed since the days of Justinian I, but its greatness culminated with Basil II.

In the Constantinopolitan coinage the only feature of interest is the adoption, probably towards the end of the reign, of a new fabric for the nomisma (Pl. LVI. 4). This fabric is thin and spread, and tends to become concave on the obverse,¹ forming the nummi scyphati so often mentioned in documents of a later age. The concavity appears more distinctly in the following reign; and for a considerable period the fabric of the old nomisma or solidus, thick and of small module, subsists beside the thin and concave fabric of the new nomisma.²

In this reign the coinage of Cherson comes to an end, and the date of its cessation is doubtless the year 989, when the old Greek city—'dernier débris du grand naufrage du monde hellénique'—the intermediary between the trade of Constantinople and Southern Russia, was taken by Vladimir, son of Sviatoslav.³ Cherson was, indeed, restored to the Empire when Vladimir married the sister (Anne) of the two Basileis and embraced Christianity, but there is no indication that its coinage was continued after the Russian capture of the city.

Constantine VIII, left to rule alone by the death of Basil II in Dec. 1025, was an idler⁴ who committed the chief offices of government to his eunuchs. In his expenditure he was lavish, and the gold coins of his three-years' reign are of three different types. He died 11 Nov. 1028, the last male representative of the great Macedonian House. Just before his death he had compelled Romanus Argyrus, a Byzantine noble, to marry his second daughter Zoe,⁵ and Romanus duly succeeded to the throne.

The coinage of Romanus III is not abundant. There are apparently no silver coins, and the nomisma is known only of a single type. This type departs from the model of his predecessor, and the obverse shows the Emperor crowned by the Theotokos (Pl. LVII. 13). The Virgin Mother seems to have been specially invoked as his patron—as she had been by an earlier ruler, John I, Zimisce.

Romanus III, conceived a passion, and whom she now married without a moment's delay. In this reign, the increase of the taxes and their arbitrary collection led to a revolt of the Bulgarians and Servians, and the independence of Servia began now (1040) to be tacitly recognized. An attempt to reconquer Sicily from the Saracens was undertaken by the brave George Maniakes with Normans and Varangians in his army, but was not successful, though Messina was stormed (1038). Michael died 10 Dec. 1041.

Zoe caused to be crowned as Emperor, Michael V (the nephew of Michael IV), her 'son' by adoption. On 18 April, 1042, the adopted son sent Zoe into exile, but as the result of a popular outbreak Michael was deposed and Zoe restored to the throne. The only coin that has any claim to belong to Michael V is that figured in Pl. LVIII. 5, a nomisma showing the Emperor crowned by the Virgin. The Emperor's head may be compared with the portrait of him that appears in the MS. of Zonaras at Modena,¹ representing his face as long and oval with a somewhat long beard and moustache.

For a few months Zoe shared the government with her younger sister Theodora, and though no coins have been identified as of their joint rule, it is not improbable that such pieces were issued. Psellus describes the two Empresses seated side by side on the throne, and states that they made immense largesses to the multitude.² Theodora (according to Psellus) was calm and restrained. Zoe passed rapidly from the transports of joy to the depths of gloom. Zoe was extravagant and lavish, while Theodora husbanded her resources.³ Their portraits appear in the Modena MS. of Zonaras,⁴ and they were represented, conventionally, on the crown of 'Constantine Monomachus' now in the National Museum of Pesth.⁵

On 11 June, 1042, Zoe, who was now sixty-two, took to herself a third husband, the handsome Constantine Monomachus, who was crowned Emperor the next day. Their court was frivolous, not to say scandalous, and the Emperor, who was little interested in military affairs, was prodigal in his expenditure, pleasure-loving and somewhat Bohemian in his tastes. Yet the reign of Constantine IX was fertile in important events, and even the Emperor has his serious side, as evidenced by his encouragement of literary men—among them, the ‘humanist’ Michael Psellus—and by his re-institution of the University of Constantinople. Philosophy and Law were once more to be studied, and the Law (declared the Emperor) was no longer to remain as obscure as an oracle. It was to be hedged round by science, and the professional lawyers were to be recruited only from the students of the University.

CONSTANTINE IX,
MONOMACHUS,
–11 Jan. 1055.

It was in this reign that the great schism of the churches of east and west took place (1054), and it was under Constantine that the permanent settlements of the Normans in Apulia (circ. 1042) and their capture of Otranto (1055) practically crushed the Byzantine power in Southern Italy; while the attacks of the Seljūk Turks began to weaken the structure of the Empire in Asia.¹ Yet, at the time, the future gravity of these attacks could hardly have been foreseen: the prestige of the Eastern Empire was, indeed, still considerable, and Armenia was completely under its control.²

The nomismata that may be assigned to Constantine IX are of no less than five types, and it is important to notice that, until the reign of Alexius I, we have to do with nomismata of two distinct fabrics³: (i) the thick small coins resembling the earlier solidi (Pl. LVIII. 6–8); (ii) coins of the thin, spread concave fabric that had been introduced by Basil II and Constantine VIII (Pl. LVIII. 9–12). The usual weight of (i) is about 62 grains; the weight of (ii) is about 68 grains. The old (flat) nomisma was thus reduced in weight, but the new (scyphate) nomisma retains the original weight (about 68 grains) of the old solidus or nomisma. Both classes seem to belong to the Constantinopolitan mint—though very likely to different officinae—and they probably represent the same denomination. Of course, if Class I (62 grains) passed current as a nomisma, the government was a gainer by its issue. It may be conjectured that one class was more especially used as the currency of widely extended commerce, while the other class chiefly circulated in the capital. A study, if it could be made, of the usual provenance of each of these classes of nomismata would probably throw light on the cause of their contemporaneous issue. The silver coins bear interesting types of the Virgin (Pl. LIX. 3, 4, 5) who, on one denomination, is expressly identified as the Virgin of Blachernae, Η ΒΛΑΧΕΡΝΙΤΙΚΑ. Another silver coin supplies an instance, very rare on coins, of a metrical inscription:—Δέσποινα σώζοις εὐσεβῇ Μονομάχον. This is an iambic trimeter of the kind usually found on the metrical Bullae.¹ A coin of Romanus IV (infra, p. 525) is inscribed with a hexameter line.

² Neumann's Weltstellung, &c., pp. 66, 67 (French trans.).

³ The two nomismata had been first introduced under Basil II and Constantine VIII.

It may be added that the Empress Zoe does not appear on the coins whether alone or in conjunction with her husband. Possibly the position of the beautiful Skleraina—herself created Augusta—may have caused a difficulty, though we know that wife and mistress lived together in the Imperial palace on strange terms of amity.

Constantine IX died on 11 Jan. 1055. Zoe had died in 1050, and her aged sister Theodora—she was now seventy—once more made her appearance upon the Imperial stage, and was proclaimed Empress, even before the dying sovereign had expired.

The Empress took an active part in the administration, but died after a short reign on 31 Aug. 1056, the last representative of the Macedonian House. Her gold coins show her adorned with a profusion of jewellery, and wearing elaborately embroidered robes (see Pl. LX. 1-3, and p. 506, infra, note 1). Her sister Zoe is said to have disdained both jewellery and brocaded dresses.² Theodora's coins are of neat and careful workmanship, particularly the standing figure of the Saviour (Pl. LX. 4-7), which has been supposed to be a reproduction of the image of the Saviour of Chalce (part of the Imperial palace), which stood above the gate.³

Theodora nominated as her successor Michael VI, Stratioticus, once an able soldier, but now old and incapable. The army soon rose against him, and proclaimed as Emperor Isaac Comnenus, a member of the great family of the Comneni who had acquired rich estates in Asia Minor. Michael abdicated on 31 Aug. 1057,⁴ and the next day Isaac was crowned in St. Sophia.

Dumont thinks it may belong to the time of John III, Ducas, Vatatzes, Emperor of Nicaea. The coin was formerly in the Photiades coll. and is described in Photiades Cat., No. 676.

Isaac's energy was directed to financial reform, and to curtailing the expenditure at court. But he was weakened by illness, and near the end of the year 1059 he followed the example of his predecessor and abdicated. Zonaras and Scylitzes record that Isaac caused himself to be represented on his gold coins with a drawn sword in his hand (see this type, Pl. LX. 12), and they take this representation to be an act of vainglory on the part of the Emperor, who thus seemed to ascribe his good fortune in securing his throne not to Providence but to his personal prowess. But Isaac does not seem to have been a man of the stamp of Hybrias the Cretan, and it is probable that these authors are merely echoing the sneers of persons who wished to ridicule the Emperor—disappointed courtiers, for instance, to whom Isaac's reforms were naturally not palatable.¹ For though the representation of an Emperor with a drawn sword was an innovation, it was not a startling one. Constantine IX (died 1055) had already been shown (on his silver coins) holding a sword in its sheath; and on two types of his nomisma Isaac I himself likewise holds his sword ensheathed.² To represent the sword withdrawn from its sheath was, therefore, only to develop slightly a motive already familiar.

On his only known silver coin Isaac used the epithet 'Orthodox', one not found on the coins of other reigns.

Constantine X, the Cappadocian noble who succeeded Isaac I, has been called by Finlay 'an avaricious pedant'. This may be a crude characterization, but it is certain that his policy was anti-military, and that his chief efforts were directed to replenishing the treasury at all hazards. The Senate, the bureaucratic classes, and the clergy who supported the Emperor against the military and land-owning classes, believed, or affected to believe that the age of wars was over. Part of the army was disbanded; pay was lowered, and the upkeep of stores and munition neglected. Yet at no time was a great Imperial army more needed. The gravest danger arose from the Seljūk Turks under Togril-bey and his successor Alp-Arslan. In 1064 the Seljūks had captured Ani, the ancient capital of Armenia, and their numberless raids and invasions laid Asia Minor waste. In 1065 a new enemy, the Uzes, broke into Bulgaria. In 1064 Belgrade had fallen into the hands of the Magyars.

The coinage of this unfortunate and ill-judging ruler is abundant. We may note especially, that in the course of his reign he abolished the 'anonymous' bronze coinage that had subsisted since the time of John I, Zimisceus (supra, p. li), and substituted one with the Imperial name and effigy. The time-honoured practice of using old flans for the bronze currency was not, however, discontinued.

Constantine X died in May, 1067, and for a few months his widow Eudocia carried on the government with two of her sons—Michael VII and Constantine. She struck a nomisma (Pl. LXI. 10) with her own figure (which had already appeared on one of the bronze coins of Constantine X) placed between her two sons.

In December (1067) Eudocia took a husband in the person of Romanus (IV), Diogenes, a Cappadocian noble famed for his valour. But he was as impetuous as brave, and rashly hurried an undisciplined army into the field. He made head against the Seljüks in Armenia, Cappadocia and Syria, but in the fateful battle of Manzikert, in Armenia, the Byzantine army suffered a crushing defeat at their hands (A.D. 1071). The same year is also memorable for the taking of Bari by the Normans under Robert Guiscard, and the ending of the long-lived domination of the Eastern Empire in Italy.

During the three or four years of his reign Romanus issued coins remarkably varied in type. On one of his nomismata he placed his own portrait (alone); on another the portrait of himself and Eudocia in conjunction. A third (Pl. LXI. 11) is a family-coin, showing, on the reverse, the three stepsons of the Emperor (the sons of Constantine X by Eudocia), and on the obverse, a figure of the Saviour crowning the Emperor and his wife. This subject—Christ crowning Romanus IV and Eudocia—is familiar to students of art from the ivory (the cover of an Evangelium) in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris. The ivory is of far higher artistic merit than the coin, as may be discerned from the mild and gracious aspect of the Saviour and the easy action of the arms in blessing, which are extended nearly horizontally and not raised as on the coin.¹

On the coin, the Christ stands on a rectangular footstool or platform which, on the ivory, is itself raised on a basis of omphalic form. On the ivory, the Emperor and Empress are nimbate as well as the Christ. The coin-types are reproduced on a leaden piece (presumably a seal) figured by De Marchant, Mélanges de num., letter iv; Pl.; No. 2, and by Sabatier, Iconographie, Pl. suppl. 24, No. 1.—The motive of the Saviour blessing two Imperial persons is found, in the tenth century, on the ivory plaque of the Musée de Cluny,

On one of the silver coins (Pl. LXII. 2) occurs a beautiful figure of the Blessed Virgin holding (in her left arm) the Infant Jesus. This has been thought to be the Virgin called the Conductress—Η ΟΔΗΓΗΤΡΙΑ—who is familiar from other works of Byzantine art, such as the Spitzer ivory.¹ The legend of this piece forms a hexameter verse:—*Παρθένε σοι πολύαινε δς ἤλπικε πάντα κατορθοῖ.*²

After Manzikert, Romanus IV became the prisoner of Alp-Arslan, and a revolution at Constantinople soon disposed of both Emperor and Empress.

Michael VII, Ducas (the eldest son of Eudocia and Constantine X), was now proclaimed Emperor. His reign was a period of disaster and revolt. The Emperor, a pupil of Michael Psellus, amused himself with rhetoric and verse-making, but was careless of affairs of State. The Seljūk hordes continued to pour into Asia Minor, and the Seljüks of Rûm or Iconium, under Suleiman, now became an independent power. At last, Nicephorus III, Botaniates, one of the pretenders to the throne, was proclaimed Emperor at Constantinople on 24 March, 1078, and Michael retired to the monastery of the Studium.

MICHAEL VII,

The reign of Nicephorus was short and troubled. His expenditure was wasteful, and we know from the testimony of extant coins that he debased the nomisma, which is often struck in alloyed gold or electrum. As to the personal appearance of the Emperor: what purports to be a portrait appears in the MS. of Chrysostom in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris,³ but his portrait on the coins is evidently conventional, and is practically identical with the head of Michael VII as found on coins. Nicephorus, on his silver coins, placed beside his own the bust of his wife, the Empress Maria, the widow of Michael VII, who had represented her on some of his coins.

Three rebellions of this reign (including that of Nicephorus Bryennius) were put down by the aid of the general Alexius Comnenus, nephew of the former Emperor Isaac I, Comnenus; but in the crushing of a fourth rebellion, that of his brother-in-law Nicephorus Melissenus, Alexius refused to take part. This pretender was proclaimed Emperor at Nicaea, and struck a silver coin with his name as δεσπότης (infra, p. 539; Pl. LXIII. 11). But Alexius Comnenus, a much abler rival, was now himself a candidate for empire; on 1 April, 1081, he entered and plundered Constantinople, and Nicephorus III retired to a monastery. Melissenus was given the title of Caesar, but ceased to be of political importance.¹

The accession of Alexius I, Comnenus, a representative of one of the great feudal families, put an end to a period of anarchy and weakness.²

COMNENUS,
-15 Aug. 1118.

During his long reign this able Emperor had to contend against Norman, Patzinak, Turk, and Crusader, yet his organizing skill and his subtle, if unscrupulous, diplomacy constantly stood him in stead. The decadence of the Empire was at least arrested by Alexius, as it was afterwards by his successors John II and Manuel I.

His earlier years, 1081-1085, were occupied with the war in Illyria and Thessaly against the Normans, under the famous Robert Guiscard, Duke of Apulia, but the danger of the Norman invasion passed away with the death of Guiscard in 1085. A struggle with the Seljūk Turks, and with the Patzinaks, who were at last annihilated at the battle of the Leburnion in 1091,³ filled the years 1084-1092. The First Crusade began in 1095. Europe (as Gibbon says) was 'precipitated on Asia', and Constantinople was almost swept away by the impetuous deluge. Alexius with great adroitness avoided a conflict with these hordes of western warriors: he regarded them as mercenaries in his pay, and tried to win their chiefs by costly presents.⁴ Some of the Imperial possessions in Asia Minor were won back by the Crusaders, and the war with the Seljüks, 1110-1117, ended in favour of the Emperor.

One of the great tasks of Alexius was the creation of a navy and the strengthening and reorganization of the military forces, especially in the cavalry arm. Over his army Alexius exercised absolute control, and usually took the command in person. A vast increase in the public expenditure was the result of these military necessities; the subjects of Alexius groaned under the burden of taxation, and endured the numberless losses and vexations brought about by a systematic debasement of the currency.

Alexius was about thirty-three at his accession, and is described as a man of short stature, with broad chest and shoulders. His bust and full-length figure often occur on the coins, but the portrait seems to be conventional. He is represented also on seals¹ and in a MS. of the Vatican.² In the earlier part of his reign he associated with himself Constantine Ducas, the son of Michael VII, Ducas; but Constantine does not appear on the coins, for the pieces assigned by Sabatier (ii, p. 194) to Alexius I and Constantine are doubtless of Alexius III and Saint Constantine. In 1092 Alexius associated his eldest son John (II) in the Empire, and it was no doubt on this occasion that he put forth a nomisma (Pl. LXV. 1) bearing figures of himself, his wife Irene,³ and John. His famous daughter Anna Comnena does not appear on the coins, though her seals are extant.⁴

The coinage of Alexius I presents many varieties of types—the bust, or the full figure, holding the cross, the labarum or a jewelled sceptre. But there is no bold departure in the designs. The interest of his coinage lies in the metals and denominations.

(i) Bronze coinage (Pl. LXV. 9–16), consisting mainly of small pieces of irregular shape and thick fabric. Extant specimens weigh from about 50 to 70 grains. (This is probably the folles.)

(ii) A silver coin (Pl. LXV. 2–6), nearly identical in size and fabric with the bronze just described. The weight of the specimens in the British Museum is about 60 grains; no doubt the miliareasion. There are also flat, thin coins in silver; the British Museum specimen weighs 32 grains.

(iii) Nomisma. This is found in various metals:—

Type 1 in gold.

Type 2 in bronze.

Type 3 in gold and in electrum.

Types 4 and 5 in base silver or billon.

Type 6 in electrum.

Type 7 in gold and in billon.

It is certain that Alexius was reduced to great straits for money. Early in the reign he had recourse to the precious vessels of the churches, and from the doors of one church he stripped the gold and silver plating; he also melted down various public monuments made of bronze.¹ And he was easily led on by the example of his predecessors to the adulteration of the nomisma.

The changing fortunes of the nomisma may here be briefly recapitulated. We have seen that as far back as the tenth century, Nicephorus II, Phocas, was accused, though apparently unjustly, of tampering with this coin. Under Constantine VIII (1025–1028) we find two gold coins, both presumably intended to pass as nomismata though one is inferior in weight to the other. These coins are (α) a scyphate piece (first introduced by Basil II) with the weight of 68–70 grains²; (β) a small thick coin of the weight of 62–63 grains. These two coins continue to be struck down to the reign of Michael VII, Ducas (1071–1078), but after his time the gold coin of 62–63 grains ceases to be issued.

Among the extant nomismata of Michael VII there are some specimens struck in pale gold or electrum, and even in silver and billon.³ Already, therefore, the debasement of the gold nomisma was being attempted. The nomisma-coinage of the next Emperor, Nicephorus III (1078–1081), the predecessor of Alexius I, is particularly shameless, specimens in pure gold being of exceptional occurrence, while the majority of pieces are in electrum or base gold. The part that Alexius himself played can be made out fairly well from the following statement in Zonaras, which we can confront with the testimony of the coins themselves:—

Οὗτος ὁ βασιλεὺς καὶ τὸ νόμισμα κεκιβδηλευμένον παρὰ τῶν πρὸ αὐτοῦ εὐρηκῶς χάλκεον ἔθετο, ᾧ εἰς τὰ τῆς βασιλείας ἐκέχρητο ἀναλώματα, τοὺς δέ γε φόρους διὰ χρυσίνων δοκίμων εἰσέπραττε, πῇ δέ γε καὶ δι' ἐτέρων, χρυσίνων μὲν κάκεινων, ἀλλ' ἡμιχρύσων, ἔστι δ' οὐ καὶ διὰ τῶν χαλκέων ἐδασμοφόρει (Zonaras, Ep., xviii, 22=vol. iii, p. 738, ed. Büttner-Wobst, Bonn⁴).

The changes introduced by Alexius involved not merely the debasement of a single denomination (the nomisma), but the setting up side by side of nomismata of varying intrinsic value. Thus, there was the old gold nomisma, of 68–70 grains, which tended to become electrum; there was the new silver nomisma, which tended to become billon; and finally, the new bronze nomisma. All this produced a hopeless confusion in accounts and furnished fresh opportunities of exaction to the collectors who farmed the

⁴ Büttner-Wobst translates:—‘Hic rex cum solidum a decessoribus suis adulteratum repperisset, aeneum fecit, quo in regni expensis uteretur; in vectigalibus vero probos aureos exigebat, aliquando etiam nummos semiaureos, interdum aeneos.’

taxes. For instance, the collector of the supplementary taxes (the δικέρατον, ἐξάφολλον, &c.) sometimes tried the device of reckoning fractions and small payments as if twelve miliaresia still went (as formerly) to the nomisma. Thus, for a tax of $\frac{1}{2}$ nomisma six miliaresia were demanded, though the nomisma was at this time only worth four¹ miliaresia. The contributory thus paid six miliaresia instead of two, or (in the new money) one whole nomisma + two miliaresia.

In large transactions, as e.g. in his treaty with Bohemund, Prince of Antioch, Alexius agreed that his own payments should be made in 'Michaels',² i.e. in the nomismata coined by Michael VII, thus putting his own money and that of his predecessor hors de combat. A subsidy paid by Alexius to the German Emperor Henry IV was discharged in silver coin, a proof, as Finlay has remarked,³ that Byzantine silver money was formerly not so rare as it now for the most part is.⁴

John II—'Kalojoannes',—who was left by his father's death sole Emperor, has the distinction of being probably the most amiable ruler that ever occupied the Byzantine throne.⁵ His reign was not inglorious, and in fortunate campaigns against the Seljūk Turks he extended the boundary of the Empire east and west. But he neglected to restore the fleet, and the Venetians, who now traded direct with the Christian principalities in Syria, and were rapidly becoming the trading rivals of Constantinople, plundered with impunity Rhodes and other islands and coasts of the Empire. In the end, John was forced to renew the commercial privileges of the Venetians in Constantinople (A.D. 1126).

JOHN II,
COMNENUS,
—8 April, 1143.⁶

The coinage of this reign of nearly twenty-five years is varied, and there are at least seven types of the nomisma.⁷ Two of these types are entirely in billon, and two others are chiefly in electrum. There are three types, however, usually struck in gold, and it would seem that John—

According to Svoronos, νομ. τραχ. is a translation of nummus asper, i.e. a coin fresh from the mint, and rough to the touch because not yet worn smooth by circulation. Ἄσπερος, as applied to coins (especially to the silver of the Emperors of Trebizond), afterwards—it is suggested—meant 'white' or 'silver' money.

while maintaining the electrum and billon nomismata—made an effort to improve on the gold nomisma of his father Alexius I. The Virgin crowning the Emperor is a frequent type, and the figure of a saint—St. George—is introduced (Pl. LXVII. 12¹). The warrior-saint wears a cuirass and sword; his hair is curly and his head nimbate.²

John II was succeeded by his youngest son Manuel I, Comnenus, a man of extraordinary physical endowments; a Samson who could tear a stirrup in two³ and whose lance and buckler not even Raymond 'the Hercules of Antioch' could wield. He was a good soldier, but had more the temper of a knight-errant who loved fighting and adventure for their own sake. He was enamoured of Western civilization and delighted in tournaments. Both of his wives were western princesses, and he married his son Alexius to Agnes, daughter of the French king Louis VII.

MANUEL I, COMNENUS,
—24 Sept. 1180.

Manuel's reign of thirty-seven years was spent in incessant warfare. He invaded Hungary and won the battle of Zeugmin. He repulsed the Normans under Roger of Sicily. He was involved in a naval contest with the Venetians, but had finally to restore their trading privileges, which he had tried to suppress. In his struggle with the Seljûks he failed to re-conquer Asia Minor. If in his dealings with the warriors of the Second Crusade Manuel showed considerable discretion, his general foreign policy was grandiose and Utopian; thus, he sought from Pope Alexander III, who was at enmity with Barbarossa, a union between the Eastern and Western churches, a condition being that he should be crowned Emperor of the West. At the same time he neglected to make radical internal reforms—a heroic task, no doubt—and the opportunity of reform was rapidly passing away.

His coinage is varied and abundant, there being at least eight types of the nomisma in the precious metals, and five types of the nomisma in bronze or a mixture of bronze. There are also at least eight types in the ordinary bronze coinage. Gold is not frequently employed for the nomisma, but only a very pale electrum, which is often hardly distinguishable from silver. According to Nicetas⁴ he coined bad nomismata to deceive the Crusaders. These may, however, have been only the ordinary bronze or billon nomismata of the time, and Manuel of course was not responsible for the first introduction of the nomisma in bronze.

² The curly hair and cuirass—sometimes a tunic—are found on other monuments. The Saint, however, usually stands holding a spear and shield: see Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., i, p. 13; ii, pp. 49, 132, 273; cp. Dalton, Cat. of Early Christian Antiquities, s.v. 'Saints'. St. George is found with spear and shield on the coins of Manuel I (Pl. LXX. 16).

³ So at least says an Arab author.

⁴ i, 5; cp. Ducange, Gloss., s.v. Manlat.

As his predecessor had introduced St. George on the coinage, Manuel introduced St. Theodore and St. Demetrius. The head of the youthful Christ, inscribed 'Emmanuel' (Pl. LXVIII. 15), may perhaps have been chosen as suggesting the name 'Manuel'.

Manuel I was succeeded by his son Alexius II, a boy of thirteen, but in Oct. 1183, Andronicus (I, Comnenus), a cousin of Manuel and grandson of Alexius I, was associated with him as joint ruler. In Sept. 1184, Andronicus put Alexius

ALEXIUS II,
COMNENUS,
—Sept. 1184.

The sole reign of Alexius II lasted about three years, and it would seem probable that even in that anarchic period coins were struck in his name. No extant pieces can, however, be attributed to him with any certainty, for all the coins inscribed 'Alexius' show a bearded head, and we should expect, even amid the conventionalities of Byzantine coinage, that he would be represented as beardless. However, to the single year (1183–1184) during which Alexius II reigned jointly with Andronicus I, some of the coins inscribed with the sole name of 'Andronicus' may possibly belong.

Andronicus Comnenus is one of the most striking, though not one of the most important, figures who occupied the Imperial throne. He has been described as a Byzantine Alcibiades, and he was, indeed, in character, as many-sided as his Athenian prototype. He had the same ambition, the same intellectual gifts and personal charm, combined with an almost equal want of moral stability. Viewed from some aspects, he may be portrayed as a blood-stained tyrant and a traitor to his country. But he appears also as a romantic adventurer at Turkish courts, and even as a prison-hero. He was, no doubt, a profligate, but (as Mr. Finlay puts it) 'a sober and abstemious profligate.' Certainly he had many qualities of a statesman, and in his brief reign, when he was nearly seventy years old, carried through with iron will reforms which, if begun earlier or continued later, might have propped a falling state.

ANDRONICUS I,
COMNENUS,
Oct. 1183–Sept. 1184
(with Alexius II);
Sept. 1184
(alone).

These reforms were chiefly in finance, judicature, and general administration. He lightened the taxes and paid the tax-collectors large salaries, that so they might be less tempted to extortion. He abolished many useless posts that had previously been sold to the highest bidder, and appointed to the judicial bench men of professional knowledge and high character. Like Basil II and other great Emperors, he tried to curb the feudal nobility, whose vast estates had been acquired to the detriment of the small proprietor. His interference with the public spectacles, and his abolition of court-festivities, were likewise excellent in theory, but probably hardly expedient: certainly these measures earned for the reformer immense unpopularity, and the people came to have a peculiar detestation of any aged man who wore the forked and pointed beard that was characteristic of Andronicus.¹

On 12 Sept. 1185 (when Andronicus had reigned alone but one year), a rising of the mob of Constantinople set on the throne Isaac Angelus, a survivor of the great family of the Angeli, which Andronicus had ruthlessly suppressed. Andronicus was not only dethroned, but put to death with refinements in the way of torture and indignity that can hardly be described.

In his coinage, Andronicus had made no innovations. His nomisma is of gold, electrum, and bronze, but seems to be scarce in the two first metals. When Andronicus was dethroned, great stores of gold, silver, and copper, both coined and in bullion, were found in the palace.²

Isaac II, in his love of pleasure, and inattention—amid a luxurious court—to public business, recalls king Charles II, though he had, probably, was brought to naught. Cyprus, also, was lost to the Empire, and the rebel ISAAC, DUCAS COMNENUS, ruled there as 'Emperor' (1184–1191), and issued coins³ until he came into ill-advised collision with Richard the Lion-hearted, who seized the island and gave it to Guy de Lusignan.

ISAAC II, ANGELUS, 12 Sept. 1185 —8 April, 1195.	less natural ability than the English monarch. His reign was signalized by a great rebellion of the Wallachian and Bulgarian peoples between the Haemus and Danube: a new monarchy, the Wallachian, was formed, and the great work of Zimiscees and Basil

The revolt of THEODORE MANKAPHAS (1189 and later), who became master of the country round Philadelphia, and likewise assumed the title of Emperor, requires some mention here, as, according to Nicetas,⁴ he struck silver money with his own effigy. But this coinage has not been identified with certainty.⁵

Isaac II is accused by Nicetas of debasing the currency,⁶ but it must be said that his extant money is not worse than that of his predecessor Andronicus I, the nomisma being in gold, pale electrum, billon, and bronze.⁷

⁷ The archangel Michael appears on his coins (Pl. LXXI. 16) wearing a cuirass and not the long robes in which he is often represented in Byzantine art.

Isaac II was deposed (8 Apr. 1195) by his brother Alexius III, who blinded him and kept him in prison.

Alexius III was another weak Emperor, heedless of public business. At his accession he made a lavish distribution of honours, titles, and money, and was ready (it was said), if requested, to pile Athos upon Olympus. His coinage is abundant and, like that of Isaac II, includes the nomisma in gold, pale electrum, and inferior metals. But the taxation that he authorized was crushing; the army and navy were out of gear; roads, bridges, and aqueducts were left in a ruined state, and in spite of the magnificence and wealth of the capital, the general condition was one of national demoralization.¹

His reign ended on 17 July, 1203, when a great blow fell upon the Empire with the first capture of Constantinople by the Venetians and the warriors of the Fourth Crusade.

The Crusaders brought forth Isaac II from his prison and restored him to the throne in conjunction with his son Alexius IV. No coins are known of this joint reign, which lasted rather more than six months.

A rising in the capital against the Franks was headed by Alexius V, who was crowned 5 Feb. 1204, and stood manfully at his post till the final great storming and capture of Constantinople by the Crusaders on 12 April (1204). A nomisma in bronze (Thomsen Cat., No. 811) and a bronze coin (Sabatier, Pl. 58, 14²) have been assigned to this brief reign, but both attributions are perhaps open to doubt.

The great orgy of plunder—the pillage of shrine and reliquary; the destruction of priceless works of ancient art, was followed by the establishment of the new line of Latin Emperors.³

Yet neither Baldwin, Count of Flanders, nor his successors, who reigned till 1261, appear to have assumed the Imperial right of coinage. The few bronze coins which Sabatier and others have ascribed to these Emperors bear no Imperial name and belong rather (as I have endeavoured to show⁴) to the time of Alexius I and the First Crusade.⁵ M. suggested¹ that the coins current under the Latin Emperors, 1204–1261, were the silver coins of Venice, and that the mints were controlled by Venetians.² This is probable enough when we consider the commercial importance of Venice at Constantinople; the predominating part that she played in diverting the Fourth Crusade to the capture of the Capital, and the large share that she enjoyed from the spoils of the divided Empire (Crete, the Aegean Islands, &c.)

The Empire was now split up into a number of feudal principalities, and into the so-called 'Empires' of Nicaea (1204–1261), Thessalonica (1223–1234), and Trebizond (1204–1462). The coins issued by these 'Emperors' are of the familiar Byzantine types and fabric,³ but as the description of them lies beyond the scope of these volumes, we must again take up the story of the Empire in the year 1261, when Michael VIII, Palaeologus, the last Emperor of Nicaea, ousted Baldwin II, the last Latin Emperor, and himself reigned at Constantinople as monarch of the restored Eastern Empire.

Michael VIII, the first of the dynasty of the Palaeologi, was crowned on 15 Aug. 1261. He ruled over a shrunken Empire, shorn of its ancient glories, and was the last Emperor of any conspicuous political and military ability. Under the Palaeologi, Constantinople, though no longer—in face of Italian competition—the commercial emporium of the world, still remained a centre of artistic and intellectual culture, but the two centuries of their rule are marked by the decadence of the Empire as a whole.⁴

and crowned by the Saviour. The reverse type is still more original, and represents (as Pachymeres has recorded) the city of Constantinople. The representation is conventional, and consists of the encircling walls, flanked by towers arranged in groups of three. Only the inner wall, the main bulwark (τὸ μέγα τεῖχος) of the city, is reproduced. The outer wall (τὸ ἕξω τεῖχος), which was separated from the inner by a moat, and flanked by towers of lesser height, has not been indicated by the engraver.¹ In the centre is a figure of the Virgin orans. It is conceivable that the idea of this type may have occurred to the Emperor when, just before his coronation, he entered Constantinople through the Golden Gate with the image of the Virgin Hodegetria borne before him, or when his attention was directed—as it soon was—to the restoration of the walls of the city guarded by God or by the Mother of God.

Pachymeres² states that he debased the coinage more than his predecessors, but an analysis has shown that some (at any rate) of his gold pieces are not inferior in fineness to the gold coinage of an earlier thirteenth-century ruler, Theodore II, Lascaris, of Nicaea, which are '16 carats fine and 8 alloy'.³ Some extant specimens, however (see, e.g., Michael VIII, infra, No. 3), have a brownish colour, which suggests the presence of a considerable alloy of copper.

Michael VIII was succeeded by his son Andronicus II, who had already been joint ruler (from A.D. 1273?), and had probably issued bronze coins (see infra, p. 613, note) in conjunction with his father.

ANDRONICUS II,

–24 May, 1328.

The long reign of Andronicus II lasted till 1328, and witnessed the rising power of the Ottoman Turks under Othman, and the incursion of the Grand Company of the Catalans who, if they drove off the Seljüks, made conquests on their own behalf and to the Empire's detriment. Moreover, from 1321 till 1325, a civil war went on between Andronicus II and his grandson Andronicus III.

The coinage may be divided into four Periods. In Period I, A.D. 1282–1295, Andronicus II ruled alone. He struck gold nomismata, much alloyed, generally it would seem with copper.⁴ On these he retains as the reverse type the View of Constantinople, and with some appropriateness, because he himself afterwards undertook (in 1317) a general repair of the fortifications of the Capital. On the obverse, the Emperor appears prostrate before the Saviour (Pl. LXXIV. 10–12), and this figure of Andronicus recalls the figure of an Emperor (before the enthroned Saviour) in a well-known mosaic of St. Sophia.¹

In Period II, 1295–1320, Andronicus II is associated on the coins—as he was in the Empire—with his son Michael IX. On the gold nomisma (Pl. LXXV. 2) Christ is seen in the act of blessing or crowning the joint rulers.² We note at this time, or a little later, traces of Western influence on the coinage. The silver coin is in fabric and type a servile copy of the Venetian grosso or matapan (Pl. LXXV. 17), and some of the bronze coins have a Western look due to the adoption of the circular inscription and the type of the cross pattée or potent with pellets in its angles (Pl. LXXV. 16).

The coinage of Period III, Oct. 1320–1325, is not easily to be identified. On the death of Michael IX in 1320, Andronicus II was again left sole Emperor. Some of the coins assigned to Period I may perhaps, therefore, belong to this later period of his solitary rule. There is, again, the possibility that his grandson Andronicus III—though not actually crowned Emperor till Feb. 1325—may have been associated with Andronicus II during this period; and, on this hypothesis—not, however, a very likely one—some of the coins assigned to Period IV would belong to Period III.

In Period IV, 1325–1328, Andronicus II and Andronicus III are associated as Emperors. The coins that have been assigned to them usually bear—perhaps purposely—the rather vague inscription AVTOKPATOPEC ΠΩΜΑΙΩΝ.

In May, 1341, on the abdication of Andronicus II, Andronicus III became sole ruler. His coinage is scanty, and no gold coins appear to have been struck.³ It was in this reign that Orkhan, the son of Othman, captured Nicomedia and Nicaea, and completed the Turkish conquest of Bithynia.

Andronicus III was succeeded by his son John V, Palaeologus, a boy of nine. His long reign brings us near to the end of the fourteenth century, and is marked at every stage by loss of territory and financial distress. The real Emperor⁴ of the early part of this period was the Servian monarch Stephen Dushan who styled himself 'Car and Autokrator of the Servians and Greeks, the Bulgarians and Albanians'. Later, the Sultan Murad I, the successor of Orkhan, extends the Turkish borders to the Balkans, and John V becomes his vassal.

The dynastic troubles and changes of this period are likewise manifold. At the very outset of John's reign he was opposed by a rival Emperor in the person of John VI, Cantacuzenus, the Grand Domesticus, now chiefly interesting to us as an historian, and for the part that he played in hastening the invasion of the Turks.¹ After a long civil war, John VI was formally acknowledged Emperor in 1347, but abdicated in 1354.

JOHN VI, CANTACUZENUS,

(re-crowned Feb.
1347)—Dec. 1354.

Other Imperial figures flit across the scene. MATTHEW, the son of John VI, was made joint Emperor with his father in 1353. MANUEL II (see further, infra), the second son of John V, was crowned joint Emperor in 1373. ANDRONICUS IV, the eldest son of John V, temporarily ousted his father from the throne in 1376, and ruled as Emperor.

ANDRONICUS IV,
18 Oct. 1376—1379.

It is disappointing to find the coinage of this whole period so scanty. The unearthing of a hoard, or a more careful examination of the very obscure coinage of the Palaeologi, may modify our views, but at present it would seem that there was no issue of gold money from 1341 to 1391, while even some of the coinages attributed by Sabatier and other numismatists to John V may perhaps have to be withdrawn; for instance, the bronze and silver pieces inscribed ΠΟΛΙΤΙΚΟΝ (p. 632, infra) seem to be rather tickets than coins.

Coins of the reign of JOHN V.

There are no coins that can be readily attributed to John VI or to his son Matthew, though there are some pieces that may be assigned, if not without hesitation, to Manuel II (in conjunction with his father, John V), and to the rebellious son, Andronicus IV.

The known straits of the Imperial Treasury, and the shabby make-shifts of a court where (as at the coronation in 1347) gilded leather took the place of gold, and glass of precious stones,² seem to find expression in the mean currency of the period. It may well be suspected that throughout this long reign of John V the Imperial mints almost ceased to be operative, and that the currency of the dwindling Empire was mainly furnished by the abundant issues of Venice and Genoa, its great and intrusive rivals.³

³ Cp. Diehl, Ét. byz., p. 240 f., 'La colonie vénitienne à Constantinople à la fin du XIV^e siècle.'

A serious effort to restore the Imperial coinage was evidently made by John V's son and successor, Manuel II, an able, magnanimous and accomplished man, worthy of a wider Empire than one that had shrunk almost to Constantinople, Thessalonica, and a province of Peloponnesus. He restored the gold nomisma, retaining the familiar type of the View of Constantinople, but this coin is now, from whatever cause, extremely scarce, and the bulk of Manuel's extant currency consists of silver pieces which must have been issued in considerable quantities. There are three or four denominations of the silver, the highest of which, judging by the similar coins of Manuel's successors, was intended to weigh about 135 grains.¹

In his struggle with the Turks, Manuel sought aid from the West, and is now, as then, an interesting figure to Frenchmen and Englishmen.

JOHN VII,
(with MANUEL II).

In 1400 he was in London, the guest of King Henry IV. During his absence (till 1402) his nephew John VII was regent and co-emperor, and John is probably the Emperor who figures on a bronze coin of Manuel II (infra, p. 639). The Turkish pressure on the Empire was at last relieved by the invasion of Timūr, the famous Khan of the Mongols who, in the great battle of Angora, A.D. 1402, defeated Sultan Bayezid, and for a time annihilated the Ottoman power. The Empire had thus a breathing space till 1422, when the Turks—with renewed hostility—laid siege to Constantinople. In the following year Manuel, stricken by apoplexy, retired to a monastery, to die two years later.

Manuel's son John VIII continued the silver coinage on his father's model. It is now not uncommon, but no gold money is known.² John's long reign was passed in peace, but in ignoble peace as a vassal of the Turks. In 1423 his brother, the governor of Thessalonica, sold this city to the Venetians, and seven years later it was annexed by the Turks. John's efforts on behalf of the Empire were chiefly confined to the restoration of the walls of the Capital, and to seeking aid from the Pope against the Unbeliever. In 1438 he attended the Council of Ferrara (a Council continued at Florence), and as the price of such assistance as the Pope afforded him agreed to the union of the Eastern Church with the Church of Rome. It was doubtless in 1438 and at Ferrara that Vittore Pisano made the wax model that he utilized for his well-known medal of the Eastern Emperor.³ Pisano's medal (see Frontispiece to

vol. ii of this work) shows the Emperor's head in profile, wearing a tall, helmet-like head-dress, with a jewelled apex and a great brim of strange device. And it is interesting to compare this portrait by the first and greatest of the Renaissance medallists with the portrait produced by the latest of the Byzantine mint-engravers, who had inherited traditions reaching back to Constantine and even to Augustus (Pl. LXXVII. 7-13). The coin-portrait of John may, perhaps, be set aside by some numismatists as purely conventional, since it closely resembles that of his aged father, Manuel II. But this resemblance may be due to a family likeness, and I think we may discern on the coin some attempt at reproducing the mild, grave, insouciant expression of Palaeologus, which is rendered with such artistic delicacy on the medal.¹

Of Constantine XI, John VIII's brother and successor, no coins have been identified.² It is hard to believe that he struck no money. If his coronation, through taking place at Sparta, did not involve the customary largesses, his subsequent entry into Constantinople must have done so, and coins must have been needed even in the few troubled years that followed. On 29 May the cannon of the Turks made its fatal breach in the walls, and the enemy poured into the city over the dead bodies of the Emperor and his gallant companions. The next day the Sultan⁴ entered Constantinople, and the dome of St. Sophia rang with the cry 'Mohammad is the prophet of God.'⁵

The great edifice of Empire had long been tottering, yet even to the student who has attentively observed the leading features of its history, art and coinage, the fall seems to come with suddenness. A familiar landmark of the world's history is removed; and the glory of Byzantium fades almost like the 'insubstantial pageant' of the magician.

§ 3. DENOMINATIONS AND WEIGHTS.

At all periods the coinage in gold was of the first importance, and extant specimens in this metal are very common. Coins in silver, on the other hand, are now rare, though they were probably fairly abundant in antiquity (cp. p. lxiii, supra). The bronze coinage was entirely re-organized by Anastasius I in 498, and under his successors, till about the time of Constantine IV, formed no unimportant part of the state-currency.

GOLD.

The chief coin is the solidus or, as usually named in Byzantine authors, the nomisma.¹ The weight of this coin varied but little through the long period of its existence. It is always (when struck at the Capital) of more than 60 grains, and the heaviest extant specimens usually weigh from 68 to 70 grains.² The fineness of the Constantinopolitan nomisma—so far at least as the eye can discern, and in the absence of a systematic series of analyses—is well maintained almost till the reign of Michael VII (A. D. 1071), when the nomisma tends to become an electrum coin. Somewhat later, under Alexius I, the nomisma (as explained supra, p. lxi) was issued in several different metals simultaneously, but there was evidently an attempt made to preserve at least one type of it unalloyed. The wide European circulation of the 'bezants' (nomismata) was probably one reason why the standard of fineness was protected from a more rapid deterioration.

¹ I am not able here to enter into a detailed account of the varying names, or nicknames, borne by the solidus and other Byzantine coins at different periods (Romanati; Michalati, &c.). This subject would alone require a little treatise to itself. Some material may be found in Du Cange's Dissertation on Byzantine Coins; in an article in Revue archéol., 1876, xxxii, p. 283; in Svoronos, Journ. d'arch. num., ii, p. 345, &c.; A. Engel, Recherches sur la numismatique . . . des Normands de Sicile et d'Italie, Paris, 1882, pp. 72-75 (nummi schifati; besantii; Romanati, &c.); Diehl, Études byz., p. 249 (hyperpre; cp. Svoronos, op. cit., ii, pp. 362, 345 n., ὑπερπυρον νόμισμα = the solidus; Schlumberger, Principautés Franques du Levant, p. 7; Kubitschek in Num. Zeitschrift, xxix, 1897 (1898), p. 163 f., on the solidus, &c., in Egypt). For the world-wide use of the solidus in the time of Justinian I there is the testimony of Kosmas Indicopleustes, cited by Mommsen, Gesch. des röm. Münzwesens, p. 817.—On the 'bezant' as money of account in Cyprus and on the bisante bianco of Cyprus (the last-named not an Imperial Byzantine coin), see N. Papadopoli, Le Monete di Venezia, ii, p. 484.—On the name 'bezant' applied (twelfth and thirteenth centuries) to Arab gold coins (dinars), see P. Casanova in Rev. num., 1897, p. 535.

From the time of Anastasius I till the period of Constantine V, the solidus is accompanied by two small divisions, the half (semissis) and the third (tremissis). After the last-named reign these divisions were not issued with the same regularity, and in the tenth century they entirely disappear.

SEMISSIS AND TREMISSIS.

The semissis always exceeds 30 grains, and the tremissis 20 grains. The usual weight of the semissis may be stated as from 34 to 35 grains, and the weight of the tremissis as from 22 to 23 grains.¹ The weights of these divisions point to a solidus of about 70 grains.

In the reign of Basil II and Constantine VIII, i. e. about the beginning of the eleventh century, we find (as already noted, p. liii) the curious phenomenon of a heavy and light nomisma side by side. The light coin bears a general resemblance to the old solidus in fabric, but weighs, at the most, only 63 grains.² The heavy coin is of a novel (cup-shaped) fabric, but maintains the weight of the familiar solidus—68 to 69 grains.

LIGHT AND HEAVY NOMISMA.

The light nomisma disappeared under Alexius I (circ. A. D. 1081) or under his predecessor, leaving the heavier scyphate coin in possession of the field. The curious scyphate form has never been satisfactorily explained, and is usually supposed to have been adopted for some mechanical convenience in striking. Yet we find that flat coins (in bronze and silver) of the usual fabric continue to be struck at the same time as the scyphate pieces, and I would suggest that the original reason for the adoption of this peculiar fabric was simply in order to distinguish the heavy from the light nomisma. It would be thus a device of the kind that we sometimes find in modern coinages when a nickel coin is issued with a hole in its centre, in order that it may be readily distinguished from any contemporary silver coins which it resembles in size and colour.

SILVER.

The silver coinage, on account of its comparative rarity, cannot be thoroughly studied until something like a Corpus of extant specimens is available; it may be useful, meanwhile, to set forth in detail the weights of representative coins, mainly those in the British Museum.

SILVER.

² This weight occurs under Michael VII. The usual weight is 62 grains, a little more or less.

The chief mint is Constantinople. Carthage, Ravenna, and Rome also coin in this metal, but their issues, as a rule, consist only of pieces of the lowest denominations. The principal coin, till the time of Heraclius, was the miliaresion (miliarense), which had been introduced by Constantine the Great, and which, after being struck in succeeding reigns, continued to be issued by Anastasius I and his immediate successors. Its normal weight approaches 4.55 grammes, i. e. over 70 grains Troy.¹

In the following lists the weights (unless otherwise stated) are in Troy grains.

Of the four following reigns there are (at least in the British Museum) only coins of small denominations, as follows:—

JUSTIN II. 16 (Constantinople mint); 18.4 (Carthage mint).

HERACLIUS. Under Heraclius, in A. D. 615, a new silver coin, the hexagram, is issued (cp. p. 195, n., infra). This coin generally weighs more than 100 grains: the highest weight in the British Museum is 105.3. Its issue is continued in the three following reigns, and under Heraclius it was coined at Ravenna as well as at Constantinople. Also, coins weighing 10.5, 11.6, 12.7 (worn) all of Carthage; 7 Ravenna.

CONSTANTINE V. The hexagram having ceased to be coined, Constantine V (A. D. 741-775) inaugurated a silver piece characterized by its thin, flat fabric, and by a reverse 'type' consisting entirely of an inscription. This coin was minted in most succeeding reigns, and remained, practically, the sole representative of Byzantine silver currency till the reign of Alexius I. Extant specimens, which are often fairly common, vary a good deal in weight: the coin often attains more than 40 grains, and sometimes reaches 50 grains.

An exceptional specimen (ii, p. 487, note 1, infra) weighs nearly 67 grains, and would seem to belong to a special denomination.—(Constantine VIII, alone, Romanus III, Michael IV and V. No silver coins in British Museum.)

CONSTANTINE IX. 23 grains. Nos. 16 and 17, p. 502, infra, are of another module and fabric. They weigh 32.4 and 37 grains respectively, and must originally have weighed more.

THEODORA. About 19 grains (pierced: Paris Coll.).—MICHAEL VI. (No silver in Brit. Mus.).—ISAAC I. 1 gram. 38 (= over 21 grains), Paris.—CONSTANTINE X. 19.5 grains (pierced; Brit. Mus.); 24 grains (pierced; Paris).—ROMANUS IV. With rev. Bust of Virgin, 11.3 (broken and pierced); with rev. Virgin and Child, inscr., ΠΑΡΘΕΝΕ COI &c., 41.8.

MICHAEL VIII. Obv. Two busts; rev. Inscr., 34.3. Rev. Virgin standing, 38.3 (pierced). Obv. Christ seated. Rev. Inscr. 16.7 (worn). Obv. Bust of Virgin. Rev. Inscr. 20.7.

NICEPHORUS III. Rev. Inscr. 18 grains (Berlin Mus.).

ALEXIUS I (A. D. 1081-1118), who made changes in the nomisma, introduced a new silver coinage. Though, like his predecessors, he issues a thin coin with the reverse consisting of an inscription (a specimen in Brit. Mus. weighs 32 grains), his silver money consists mainly of thick pieces of small module which are usually of the same fabric and general appearance as his bronze coinage. The types employed are numerous, but the denomination throughout is the same, as follows:—

Obv. Emperor standing.	Rev. Christ standing. 60.3.
Obv. Emperor standing.	Rev. Christ seated. 58.
Obv. Bust of Emperor.	Rev. Christ seated. 57.2.
Obv. Bust of Emperor.	Rev. Bust of Christ. 50.6.
Obv. Bust of Emperor.	Rev. Bust of Virgin. 54.8.

(John II, Manuel I, Andronicus I, Isaac II. No silver coins in Brit. Mus.).

ALEXIUS III strikes a coin of the old thin fabric with rev. Inscription. A worn specimen in Brit. Mus. weighs 16.3 grains.—(MICHAEL VIII. No silver in Brit. Mus.: Photiades Cat., No. 573, describes a silver coin.)

Under ANDRONICUS II and MICHAEL IX (A.D. 1295–1320) a serious attempt was made to restore the silver currency, and a model was found in the grosso (or matapan), the neatly struck silver coin of the Venetians. Coins (in the British Museum) struck on this model weigh as follows:—ANDRONICUS II and MICHAEL IX, 31.1. (There is also a lower denomination, rev. Cross radiate and circular inser., weighing 20.)—ANDRONICUS II and III, 32.4, 32.3, 31; ANDRONICUS III, 33.6.

JOHN V. Rev. Bust of Christ, 15.4 (pierced and worn).—(JOHN VI. No coins known.)—ANDRONICUS IV. Small silver or billon, 13.2, 10.6.

Under MANUEL II (A.D. 1391–1423) there is again a reform in the silver coinage, and specimens in this metal are still comparatively abundant. Manuel had re-introduced the gold nomisma, but it does not seem to have been an important element in the currency of the time. The weights of the silver coins in the Brit. Mus. are as follows:—

Size .95. Wt. 111.5 (broken).

Sizes .8–.7. Wt. 54.4, 54.6, 55.2, 56.5, 55.8.

Size .6. Wt. 14.2 (broken), 11.3, 8.

Of JOHN VIII (A.D. 1423–1448) no gold coins are known. His silver is of the same character as that of Manuel II, as follows:—

Sizes 1.1–1.05. Wt. 132, 133.8, 129.

Sizes .8–.7. Wt. 53, 45.6.

Sizes .65–.6. Wt. 17.2, 12.5 clipped.

(CONSTANTINE XI, no coins known.)

BRONZE.

The bronze coinage introduced by Anastasius I remained the model of the Imperial currency till about the time of Constantine IV (died 685).

BRONZE COINAGE.

It bore marks of value, an indication of the mint and officina, and (from the twelfth year of Justinian I) the date of issue. The weights of extant specimens vary very greatly, even in the case of coins that bear identical marks of value, yet, when due allowance is made for the exceptional wear and tear which Byzantine bronze coins seem to have undergone, it becomes clear that the weight of the original flans was adjusted with considerable care.

The chief denominations are marked M (the follis), K, I, Є, being pieces of 40, 20, 10, and 5 nummia. These pieces are mainly struck at Constantinople, at the Asiatic mints (Cyzicus and Nicomedia), and at Antioch and Carthage. Thessalonica has, to a great extent, denominations of its own. At Alexandria, the usual denomination is IB, i.e. 12 nummia.

ANASTASIUS I. The coins marked M, K, I, are struck in two main series: (i) of large module; (ii) of small module. The coins of small module are always lighter than those of the large size, no attempt being made to add to their weight by increasing their thickness. We are thus in presence of a heavy and a light coinage, the latter being about half the weight of the former. This system appears to have been partially continued by Justin I, but not by his successors.

JUSTINIAN II—LEO III. The coinage inaugurated by Anastasius I, disappeared, after many vicissitudes, under Constantine IV. The bronze currency is now represented by a small follis, marked M, without date; even this coin seems almost to be absent (till the time of Constantine V) from Constantinople, and to be struck only at the less important mints. (Justinian II. M at Carthage and in Sicily, wt. under 100 grains. Tiberius III. M at Ravenna, wt. 77.6.)

CONSTANTINE V (A. D. 741-775). M The follis (now bearing on the reverse a type in addition to the mark of value M) is re-introduced at Constantinople. There is a heavy coinage of this denomination with a maximum weight of about 181 grains, and a light coinage weighing from 80 to 40 or less. The 'Provincial' coins (cp. p. xxxiii, supra), which bear no mark of value, weigh from about 40 to 56 grs.

The coins, at all periods, consist mainly of copper with an alloy of tin and zinc, and often of lead. Some analyses recorded by Bibra and by Sabatier are brought together by J. Hammer in his article, 'Der Feingehalt der griech. u. röm. Münzen', in Zeit. für Num., 1907, pp. 140, 141.

§ 4. TYPES, ART, AND PORTRAITURE.

Although most of the interesting types found on Byzantine money have been already referred to as they made their appearance in the reigns noticed in our historical summary (§ 2), it may be convenient here to take a more general survey of the coinage as a whole, with especial reference to its types, art, and portraiture.

Byzantine coinage, as regards type, fabric, and mechanical execution, may be said to have its roots deep in the past. Thus, the gold coins of Anastasius I (A.D. 491–518), the first Evolution of Byzantine Coinage.

Emperor dealt with in these volumes, are simple reproductions of those of his predecessor Zeno. Zeno followed the traditions of Arcadius (A.D. 395), the ruler of the Eastern division of the Roman Empire. Arcadius went back to Constantine, and the coinage of Constantine, though in some respects an innovation, can yet be shown to be evolved from that of Augustus, as the money of Augustus can be traced—by a circuitous course—to the model furnished by the portrait-coins of the Greek successors of Alexander.

The Byzantine coinage, therefore, in its choice of types follows the custom of earlier kings and Emperors, that is to say, its types are in the main either Imperial (such as busts or figures of the Emperor and his family), or religious, in the latter case the deities of the classic pantheon being replaced by sacred emblems, by the Saviour and the Virgin, and, in the later periods, by the Saints.

of the types.

Secular types, apart from those of strictly Imperial import, can hardly be said to exist. If the coins of Anastasius and of many of his successors display the conventional figure of Victory, it is yet a Victory whose sceptre is surmounted by the cross or the sacred monogram (Pl. I. 1; Pl. IV. 9); if Michael VIII introduces a topographical type—a view of Constantinople—he at the same time represents its patron and protectress the Blessed Virgin (Pl. LXXIV. 1, 2). Justin II represents the City, or the City-Tyche ‘Constantinople’ (Pl. XI. 1), but she holds the cross-surmounted orb, and even this type is said to have been objected to as pagan, and it was at any rate removed by his successor to make way for the cross.¹

An exception to the prevailing character of Byzantine coin-types may seem to be found in the great bronze currency instituted by Anastasius I, the chief feature of which is the bold indication, on the reverse, of the value of the coin (M; K, &c.): even here, however, the cross is usually present, though in a subordinate position.

Coinage, whether in the ancient or modern world, has rarely—except in the case of the Greeks—reached the level of fine art, if by fine art we understand (with Ruskin) a product to which the hand, the brain, and the heart have simultaneously contributed. The Byzantine currency as a whole cannot certainly be reckoned among the artistic coinages of the world, yet a close examination of it suggests that it has been (from the artistic standpoint) unduly depreciated.² In execution it is often, indeed, either careless or unskilful, and in the choice of types limited in range, yet it is not hard to find individual specimens which have some of the charm of art, and in most periods it may be said to display, if not artistic quality, yet at any rate a certain numismatic propriety. I would instance the typical Byzantine bronze coins where the reverse consists of a large letter, or rather, numeral, which forms a bold and not undecorative device.³ Such a reverse cannot fairly be compared with reverses that attempt a figure-subject, but, given the commercial necessity of clearly marking each coin with its value, the Byzantine engraver has done well. The same sort of propriety may be found also in those reverses which merely consist of an inscription—in the bold letters of the coins of John Zimiscees, for instance, with their little ornament above and below the writing (Pl. LV). In the case of the silver coins, again, where the reverse is made up only of an inscription, a not inelegant finish is provided by the triple border (e.g. Pl. LIII and Pl. LIV).

We shall probably be able to make a more satisfactory survey of the varied details of types and portraiture if we divide the whole Byzantine coinage into some six or seven periods, fixed, partly by historical considerations, partly by observing important changes in the coins themselves.

PERIOD I. Anastasius I—Constantine IV (A.D. 491–685).

PERIOD II. Justinian II—Theodosius III (A.D. 685–717).

PERIOD III. Leo III—Theophilus (A.D. 717–842).

PERIOD VII. Michael VIII, Palaeologus—Fall of Constantinople (A.D. 1261–1453).

PERIOD I. Anastasius I—Constantine IV (A.D. 491–685).

In the annals of the coinage, this period is remarkable for the number of mints that were in operation, and for the abundant issues of bronze money.

The reverses of the bronze coins consist, as already remarked, of a conspicuous numeral indicating the mark of value. The reverses of the gold coins do not, at first, diverge much from the models furnished by the predecessors of Anastasius I, and Victory remains the stock type. Justin II introduces 'Constantinople' on his gold (Pl. XI. 1), for which his successor Tiberius II substitutes the cross—a cross potent, on steps. Maurice Tiberius restored the Victory, but the cross potent was once more adopted by Heraclius, and proved to be one of the longest-lived of Byzantine coin-devices.

Next with regard to the representations of the Emperor seen on the obverse.¹ At first, the coins display the fully armed helmeted bust that had been familiar on Imperial coins since the reign of Arcadius. A bust in consular dress was introduced by Tiberius II and occurs at intervals in later periods of Byzantine coinage. The full-length figure also occasionally occurs in this period.

Obverse-types and representations of Imperial persons.

The Empress does not appear—even Theodora is not an exception—till the reign of Justin II, when Sophia is represented enthroned beside her husband. Similar representations, seated or standing, which were probably suggested by statues, are found in the case of Anastasia the wife of Tiberius II, and of Leontia the wife of Phocas.

Maurice Tiberius (on the coins of Cherson) represents his son as well as his wife (Pl. XIX. 22–23; Pl. XX. 1), and Heraclius establishes the practice, followed down to the latest periods of coinage, of representing two or more members of the Imperial family in addition to himself. Such representations, though often extremely quaint and, apparently, conventional (cp. Pl. XXIII. 10–12; Pl. XXXI. 1, 2; Pl. XXXVII. 9), are pleasing to look upon, as are all family groups in which the young are mingled with their elders. (Cp. the pleasing heads of Heraclius and his son, Pl. XXIII. 5; cp. also Pl. XXXIII. 8 and 10.)

The Imperial busts and figures of the coins are not merely valuable for details of costume, but are—or may be presumed to be—interesting for their portraiture. But before noticing these portraits one by one, it may be well to say a few words as to the conditions under which they can be profitably studied.

Portraiture on Byzantine Coins.

Nearly all extensive coinages—those of France and England, for example—which both precede and follow the Renaissance period, present us with regal portraits of two kinds—the conventional portrait and the characterized portrait. We determine a portrait to be conventional when it appears on the coins of several different monarchs unchanged, except, perhaps, in small details of coiffure or head-dress. Such a portrait is the youthful head which on our English coinage does duty for the early Edwards and Henries. When, on the other hand, each ruler—as, in our own coinage, first Henry VII, then Henry VIII—is distinctly differentiated by the engraver, we have the characterized portrait. Unfortunately, such a portrait is not necessarily characteristic or true to the original, and we can only decide whether the characterized portrait is faithful or otherwise by comparing it with other contemporary portraits, preferably those by a painter or sculptor, whose work belongs to a higher sphere of art and who is free from the trammels and limitations of the craftsman of the mint.

But in the Byzantine series it is not often that we can confront a coin-portrait with a contemporary portrait found elsewhere. Even when this is possible (as when we compare the Justinian of coins with the Justinian of the Ravenna mosaics) the trustworthiness of the non-numismatic monument may itself be open to question. The small scale on which the Imperial heads are reproduced on coins is one obstacle, in the case of not very skilful engravers, in the way of attaining life-like portraiture. Again, the mechanical rendering of the eye by a mere globule or pellet constantly interferes with the likeness. We may see this by comparing the heads of certain Emperors found on coins with those that appear in the miniatures of the Zonaras MS. referred to in detail later on (p. xcvi, infra). Coin and miniature often agree as to the contour of the face and the treatment of the beard, but the coin makes no attempt, as the miniature does, to represent the eye with truth to nature. The task of discriminating between the characterized portrait and the portrait that is not only characterized but also faithful thus becomes a delicate one, and in many cases appears to be hopeless.

In studying Byzantine coin-portraits, then, the first step is to rule out of court all representations that can be demonstrated to be conventional. Thus, it is quite certain that the beardless profile-head that is invariably found on the semisses and tremisses is conventional, because it subsists unchanged through several centuries, and in each reign accompanies solidi which bear a totally different Imperial image.¹ Commercial reasons—such as the popularity of these small denominations of the gold currency with barbarians and foreigners—probably led to the retention of the purely conventional effigy. Again, there are certain whole periods during which the same, or nearly the same, portrait is served up as the representation of different Emperors; such conventional representations occur, for instance, in our second Period.

Turning to the portraits of the present period we find that the representation of the first Emperor, Anastasius I (Pl. I. 1), is undoubtedly conventional, for it is a beardless, armed bust resembling the busts of his predecessors. The same view must be taken of the similar bust of Justin I (Pl. II. 10).²

Passing over, for the moment, the representations of the great Justinian, we reach the reigns of Justin II, Tiberius II, and Maurice Tiberius. The busts of these Emperors, though differing in some details (e.g. Tiberius II introduces the consular costume, Pl. XIV. 5), resemble in essentials not only one another but also the head of Justinian (Pl. IV. 12). We cannot therefore regard them as true portraits; for if the head of Justinian is decided to be conventional, then these heads are clearly in the same case; if, on the contrary, the Justinian head is a true portrait, then these heads merely reproduce the features of Justinian without material modification.

The next Emperor, Phocas, presents a characterized portrait, and wears a short pointed beard (Pl. XX. 4, 5, 12; Pl. XXII. 16, profile, bearded). Having in view the fact that this portrait differs markedly from the conventional heads of his three predecessors, we may, I think, venture to regard it as a true likeness. A similar head is repeated on the seals of this Emperor.¹

Of Heraclius, four representations are found:—

1. With pointed beard. Pl. XXIII. 1.
2. With short beard and helmet. Pl. XXIII. 2, 3.
3. With short beard and crown. Pl. XXIII. 4–8; Pl. XXVIII. 3, 4.²
4. With long beard. Pl. XXIII. 9.

No. 1 (Pl. XXIII. 1) is, as I have already pointed out (p. xxiii, supra), simply a repetition of the portrait of Phocas (Pl. XX. 4), made probably before the engraver to the mint had been able to obtain a ‘sitting’ from the new Emperor. No. 2 (Pl. XXIII. 2, 3) represents Heraclius with a close beard, not pointed. It is a characterized portrait, but not one to be depended on as a likeness. It is really the conventional head of Tiberius II or Maurice Tiberius, with the addition of a fringe of beard: the eyes, too, are clumsily represented by prominent pellets, as they were, indeed, in the case of Phocas.

The portrait No. 3 (Pl. XXIII. 4–8; XXVIII. 3, 4) has a better claim to be accepted as a likeness of Heraclius.³ In the case of the coin figured Pl. XXIII. 7, an engraver of more than ordinary skill was evidently at work, and other coins, though less carefully executed (e.g. Pl. XXIII. 4; XXVIII. 4) present a portrait which does not materially differ from the model of Pl. XXIII. 7.

The last portrait, No. 4 (Pl. XXIII. 9; cp. XXIII. 11), may readily be held to furnish evidence that Heraclius in the latter part of his reign grew a beard of portentous length and a moustache in accordance, but, probably, it does not well reproduce the features of the Emperor, for the eye is strangely represented by a ring with the centre hollowed out.⁴

Constans II, son of Heraclius Constantine, and grandson of the Emperor Heraclius, is represented by three portraits:—

1. Beardless head. Pl. XXX. 12, 13.
2. Short beard. Pl. XXX. 14, 15.
3. Long beard. Pl. XXX. 16–21.

¹ See supra, pp. xxii, xxiii, and the description of Cedrenus there referred to.

² On the delicately executed gold coins of Carthage, Pl. XXVII. 11, 12, Heraclius wears a milder aspect than on the coins of Constantinople, and the beard is more pointed. The bronze coin of Carthage, Pl. XXVII. 21, has, however, the portrait of the Constantinopolitan coins.

³ On the personal appearance of Heraclius, see the description of Cedrenus, cited p. xxiv, supra.

⁴ This way of representing the eyes is found on some coins with portrait No. 3, e.g. Pl. XXIII. 4, which may be contrasted with Pl. XXIII. 7.

The coins on which these portraits occur were issued, so far as can be made out (see infra, p. 255 n.), at three periods, when Constans was about eleven, sixteen, and twenty-one, but none of the portraits tally well with the age of the issuer. It must be said, however, that No. 2 (Pl. XXX. 14), with its long-drawn visage, recalls the portrait of Heraclius Constantine (father of Constans), as seen in Pl. XXIII. 9, and has so far a claim to be considered life-like. On the other hand, No. 3 is a slavish reproduction of the long-bearded head of Heraclius; cp. Pl. XXX. 17 with Pl. XXIII. 9.

Constantine IV, son of Constans II, has a bust strongly characterized, in so far as it is almost invariably that of a warrior in panoply; but whether the portrait is a faithful one seems open to question, for the general idea of the armed bust has evidently been suggested by, and copied from, much earlier coins, probably those of the first issue of Justinian I. Further, in the case of many representations, such as Pl. XXXVII. 10-12, we are precluded from relying on the portraiture, owing to the mechanical rendering of the eyes by hollowed-out circles.

Justinian I.

We have still to notice the portrait of Justinian I. The material for a discussion of the subject is mainly as follows¹:—

1. Solidus, three-quarter face, circ. A. D. 527 (Pl. IV. 9, 10).
2. Solidus and bronze coins, full-face, A. D. 538 and later (Pl. IV. 11, 12; VII. 1, 3; VIII. 4, &c.); cp. gold medallion, A. D. 534? frontispiece to vol. i, and p. 25.
3. Bronze coins struck at Rome (by the Ostrogoths, or by Justinian?) with profile head of Justinian (Pinder and Friedlaender, Die Münzen Justinians, Pl. V. 3).
4. Barberini ivory (Louvre) with equestrian figure (Schlumberger, in Monuments Piot, vol. vii, p. 79, Pl. X; Diehl, Justinien, frontispiece).
5. Mosaic, S. Vitale, Ravenna (Diehl, Justinien, pp. 15, 16; Venturi, Storia dell' arte ital., i, pp. 130, 131).
6. Mosaic, S. Apollinare nuovo, Ravenna (Diehl, Justinien, p. 13).
7. Equestrian statue of Justinian in the Augustaion of Constantinople, known from the description in Procopius, De Aedif., i. 2, and from a drawing reproduced in Diehl, Justinien, p. 27; cp. p. 77.
8. Silver disk found at Kertch (Diehl, op. cit., p. 30; cp. Dalton, B. M. Cat. Christian Antiq., No. 543).

No. 1, the three-quarter face solidus (Pl. IV. 9, 10) struck at the beginning of Justinian's reign, A. D. 527, is certainly to be set aside as a conventional portrait, for both in pose and features it resembles the heads on the solidi of his predecessors.

In A.D. 538 Justinian made certain changes in the coinage: he caused the bronze money to be inscribed with the year of issue, and placed a new bust of himself both on the gold and bronze currency. This bust differs in features from the preceding bust, and is shown full-face, and not three-quarter face, or in profile, as on earlier coins (Pl. IV. 11, 12; VII. 1, 3; VIII. 4, &c.). It must be borne in mind that this head was never again changed throughout Justinian's long reign, and is therefore evidence only for the year 538 and thereabouts.¹ It is a beardless visage, plump, rounded, and not without a smile. It so far agrees with the contemporary description of Procopius, who says (Hist. arc., viii. 4) that Justinian had a round face, a ruddy complexion, not ill to look upon, and that he was a man of medium height, with a body neither thin nor corpulent. Procopius (op. cit., viii. 4-6) was struck by his resemblance to representations which he had seen of the Emperor Domitian. No. 6 in our list, the mosaic portrait of Justinian in S. Apollinare nuovo, presents a head which is of the same character as these coins of A. D. 538; but the mosaic was made about A. D. 557, and represents a much older man, who has been sorely buffeted in the storms of life. Another portrait of the same character, but evidencing more skilful and delicate treatment, is to be found in the horseman of the Barberini ivory (No. 4).²

In contrast with the above-mentioned portraits must be set the figure of Justinian seen in the deeply impressive groups of San Vitale (A. D. 547). Here the Emperor has an oval rather than a rounded face, and he wears a moustache. John Malalas (p. 425) vouches for the existence of a moustache, and perhaps the Emperor adopted this fashion for a time, subsequent to the issue of the coin-portrait of 538. I am not sure, however, that we can rely on this San Vitale representation. The black, staring eyes, for instance, seen in the case of Justinian as well as of Theodora and the courtiers that surround them, are, one may suspect, not necessarily true to life, but due partly to convention and to the difficulty of manipulating mosaic cubes for the purposes of portraiture.

No. 8 (if really of Justinian) and No. 7 (the figure in the Augustaion) add nothing very important to the evidence. They are both beardless figures, and No. 7 wears the plumed head-dress found also on the gold medallion (frontispiece, vol. i).

One representation, No. 3, remains. It is the coin of Rome (whether Ostrogothic or an actual issue of Justinian's³), and is interesting from its skilful execution and because it shows the head in profile. The hair is cut straight over the forehead, and the whole head reminds one of a Roman Emperor of about the end of the first century A.D., rather, however, of Trajan than of Domitian, the Emperor to whom, according to Procopius, Justinian bore the most resemblance.

³ It much resembles in treatment the head of the Ostrogothic ruler Theodahat (A.D. 534-536) figured in Keary, Coinages of Western Europe, Pl. VII (II), No. 18;

On the whole, it may be said that, if we were preparing a 'composite photograph' of Justinian, we should find the best material in the coin-portraits of 538 (and the gold medallion of 534?), in the Roman coin (No. 3), the mosaic of San Apollinare, and perhaps in the Barberini ivory.

Regarding Period I as a whole, it may be remarked that the coinage—so far as the reverse-types are concerned—displays little originality or artistic feeling. The portraits of the early Emperors (with the probable exception of Justinian) are conventional, but from Phocas to Constantine IV portraits occur which have a claim, in varying degrees, to be accepted as genuine likenesses.

Characteristics of Period I.

The gold coinage issued before the reign of Heraclius is carelessly struck¹; but under Heraclius and his successors it is better engraved and more neatly turned out. Greater care is generally bestowed on the bronze coinage which, however, begins to deteriorate after Heraclius. The custom of restriking or countermarking old flans largely prevails after the time of Justinian I.

PERIOD II. Justinian II—Theodosius III (A.D. 685–717).

This period is marked by the disappearance of several of the older Imperial mints and by the diminishing importance of the bronze coinage. It is noticeable, from the point of view of types, for the first appearance of the image of Christ on Byzantine coins. This sacred type occurs both in the first and second reigns of Justinian II—the Servus Christi: other Emperors employ the cross for their reverse-types.

The image of the Saviour consists of a bust with the cross placed behind the head, which is not nimbate. There are two representations—one, a head with hair and beard flowing, a work of some artistic feeling Friedlaender's Münzen der Ostgothen, Pl. II. 4; Sabatier, Pl. XVIII. 24, 25.—Cp. also the standing figure holding Victory in the Barberini ivory above-mentioned.

¹ The careless execution of the gold coins—even in the reign of Justinian—is, perhaps, to be accounted for by supposing that money in this metal was chiefly struck, and on a large scale, for the purpose of paying tributes and taxes (cp. Keary, Coinages of Western Europe, p. 24), and was therefore coined rapidly and without much regard to the requirements of artistic, or even of Imperial, dignity. Extant Byzantine coins struck in gold are (as is well known to collectors) generally remarkable for their good preservation. On the other hand, the bronze and silver coins, the part of the currency which bore the brunt of everyday transactions, more often than not display lamentable evidence of wear and tear.

(Pl. XXXVIII. 15, 16, 24); the other, a more crudely treated head, of strange facial contours, with the hair curly, the beard cut close (Pl. XXXVIII. 17, 22, 25; Pl. XXXIX. 20; Pl. XLI. 1-5).

The attempts at portraiture which we discovered in certain reigns of Period I are now abandoned, and the heads become entirely conventional. The engraver outlines the face as if it were a sort of inverted omphalos; he surrounds it with a hardly discernible fringe representing whiskers and beard, while another straight-cut fringe of hair is made to run across the brow.

The general execution of the coinage (always excepting, in this Period and later, the rude 'Provincial' and 'Italian' coinages, some of which may not be Imperial) is neat, and, but for the conventionality of the portraiture, would do credit to the Imperial mint. The best specimens are such as Pl. XXXVIII. 13, and 15 where Justinian II stands holding the cross potent; Pl. XXXIX. 4; Pl. XLI. 11, of Philippicus.

PERIOD III. Leo III—Theophilus (A.D. 717-842).

This is the period of the great iconoclastic movement. The head of the Saviour (first introduced by Justinian II) is no longer represented, but the reverse-type consists only of the cross,¹ or, more often, of the bust of some member of the Imperial family.²

Constantine V, in introducing a new silver coin, entirely filled the reverse-space with an inscription, and placed the cross on the obverse; and this arrangement was repeated in many later reigns. The triple or double border which surrounds each side imparts some finish to an otherwise plain coin.

On the coinage as a whole the types are practically confined to the representation of the cross and the Imperial family. Human portraiture fares, in a way, hardly better than the sacred image. It is throughout conventional, the face being represented in the manner described in Period II: see e.g. Pl. XLIII. 22, 23; XLVI. 15; XLVIII. 14, Theophilus, his wife and three daughters. Though two rulers of this period, Irene and Michael I, were image-worshippers they made no change in the coinage of their iconoclastic predecessors, and their portraits were not more life-like; thus (except by the head-dress) the head of Irene is hardly to be distinguished from that of her son Constantine VI: see Pl. XLVI. 5, 6, 9, 10, 11.

The only exception to the conventionality of the portraits is to be found at the beginning of this period in the case of Leo III, whose head as shown in Pl. XLII. 7, 8 is strongly characterized and may well be a likeness. But even Leo is, after the first part of his reign, represented by a conventional head: see Pl. XLII. 9, 10, &c.

² As to the influence of the iconoclastic movement on the coins, see further, pp. xxxv, xxxvi, supra.

PERIOD IV. Michael III—John I (A. D. 842–976).

The beginning of this period is marked by the close of the long iconoclastic controversy and the revival of image-worship by Theodora the regent-mother of Michael III. The change is evidenced in the new life and artistic vigour imparted to the coinage, and it may be noted that the quasi-barbarous 'Provincial' currency comes to an end in the earlier part of this period.¹

A succession of new reverse-types now appears. Michael III restores the head of the Saviour, and his successor Basil I represents the Saviour enthroned. Leo VI introduces the image of the Virgin; Constantine VII represents the Saviour in the act of crowning the Emperor; Alexander for the first time places a head of a Saint on the coins. John I (at the end of the period) takes a step in the same direction in connexion with the bronze coinage, which in his reign and long afterwards was made to display only religious types and inscriptions,² while 'the things of Caesar'—the 'image' and the 'superscription'—were surrendered and excluded.

With regard to the types relating to the Saviour and the Virgin, the head of Christ re-introduced by Michael III (Pl. XLIX. 16, 17) is copied, as can hardly be doubted, from the coins of Justinian II (A. D. 685–695), reproducing, however, the head with flowing hair (Pl. XXXVIII. 15, 16) and not the bizarre image (Pl. XXXVIII. 17) with the close beard. The heads of Christ, found later, in the reigns of Constantine VII and of Nicephorus II Phocas, are rendered with delicacy and artistic feeling: see especially Pl. LIII. 7, 12–14; LIV. 4, 5; and cp. coins of John I, Pl. LIV. and LV. In contrast with this, the seated figure of Christ introduced by Basil I and destined to become stereotyped on the coinage has not any special merit either in pose or expression (Pl. L. 11, 12).

The Virgin-type introduced by Leo VI is a bust or half-length figure orans (Pl. LI. 8). It is treated with grace and freshness, and, though often repeated in later reigns, never, perhaps, quite loses its charm.³

Under Nicephorus II Phocas, the Virgin (a half-length figure) is shown beside the Emperor (Pl. LIV. 5) in the place previously filled by emperors' wives or sons. In the next reign (John I) she is seen crowning the Emperor (Pl. LIV. 10–12). The Virgin with the medallion of the infant Christ, though a subject old in art,¹ is not seen on the coins till the reign of John I (Pl. LIV. 14).

In the manipulation of the Imperial busts and figures we may discern an advance on the previous (iconoclastic) period—more variety of pose, and a richer and more decorative treatment of the costume. None the less, the conventional, uncharacterized head still continues to be prominent, and the contour of the face which we noticed in Period II as resembling an inverted omphalos now recalls an inverted triangle. But in addition to these conventional heads we often find, and on the coins of a single Emperor, a strongly characterized bearded type.

Michael III and his family and Basil I do not really break away from the iconoclastic tradition in the matter of portraiture, but Leo VI (side by side with a purely conventional head, Pl. LI. 13, &c.) presents on the gold coin of Pl. LI. 8 a fine bearded head, which we might without difficulty believe to be a genuine portrait were it not that its issue probably took place when Leo was only twenty.²

A similar long-bearded head, engraved with gem-like delicacy, appears also on some coins (Pl. LIII. 7) of the art-loving Constantine VII (Porphyrogenitus), but from its close resemblance to the above-mentioned portrait of Leo VI we must doubt whether it is true to life. There are, further, three heads with shorter beards which appear on the coins, respectively, of Romanus I (Pl. LII. 9–11), Nicephorus II Phocas (Pl. LIV. 5–7), and John I (Pl. LIV. 10–13). Each of these heads taken separately might well be deemed an authentic portrait, but when we compare the three together their resemblance becomes so obvious that it is almost certain that two, at any rate, of the heads (Nicephorus II and John I) cannot be the vera imago of the Emperors they pretend to represent.

With regard to the general characteristics of this period, it may be remarked that the best executed and best designed of the coins contrast favourably with the angular and arid work of the iconoclastic period, and many specimens prove that the engraver had a good notion of filling a coin-space in a decorative and not inelegant way (see e.g. Pl. LI. 9; LIV. 4, 5, 10, 13). The present period, and the next (Period V) may, indeed, almost be looked upon as the Golden Age of Byzantine coin-art, especially when we compare them with the periods that preceded and followed.

PERIOD V. Basil II and Constantine VIII—Nicephorus III (A. D. 976–1081).

This period is transitional between Periods IV and VI. It witnesses the introduction of the scyphate fabric for the nomisma (a fabric finally adopted in Period VI by Alexius I), and, at the same time, the retention of the old solidus or nomisma of small module. The difficulty of filling the comparatively broad 'field' of the new scyphate pieces was ingeniously overcome by placing a triple border on each side of the coin (e.g. Pl. LVI. 8). The Imperial busts could now be represented on a rather larger scale, and the rich jewelled details of Imperial costume were fully displayed (e.g. Pl. LVIII. 2, 10; LX. 3).

² Cp. p. 449, infra, as to the date of this coin of Pl. LI. 8.

During the greater part of this period the coins (with certain exceptions) present the neat, decorative appearance that we found in Period IV (e.g. Pl. LVI. 6, 7, 9-11). There is considerable variety and, at times, artistic merit in the types employed, e.g. the Virgin crowning Romanus III (Pl. LVII. 13); the Virgin orans (Pl. LIX. 3); the Christ of Chalce (Pl. LX. 4, 6, 7); standing figures of Emperors, as Isaac I with his drawn sword (Pl. LX. 12); and the beautiful design of the Virgin and Child in Pl. LXII. 2.

The busts and figures of Emperors are represented with considerable care, variety of treatment, and attention to detail, but in the majority of cases it is certain, or may be strongly suspected, that the portraiture is not true to life.

In the two latest reigns of this period, those of Michael VII and Nicephorus III, instances of feeble engraving and careless striking sufficiently indicate that the decadence of Byzantine coin-art has already begun.¹

Basil II and Constantine VIII. The two portraits Pl. LVI. 1 are clearly conventional, but the bearded head of Basil, Pl. LVI. 2, 3, 8, &c., is at least a more characterized representation. No. 3 on this plate bears some resemblance to the head of Basil II as it appears in the Venice Psalter (see supra, p. lii), but when we confront it, as well as Nos. 2 and 8, with the coins of the preceding Emperors John I and Nicephorus II Phocas, it becomes hardly doubtful that we are dealing with a stereotyped bearded representation and not with an exact portrait.

Constantine VIII. in his sole reign, presents the bearded heads seen in Pl. LVII. 6-10. Of these, the heads Nos. 6-8 recall (perhaps too vividly to be independent likenesses) the heads of Leo VI (Pl. LI. 8) or Constantine VII (Pl. LIII. 7); Nos. 9, 10 have a portrait of a somewhat different character.

Romanus III has an obv. of elegant design—the Virgin (his special patron) placing the crown on his head (Pl. LVII. 13). Cp. Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., iii, p. 532.

Michael IV. His head, as represented in Pl. LVIII. 1, 2, has certainly distinctive features, and, so far, might be a portrait. (Cp. the portrait in the Zonaras MS. at Modena; Schlumberger, op. cit., p. 533, which is like the Zonaras Romanus III.)

Michael V. The head of this standing figure (Pl. LVIII. 5) may be compared with his head in the Zonaras MS. (Schlumberger, op. cit., iii, p. 532). The form of the face, beard and moustache are practically the same, but the eyes on the coins are clumsily represented by two pellets.

Constantine IX. This portrait (Pl. LVIII. 6-12) seems to be suggested by the coins of Michael IV, and can hardly, therefore, be regarded as trustworthy. In some respects, however, it resembles the head of this Emperor in the Zonaras MS. (Schlumberger, op. cit., iii, 540). The beautiful figure of the Virgin orans, Pl. LIX. 3, is to be noted.

PERIOD VI. Alexius I—Alexius IV (A. D. 1081–1204).

With the accession of Alexius I the very distinctive Byzantine coinage of which the scyphate nomisma is the chief feature, may be said to have been completely established. The old solidus or nomisma of thick fabric had already disappeared from the currency.

In respect to mechanical execution there is a decided change for the worse. Cases of double-striking, due to the shifting of the dies, seem almost to have been the rule and not the exception at the Imperial mint, and it is on the reverse side—the side bearing the sacred image—that the most flagrant instances of such carelessness occur: see e.g. Pl. LXVII. 8. Details of costume, moreover, are less delicately treated than in Period V, and the figures have either a bizarre appearance (as Pl. LXIV. 3, obv.), or are so stiff and wooden as almost to recall a primitive age of xoana (Pl. LXVIII. 9; LXV. 14). In particular, the seated figure of Christ (Pl. LXVII) and the seated figure of the Virgin (Pl. LXX) are usually most clumsily rendered. The beardless bust of Christ (Emmanuel) (Pl. LXVIII. 15; LXIX. 1, 2) is something of a variation from the usual type of the Saviour found on the coins, but it is of small artistic merit. The introduction of saints on the coinage of this period lends it some little interest and variety.¹

But although throughout this period the number of types is exceptionally large, there is little real invention or free play of the artistic spirit, and the varieties of type are chiefly brought about by presenting sometimes the Christ, sometimes the Virgin—seated or standing, as a bust or a whole length, in the attitude of prayer or of blessing.

Theodora. The coins are very delicately executed. Her bust and figure (Pl. LX. 1–3) are shown richly attired, but the features seem little characterized, an observation that is true also of her portrait in the Zonaras MS. (Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., iii, 541). The Christ of Chalce (cp. p. lvi, supra) appears on her coins.

Michael VI—Isaac I—Constantine X. On the coins of these reigns, the Emperor is generally represented as a standing figure, and the details of portraiture cannot be well made out. Isaac I holds the drawn sword referred to p. lvii, supra.

Romanus IV. The portrait (Pl. LXI. 13; LXII. 1) is on a small scale, but resembles the Zonaras miniature of Romanus III: Schlumberger, op. cit., p. 532, so that some doubt may be felt as to whether the portrait of Romanus IV is taken from life. Several interesting types occur:—The family groups of Pl. LXI. 11, 12, in which the Emperor and Empress are crowned by the Saviour, a type known also from the ivory in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (see p. lviii, supra); the bust of the Virgin with the medallion (Pl. LXI. 13, 14; LXII. 1), a type now revived after a long interval; and the beautiful figure of the Virgin and Child in Pl. LXII. 2 (see further, p. lix, supra).

Michael VII—Nicephorus III. Michael is represented by a sturdy bust with features that resemble his predecessors. Nicephorus closely resembles Michael and neither portrait can be relied on as faithful.

PERIOD VII. Michael VIII—Fall of Constantinople (A. D. 1261–1453).

The types of this period, which begins with the restoration of the Greek Emperors, arrest the attention by reason of the curiously crowded grouping of the Imperial figures; e.g. the kneeling Michael VIII, Christ and St. Michael in Pl. LXXIV; the grovelling figure of Andronicus II (Pl. LXXIV; cp. LXXV. 1, 2).¹ Of the types new to Byzantine coinage, the most remarkable are the representation of a seraph (Pl. LXXV. 10)² and the view of Constantinople (Pl. LXXIV. 1).³

Under the Palaeologi of the fourteenth century there was a sort of Renaissance in mosaic and some other branches of art,⁴ but the general execution of the coins, especially of the nomisma, is extremely rough, and proves that a very low standard of mechanical skill and care existed during this period at the Imperial mint. There was, however, a counter-acting Western influence at work which tended to alter, and in some cases to improve, the appearance of the currency. This influence came chiefly from Venice, and is visible in the direct copying of Venetian coins (both fabric and types: see Pl. LXXV. 17), in the employment of a new form of the cross (Pl. LXXV. 7), and in the disposition of the inscription in a circular arrangement (Pl. LXXV. 16).

In the period of John V, Byzantine coinage apparently almost ceased to be issued, and its place was probably taken by the money of Venice. Manuel II, followed by John VIII, made evident efforts to restore the currency, and his silver coins (still fairly abundant), though not skilfully engraved, show a certain attempt at decorative effect (Pl. LXXVI. 9–13). In these coinages, Western influence is again traceable, and the latest specimens of the coin-art of Constantinople may be pronounced 'Mediaeval' rather than 'Byzantine' in character.

With regard to portraiture, some attempts at characterization appear to have been made, but they are of little importance owing to clumsy execution or to smallness of scale. In the case of John VIII it is possible that we may have a portrait, and his coins can be compared with the portrait-medal by Vittore Pisano figured as the frontispiece to vol. ii.⁵

§ 5. IMPERIAL MINTS.

In the reign of Anastasius I three mints only, Constantinople, Nicomedia, and Antioch, were in operation. Under Justin I, Thessalonica and Cyzicus were added. The conquests of Justinian necessitated the establishment of new centres of coinage, and eleven or twelve mints were at work during his reign. Under his three immediate successors the number of mint-places remains nearly the same. Heraclius coins at twelve mints. In the reign of Constans II (the successor of Heraclius) the number of mint-places does not exceed five or six, and from about the time of Nicephorus I (A. D. 802) to the reign of Basil II and Constantine VIII, only two or three mints (so far as is known) continued in operation. From the sole reign of Constantine VIII (A. D. 1025) onwards, all coins seem to have emanated from the Capital.

CONSTANTINOPLE (A. D. 491–circ. 1448). The chief mint for coins in all metals. CONSTANTINOPLE.

Mint-name. (i) CONOB (on the gold coins till the time of Leo III). (ii) CONOS, COB (on the earlier silver). (iii) CON (on the earlier bronze coinage).

CONOB (found also on the gold of Carthage, Rome and Ravenna) is now generally admitted to consist of the mint-name with the addition of OB, an abbreviation of obryzum, 'refined gold'.¹ In CONOS, S, if not a blunder for B, must be an abbreviation mark. COB is perhaps C (the name of Constantinople) and OB(ryzum). (For the occurrence of OB on bronze and silver coins, see infra, under 'Thessalonica').

Officina marks. On the solidi from Anastasius I to Justinian II numerals occur with great regularity, ranging from A to I (i.e. 1 to 10). After that time they are more sporadic, and finally disappear. On the solidi of Heraclius (see p. 192, infra, note) various letters or numerals occur in addition to the officina numerals. Probably a series of these varieties was struck at each officina.²

On the bronze (chiefly M) coins the officina numerals are A, B, Γ, Δ, Ε (1–5).³

THESSALONICA (circ. A. D. 518–circ. 620). Coinage in bronze only, usually not of a higher denomination than K. The coins are carelessly engraved, and often struck on irregular flans with jagged edges. THESSALONICA.

² There are occasionally exceptional marks, such as ΘϚ on a solidus of Tiberius II; p. 106, No. 9, infra.

³ On the peculiar numerals ΑΙΙ, ΓΙΙ, &c., found under Constans II, see infra, p. 268 n. It is doubtful whether these are officina marks.

Mint-name. TES; ΘΕC. Under Justin I, THESSOB (p. 17), but the inscription OB (i.e. obryzum, 'refined gold') is quite inappropriate on a bronze coin, and has probably been copied mechanically from the gold coins of the predecessors of Anastasius I, which are inscribed THSOB; TESOB.¹ It may be noted that OB had even previously appeared on silver coins, the gold and silver coins of Leo I (for instance) being alike marked THSOB. In the mint-indication COB found on some silver coins of Constantinople (see supra), we may probably discern the word OB(ryzum) loosely used for refined silver instead of refined gold.²

Officina marks. These are rarely present.

NICOMEDIA (circ. A.D. 498–circ. 627). The two Imperial mints of Asia Minor were Nicomedia and Cyzicus.³ Their NICOMEDIA. coinage, closely modelled on that of the Capital, is in bronze only.

Mint-name. NIKO; also NIKOMI, NIKM, NIC, NIK, NI.

Officinae. Two only (A and B⁴), as compared with the five indicated on the bronze coins of Constantinople.

CYZICUS (circ. A.D. 518–circ. 628). Coinage in bronze only, resembling that of Nicomedia (q.v.).

Mint-name. KYZ; KY.

Officinae. Two only (A and B): cp. Nicomedia.

ANTIOCH (circ. A.D. 498–circ. 617). Bronze coins only. The legends on the obverse (i.e. the Imperial name and titles) are ANTIOCH. constantly blundered and often unintelligible.

Mint-name. At first, ANT χ ; ANTIX; AN. After A.D. 528 (see p. 53, n.), the name of the city having been changed to $\Theta\epsilon\omicron\upsilon\pi\omicron\lambda\iota\varsigma$, 'Antioch' disappears from the coins, and we find the new name, sometimes as $\Theta\Upsilon\tau\tau\omicron\lambda\varsigma$ or $\Theta\Upsilon$, but commonly in the Latin form THE4PO; THE4P'. $\overset{\circ}{\Pi}$; \bar{P} ; P (see p. 59, n.) also indicate this mint. The exceptional SE4S4 (p. 223) is no doubt only a blundered reproduction of THE4P'.

Officinae. Four or five officinae were usually at work.

ISAURA (A.D. 617/8). A mint for bronze, in the reign of Heraclius only (see p. 221).

Mint-name. IS4YR. Officina. A only.

¹ On No. 49, p. 17, we might read THESSOB as THESSO B, i.e. the mint name with the officina numeral added. But this interpretation is precluded by No. 50 (p. 17), where, in addition to THESSOB we find the officina numeral €.

² Argentum pusulatum (abbreviated Pv., Ps., &c.) is the proper term for refined silver.

³ The short-lived mint of Isaura (q.v.) hardly forms an exception to this statement.

⁴ There is an exception in the reign of Justin I; see infra, pp. 17, 18.

CYPRUS (circ. A.D. 627/8). Bronze coins were struck in this island under Heraclius, probably at Constantia, the chief city. It is doubtful whether the coinage continued beyond this reign, though some pieces struck by Heraclius, and countermarked by CYPRUS. Constans II (or Constantine IV?), may have for some time circulated in Cyprus (see p. 222, n. 4; cp. p. 267 n.).

Mint-name. ΚΥΠΡ/.

Officinae. The only officina numeral (at least on the British Museum specimens) is Γ.

ALEXANDRIA (from circ. A.D. 538: p. 62, n. 2 to Heraclius or Constans II: p. 227, n. 3). The coins (in bronze only) are mainly of the denomination IB. They are often very ALEXANDRIA. rude in appearance, and of peculiar thick fabric.

Mint-name. ΑΛΕΞ; ΑΛΕΙ (on ABAZ; ΠΟΝ, &c., see pp. 227–229).

Officinae. No numerals occur at this mint.

CARTHAGE (circ. A.D. 534–circ. 698). This was a mint of importance during the whole period of the Imperial domination in Africa, i. e. from the conquest by Belisarius till the time of Justinian II or Tiberius III.¹ Its bronze coinage is abundant and its CARTHAGE. silver coinage (mostly confined to the smaller denominations) is not very rare.

The gold coinage must have been extensive, though it was not set on foot, apparently, till the reign of Heraclius. It is inscribed CONOB, like the gold coins of Constantinople, Ravenna and Rome. It is therefore identifiable only by its style and fabric and by a knowledge of provenance. When the solidus is of small module and lumpy fabric (e.g. Pl. XXXIII. 2) it is easily recognized as African, but the African solidus when struck of the ordinary size and with flat fabric (e.g. Pl. XXXIII. 6) is less readily distinguished. But there are certain criteria, in addition to the clues given by provenance.² Thus, a linear border generally takes the place of the border of dots found at Constantinople and elsewhere, and a straggling form of A— or —is employed by the Carthaginian engraver. The engraving of the types is often crude, and unusual letters or numerals frequently appear (e.g. under Constans II).

Though there seem to be good reasons for attributing both the thick and the flat series of solidi to Carthage, it is not obvious why these two dissimilar fabrics were employed at the same mint, and even, it would seem, contemporaneously.

Mint-name. Gold. CONOB.

Silver. CONOS (p. 63), but the mint-name is usually omitted.

Bronze. KART; KAR; CAR; KRTÇ; CRTÇ; KTÇ; CT.

Officinae. On the solidi of Heraclius, officinae A-I (1-10) are recorded: the numerals 11, 12, 13, 14 which are also found on these coins are probably to be explained as officinae marks (pp. 230-232). On the solidi (both of the thick and the flat fabric), and on the semisses and tremisses of Constans II, peculiar marks occur. Thus (in the flat series) we find at the end of the inscription—the usual position for the officina number—such letters or numerals as C; Θ; Θς; ΘΙ, &c., each of these being accompanied by a letter (or numeral) placed in the field (P; I; C; A, &c.). Similar marks occur under Constantine IV.

The bronze coins are as a rule without officina marks. Under Justinian I, however, there are perhaps indications of five or six officinae (see pp. 64-67). We also find on some M and K coins of this reign the letters SO and O (p. 66), which may possibly indicate the second or the sixth officina. On coins of Phocas (p. 179) and of Heraclius, Ε (fifth officina) is found.

SICILY (CATINA, SYRACUSE), circ. A.D. 538?—circ. 705 or later?

SICILY. Coinage begins in this island a few years after the conquest by Belisarius (p. 69), and lasts till the sacking of Syracuse by the Arabs in A.D. 705 (see further, supra, p. xxxiii, 'Provincial Coinage' as to a possible coinage in Sicily after A.D. 705).

Mint-name. SECILIA (p. 152); $\overline{\text{SCL}}^{\text{S}}$; SC^{S} ; SCL; CAT; CVPAKOVCI (cp. pp. 69, 153, 237 n.). The usual mint-place was Catina, but, from the time of Constans II, Syracuse was probably the chief centre of coinage. One coin of Justinian II (Num. Zeitschrift, i, p. 431) is inscribed CVPAKOVCI.

Officinae. Officina marks do not occur.

ROME (circ. A.D. 552/3—circ. 775). From the time of Justinian I to the reign of Heraclius inclusive, this mint seems to have ROME. been of little importance, and to have coined only small denominations in bronze (see supra, pp. xvii, xviii).

Under Constans II a coinage in gold begins¹ and continues till the reign of Constantine V (died 775), after which it apparently ceases. The solidi attributable to this mint are marked CONOB but may be distinguished from the corresponding Constantinopolitan issues by their comparatively high relief (rendering the coins rough to the touch), by the appearance of symbols (star, &c.) and letters in the field, and to some extent by the colour of the gold, which from the time of Leo III is greatly alloyed.

Mint-name. CONOB (on gold); ROM; RM; R (pp. 387, 388).

Officinae. No marks on the bronze. On the gold (from Constans II) various officina numerals and letters occur in the field.

¹ There are also some small silver coins. The coins that seem to have the best claim to be Imperial Roman issues are the bronze pieces with the name and portrait-head of Justinian (Pinder and Friedlaender, Münzen Justinians, Pl. V. 3, and p. 48), but even these may be Ostrogothic.

RAVENNA (circ. A.D. 555–circ. 741). Coinage begins some years after the taking of Ravenna by Belisarius, and continues almost to the time when it was lost to the Empire through its capture by the Lombards in 751. Ravenna was a somewhat RAVENNA. important mint for gold coinage.¹ The silver (as at Carthage) is generally of small denominations, though the hexagram of Heraclius was minted there as well as at Constantinople. The bronze coins are now somewhat scarce.

The coins of this mint are often very neat, even sometimes rather elegant, in style. The gold coins (inscribed CONOB) may be distinguished from the corresponding pieces of Constantinople by their bracteate-like fabric and by the prominent relief of inscription and type.

Mint-name. CONOB (on gold); RAVENNA; RAVEN; RAV; RA.

Officinae. There are indications that ten officinae were generally in operation for the coining of the gold. Marks on the bronze rarely occur (Є, Maurice Tiberius; A, Δ, Heraclius: on SS, see p. 157).

CHERSON (6th cent.; and circ. A.D. 886–989). This mint was never important, and issued bronze coins only, usually of small size. It perhaps first came into operation in the reign of Justinian I (see p. xviii, supra). Its next issues were made under CHERSON. Maurice Tiberius (p. 158 f.), but it does not seem to have coined again till the reign of Michael III (with Basil I, A.D. 866). From this period there is a continuous coinage till the time of Basil II, when Cherson was taken (A.D. 989) by Vladimir the Russian.

Mint-name. In monogram under Justinian I (see A. V. Oreshnikov, ‘Chersono-Byzantine Coins’ in Trans. Moscow Num. Soc., iii (1905), Pl. VIII. 1–3); ΧΕΡCWNOC, ΧΕPCONOC (reign of Maurice Tiberius); ΠΧ = ‘Ο πρωτεύων Χερσῶνος?, or Π = ΠΟΛΙΣ?

Officinae. No officina marks occur, but on the coins of Justinian I, of an uncertain mint (possibly Cherson), described infra, pp. 72, 73, the marks A to Δ are found.

PROVINCIAL COINAGE (circ. A.D. 698–circ. 886). The coinage which it is necessary to classify thus vaguely has been already referred to, p. xxxiii, supra. It consists of gold and bronze pieces (the former often much alloyed), and the engraving is stiff and crude. Coins of Carthage have evidently served as its prototypes, yet it cannot be of Carthage, for it continues to be issued long after the Imperialists had lost their foothold in Africa. Sardinia and Sicily may possibly have had a share in it. It lasts from the reign of Tiberius III to the time of Basil I. ‘PROVINCIAL’
COINAGE.

These strange coinages are closely modelled on the Constantinopolitan money, though they are generally struck in gold of a more or less debased quality. They have been discussed, p. xxxi f., supra. They were probably struck for the Imperial possessions in Southern Italy, though some specimens (included in this Catalogue for convenience) may not have been really issued at Imperial mints. The gold coins attributed to Rome (see supra, p. xxxii) are akin to these Central and South Italian coinages.

The inscriptions found on Byzantine coins are short and not very varied in character.¹ The material that they supply for study is therefore somewhat scanty, but can be dated with considerable accuracy.

Obverse legends. The obverse legend usually consists of the name of the Emperor, preceded by DN (Dominus noster) and followed by PPAVC (Perpetuus Augustus). This applies to the coins from Anastasius I to Justinian II.² Greek inscriptions begin to make their appearance (on the obverse) under Irene, the mother of Constantine VI (A. D. 797–802),³ but Latin is not completely abandoned till the time of Isaac I (A. D. 1057). In the Greek legends, the place of Dominus and Perpetuus Augustus is taken by ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥC or ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥC ΡΩΜΑΙΩΝ; sometimes by ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤ'; and, from the time of Romanus IV (A. D. 1067–1071), by ΔΕCΠΟΤΗC.

³ There are still earlier instances of obv. Greek inscriptions on the 'Provincial' coinage of Leo III (A. D. 720).

Reverse legends. In the earlier reigns we find such legends as Victoria Aug.; Gloria Romanorum; Victori(a) Mauri (Maurice Tiberius). Heraclius introduces Deus adiuta Romanis and the legend EN TΩTO NIKΑ, the latter furnishing the first instance of a Greek legend on Byzantine coins.¹ But it is long before Latin legends are finally discarded. Justinian II introduces IHS CRISTOS REX RESNANTIUM (often used in later reigns). Under Constantine V (A.D. 751) we have IHSYS XRISTYS NICA (ii, p. 380), a curious instance of the mingling of Latin and Greek, and of the partial writing of Greek words in Latin letters, errors into which the engravers of later reigns were prone to lapse; e.g. ΘΕΟΦΥΛΑΚΤΟΣ ΔΕΣΡ^S (Michael I and Theophylact): CVRIE BOHΘH TO SO ΔOVΛO (Theophilus); PICTOS for ΠΙΚΤΟΣ; PΑTHR for ΠΑΤΗΡ (Leo IV). These mixed legends are not completely supplanted by purely Greek legends till about the time of Romanus IV (A.D. 1067-1071).

A

The usual form is A (sometimes Δ). The form A is very rare; it is found chiefly at Carthage and Ravenna. At Carthage the straggling form Δ is often used. Δ is not very common, and chiefly occurs in the word ANNO.

B

B, or with the lower lobe projecting as in the word CONOB. From the time of Tiberius II onwards, b, or more usually б.

D

D (Anastasius I—Justin II: on the coins of Justin II and Maurice Tiberius carelessly formed so that it appears nearly as O). Under Tiberius II Θ comes in and tends to oust D in later reigns. (Under Heraclius, δ occurs; under Constantine V, σ ; on coins of Artavasdes and Leo VI, ς .)

G

C; C, the latter form often carelessly engraved so as to resemble I; e.g. AVI = AVC. G is not found. Under Tiberius II we find S (in A4S), which form occurs in later reigns as well as G and 9. Under Justinian II S and G are found as forms of G.

H

M

M, but under Tiberius II m comes in on the Constantinopolitan coins (on coins of Rome and Ravenna the form is m).

Maurice Tiberius. M; m; m; (at Carthage, generally M).

Constantine IV (at Carthage, m).

Constantine V, m, Michael I, m.

Michael III, m (at this period M is chiefly retained in the inscr. REGNANTIYM).

N

N is the usual form. Under Justinian II, n is found, and from the time of Constantine V this form takes the place of N.

R

R. On the coins of Anastasius II Artemius, the Greek P is generally written for R in 'Artemius'.

T

T. The form τ first occurs in the word THEYΠ = Theoupolis (Antioch) under Justinian I, whose other coins, however, have T (τ also often occurs on the blundered coins of Antioch struck under Justin II).

T continues in use till the reign of Heraclius, when τ begins to be used, and is the usual form subsequently employed (the form T is, however, also retained in stereotyped legends like VICTORIA AVG).

Ϛ is an occasional variant of τ (Constantine IV, Justinian II, &c.). The form Ϛ, found on some coins of Constans II (pp. 266, 301), is no doubt τ with the abbreviation mark / subjoined. Anastasius II has T; Theodosius III, T and τ. Under Leo VI (p. 445) the form Ϛ is found.

V

V (as in AVC; VOT). Under Tiberius II, υ becomes prominent as in VICTOR(ia) TIBERI and υΙΥ (i.e. vivat) FELIX (p. 106), but V is found at Carthage, as in LVX MVNDI.

Maurice Tiberius has V.

Phocas, Heraclius, Constans II, use both υ and V. Afterwards, υ is the usual form. (A rare form υ is found, p. 54.)

II. GREEK INSCRIPTIONS.

A

Usually Δ ; also Λ . Under Nicephorus II, Phocas, John I and Basil I, Λ sometimes occurs. Δ (p. 221, No. 267, Heraclius) is found on a coin of Heraclius struck at Isaura and Δ occurs also on coins of John VIII (see infra, p. 637, note 1 and p. 641, note 1).

GREEK
INSCRIPTIONS.

The form Λ (Alexandria, Heraclius, p. 227) is exceptional. The transverse bar is sometimes omitted, notably on the coins of Alexius I (Λ for Δ).

Beta as a numeral often occurs on the coins. It has the forms β , β , β and β (chiefly sixth and seventh centuries).

β occurs in such words as $\beta\Lambda\text{SLIS}$, $\beta\Lambda\text{SILISSH}$ (Constantine V; Irene); $\text{MIXAHL } \beta\Lambda\text{SILE}$ (Michael I); $\beta\text{OH}\Theta\text{H}$ (Theophilus), but in these cases there is a curious mixture of Greek and Latin.

Under John I Zimisceus, the \mathbf{R} form appears, as in $\text{ROH}\Theta\text{H}$ (for $\beta\text{OH}\Theta\text{H}$). Also $\text{H } \mathbf{R}\Lambda\text{XEPNITICCA}$, i.e. the Virgin of Blachernae (coins of Theodora); $\text{RACI}\Lambda\text{EVS } \mathbf{P}\Omega\text{M}$ (Isaac I). Cp. p. 527, note 1.

Under Andronicus II and later Emperors the \mathbf{B} form once again takes the place of the \mathbf{R} form.

E

ϵ (not E) is the almost invariable form. On coins of Andronicus II and III (A.D. 1325–1328), ϵ has the form ϵ or ϵ (p. 626 n.).

K

K. The Latin letter C used for K appears under Constantine V and is the usual form till about the time of Isaac I (A.D. 1057) when K re-asserts itself. $\epsilon\text{C } \Theta\epsilon\chi = \epsilon\text{K } \Theta\epsilon\text{OY}$; $\text{C}\epsilon = \text{K}\epsilon = \text{KAI}$ (Basil I); $\text{CVRI}\epsilon$ sic = $\text{KVPI}\epsilon$.

 Λ

Λ ; but the Latin L often takes its place, as in $\text{DOVLO} = \Delta\text{OV}\Lambda\text{W}$ (Theophilus).

M

Ξ

This letter chiefly occurs on the rude coins of the Alexandrian mint where we find Ξ (Justinian I, p. 62; Justin II, p. 97); Ζ (Tiberius II, p. 121); Ξ (Maurice Tiberius, p. 148).

Ξ in ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΣ (coins of Basil I, p. 437, No. 5, and of Leo VI, p. 447).

Ξ in ΟΡΘΟΔΟΞΩ (silver of Isaac I).

Σ or Ζ is usual in the spelling of the name of Alexius I, but Ξ is also used.

Ζ and Ξ (Alexius III).

Π

Ρ

Ρ; but until about the time of Constantine IX the Latin R is often used, as in the word ΡΩΜΑΙΩΝ; again, we find on coins of Basil II ΡΟΡΦΥΡΟΥ (i.e. ΡΟΡΦΥΡΟΓΕΝΝΗΤΩ as written on coins of Theodora).

Σ

The Latin S is often used for Σ till about the time of Constantine IX when the lunate sigma—C—becomes the regular form. The straggling form 2 or 3 sometimes occurs under Manuel I and later (see p. 572, note 1, infra and p. 630).

Υ

Υ is used for Υ (as in ΘΕΥ = ΘΕΟΥ). But the form in the purely Greek inscriptions is V.

Ω

Nearly always Ω, but sometimes approximating to W, as on the coins of Romanus I, circ. A.D. 919. Ω sometimes occurs, as under Constantine X (p. 515) and under Alexius I (p. 543).

ABBREVIATION MARKS.

These do not frequently occur till the time of Constantine VI or ABBREVIATIONS. Nicephorus II Phocas, when they become common.

The usual mark is / as in ΔΕΣΠΟ/ (despotés); S also occurs, as in ΒΑΣΙΛΕS; SCLS; also 3.

S = et or ΚΑΙ (SIR = et Irene; period of Constantine VI).

C = S = et (Constans II, p. 259).

On coins of Constans II, ~ and ~ are perhaps marks of abbreviation (see infra, p. 266 n.).

The omission of letters is sometimes marked by -, as in the familiar $\overline{\text{MP}} \overline{\text{ΘY}}$ accompanying the figure of the Virgin; $\overline{\text{SCL}}^{\text{S}} = \text{Sicil}^{\text{S}}$.

More rarely a dot indicates an abbreviation, as in $\text{EN X}\dot{\text{W}}$, i.e. EN XPICTW (John I, Zimiscees). On a coin of Leo VI (ii, p. 444, No. 1) we find J , in the word $\text{ROM}\dot{\text{W}}\text{H}$, i.e. ROMAIWN .

$\text{Θ} = \text{Α} = \delta \text{ ἄγιος}$ before the name of a Saint; e.g. $\text{Θ ΘEOΔWP}\text{OZ}$, St. Theodore (coins of Manuel I).

LIGATURES.

These are of very rare occurrence till the time of Alexius I. Those found are chiefly as follows:— MH (in KOMNHNW);

$\text{NH} = \text{NH}$; $\overline{\text{W}} = \tau\overline{\text{ϕ}}$; Ϛ and $\text{ϚI} = \Sigma\text{T}$ (Alexius III, pp. 599, 600); $\overline{\text{W}}$ in $\text{ΓE}\overline{\text{W}}\text{ΓIOC}$ = St. George (Alexius III); $\text{Ϛ} = \text{OY}$; $\overline{\text{MP}} = \text{MHTHP}$; $\text{P} = \Sigma\text{T}$ (Andronicus II, p. 615); $\Delta\text{H} = \Delta\text{H}$; $\text{A} = \text{EY}$ (John VIII, p. 640); $\text{HAN}\Delta.\text{A}$ = Manuel II; TTA Manuel II = Palaeologus.

MONOGRAMS.

The monogrammatic combinations that are so characteristic of Byzantine art occur but rarely on the coins. Their use is, in fact, mainly confined to the city of Cherson, where monograms form the usual 'types' of the coins from Romanus I to the period of Basil II and Constantine VIII, i.e. circ. 920–1025. Some coins of Justinian I also bear monograms as a 'type' (i, pp. 72, 73): these are of 'Uncertain mints', though possibly of Cherson (p. xviii, supra). The monograms of the Justinian period are arranged so as to form a block of letters; but from the time of Constantine VII and Romanus I, the letters of the monogram are usually attached to the extremities of a cross; e.g. Pl. LII. 14.

MONOGRAMS.

Apart from these instances the monogram is hardly found except to indicate the names of various Emperors:—Heraclius (subsidiary device in field); Pl. XXIII. 10, rev., &c. J = monogram of Constans II and of Constantine IV (p. 267 n.; Pl. XXXIV. 15; Pl. XXXVII. 21); monogram of Justinian II, p. 339, No. 47 (Sicily); monogram of Tiberius III (Pl. XL. 18). See also at end of Index III.

NUMERALS.

The officina numerals and the marks of denomination (e.g. $\text{M} = 40$ nummia) are in Greek.

Dates (see further, infra) are nearly always indicated by Roman numerals, and the following examples may be cited:—

NUMERALS.

$\text{V} = 5$ (usual form). $\text{IIII} = 5$ (Justin II, p. 94).

4 = 6 (usual form). 4I = 6 (Justin II).

VII = 7 (Heraclius, Ravenna).

4II, 4III and 444 = 8 (Justin II); VIII = 8 (Justin II, Carthage). (On a coin of Heraclius, No. 469, p. 253, infra, 4III = 8 occurs. This coin is attributed doubtfully to Ravenna: the use of 4 instead of the V usually found at Ravenna is one of the reasons for regarding the attribution to that mint as doubtful.)

IX = 9 or 11? (Justin II, p. 95).

4IX = 13 (Maurice Tiberius, p. 147).

X4 = 15 (Justinian I).

X4I, X4 = 16 (Justinian I); 4IX = 16 (Maurice Tiberius, p. 147);

XVI = 16 (Heraclius, Ravenna).

44IX = 17 (Maurice Tiberius, p. 147).

XX4, XXVI = 26 (Justinian I).

XX4444, XXVIII, XX444 = 29 (Justinian I).

XXX4I, XXXVII = 37 (Justinian I).

DATES.

Dates first make their appearance in 'years 12' of Justinian I (A. D. 538/9), and occur regularly (though only on the bronze money, and not on all denominations of the bronze) till the reign of

Constans II. After that reign (as will be seen below) they are rarely found.

The dates nearly always indicate regnal years, the first year of the 'reign' being reckoned from the day on which the Emperor became Caesar or Augustus, a creation which may have taken place before his sole reign began. For example, Tiberius II, who became Augustus and sole ruler 26 Sept. 578, dates his (Constantinopolitan) coins from Dec. 574, when he was created Caesar by Justin II.

Dating by Indictions is found only on coins of Maurice Tiberius and Constans II.

JUSTINIAN I. Regnal years. At Thessalonica (p. 41, infra), the letters A P occur, with no accompanying date. It is not certain whether these stand for anno primo.

JUSTIN II. Regnal years, dated from his accession. (At Carthage, p. 97, infra, PR ANNO presumably = primo anno.)

TIBERIUS II. On his coins of Constantinople, the earliest date found is 'year 4', reckoned from his Caesarship of A. D. 574, and therefore indicating the year 578, the first year of his sole reign. But at Thessalonica, years '1' and '3' occur, apparently reckoned from the first year of his sole reign, i. e. from A. D. 578. At the Thessalonica mint, however, there are other dates (year 8, &c.) which are reckoned, in the usual way, from his Caesarship of 574.

At Antioch, the system of dating presents some difficulties which are discussed infra, pp. 125, 126.

MAURICE TIBERIUS. Regnal years. At Carthage the only dates found are the Indictions.

PHOCAS. Regnal years.

HERACLIUS. Regnal years. At the Carthage mint dates are not found, unless the numerals inscribed on some of its gold coins are dates rather than officina numerals (p. 232, infra).

CONSTANS II. At Constantinople, some of the coins are dated in the usual way (by regnal years), but a curious series of numerals is also found there which may be either dates (regnal years), or dates (regnal years) combined with the officina number. This latter class is discussed infra, p. 268.

In Sicily, there is a case of dating by Indiction (cp. coins of Maurice Tiberius), and on the K and I attributed to Sicily, a date 'year 1' occurs, perhaps indicating the first year of the residence of Constans II at Syracuse (A. D. 662; see p. 305, infra).

CONSTANTINE IV. Dates (regnal years) occur at Ravenna, but at Constantinople they cease to appear except in an isolated instance, viz.
X = year 30 = A. D. 683/4, reckoned in the usual way, from A. D. 654, the first year of Constantine's Augustus-ship.

JUSTINIAN II. A few dates occur during his first and second reigns (see pp. 335, 356). In the following reigns no dates are found, and the bronze coins, on which alone it had been customary to mark the dates, now become rare.

CONSTANTINE V (A. D. 741-775). The only date found—and it is apparently an exceptional commemorative date—is

N X
N X

A. D. 749/50, reckoning from 25 March, 720, when Constantine was made Augustus by Leo III (see p. 380).

On coins of Leo IV and Constantine VI no dates are found.

N X
N X
N X

Constantine V). The same combination of letters and numerals is repeated in subsequent reigns, but finally ceases in the time of THEOPHILUS. As this combination is found on coins of Emperors who reigned less than thirty years, it cannot indicate 'year 30'. Probably it is a religious ejaculation, Χριστὸς νικᾷ, thrice repeated (see p. 400, infra).

In concluding this Introduction, I am anxious to express my indebtedness, especially in regard to its historical section (§ 2), to the writings of Finlay, Bury, Diehl, Schlumberger and other scholars whose monographs are cited in these volumes. I am also indebted to Professor Oman's brilliant sketch of Byzantine history, and to the learned historical summary by Gelzer appended to Krumbacher's great work on Byzantine Literature.

In preparing the main body of the Catalogue I have referred throughout to Sabatier's Description (1862), a laborious and useful work, though defective in many ways, as has long been recognized. De Saulcy's Essai de classification (1836), I have also found well worth reading. Yet there are numerous problems in connexion with Byzantine coins which these meritorious numismatists did not suspect or did not attempt to solve, and it is to be regretted that their successors, the numismatists of the last forty years, have—with a solitary exception or two, such as Dr. Kubitschek and M. Svoronos—almost entirely neglected the study of Byzantine coins—a field of study which (it cannot be denied) is at times an arid one, but which would already have yielded to historical students an infinitely better crop had it been sown with a more liberal hand and cultivated with less intermittent care. There is one numismatist, indeed, the late Count J. F. W. de Salis, who, although he left little in print or manuscript on Byzantine coins, must be gratefully remembered by an official of the British Museum writing on this topic. For de Salis not only enriched our national collection with numberless Byzantine and quasi-Byzantine coins (barbarous imitations, &c.), but classified the series with his usual skill and acumen. Unfortunately, his arrangement was in many places left incomplete, and he published nothing to record or justify his classification—a classification no doubt often suggested by the knowledge of provenance which as an ardent collector he probably possessed. His special service to the scientific study of Byzantine coins is the discrimination attempted by him between the Imperial and the non-Imperial money, and if I have been able to carry this division farther it is because the path has been indicated by this remarkable numismatist.

For kind help in reading the proof-sheets of these volumes, I have greatly to thank Mr. Grueber, the Keeper of Coins, and Mr. G. F. Hill. Mr. O. M. Dalton has also been so kind as to read the proofs of the Introduction and has made several valuable additions and corrections.

BYZANTINE COINS

ANASTASIUS I

11 APRIL, 491—1 JULY, 518

The primary classification of the coins is under Mints, which, in the present reign, are as follows: I. Constantinople; II. Nicomedia; III. Antioch.

No.	Weight	Metal and Size	Obverse	Reverse
Solidus
1	68.6	A .8	DNANASTA SIVSP PAVC¹ Bust of Anastasius, beardless, with head three-quarters r.; wears helmet with plume and armour; r. hand holds spear behind his head; l. hand (not represented) supports shield decorated with the group of a horseman r. attacking with spear a prostrate enemy.¹	VICTORI AAVCCC Winged Victory in chiton and peplos standing l., holding in r. staff surmounted by sacred monogram (✠); in ex., CONO B; in field l., star. B at end of inscr. [Pl. I. 1.]

² The type and legend recur under Justinian I, infra 'Carthage', At: cp. Sab., Pl. XII. 11 (VOT MVLT HTI). Cp. also Pinder and Friedlaender, Münzen Justinians, p. 26.

COINS WITH NAME OF ANASTASIUS NOT STRUCK AT THE IMPERIAL MINTS.

In this reign, and in the following reigns, only those coins are catalogued which there is reason to think were struck at the Imperial mints (in the present case, Constantinople, Nicomedia, and Antioch). The numerous imitations (chiefly in gold, and of the fifth, sixth, and seventh centuries) of the Emperors' coinages which were struck by the Ostrogoths and other invaders of the Empire are reserved for description in a future volume. The British Museum collection of Ostrogothic, Vandalic, &c., coinages was originally arranged by Count de Salis (cp. Keary, The Coinages of Western Europe, 1879), who has divided the various series with his usual numismatic acumen. The chief criteria are furnished by style and provenance.

The following are brief notes on the imitations of the coins of Anastasius:—

GOLD.—Solidus. The Victory on the rev. usually holds a broad-limbed cross, not the monogrammatic cross of the Imperial mints, though this latter type is occasionally imitated (see supra, p. 2, n. 1). On the solidi assigned by de Salis to the Vandals the lettering is curious and the type somewhat rude.

¹ The attribution to Anastasius is not quite certain.

The Visigothic solidi, also, are not hard to distinguish from the Imperial coins: they frequently read COHOB. The series classed by de Salis as 'Italian imitations' are often of good work (except sometimes in the treatment of the eyes on the obv.) but have rev. Victory with broad-limbed cross. The Burgundian and Merovingian imitations are rude. Tremissis. This denomination is often reproduced, but usually with rev. Victory in profile with wreath and palm. The rev. of the Imperial tremissis has a different Victory (PI. I. 4, 5). The legends of the Visigothic and 'Italian' tremisses are often blundered. The Imperial tremissis is itself of poor work, and in cases where its reverse type is exactly copied discrimination is difficult. The details of the Emperor's cuirass are, however, less exact in the imitative pieces and the brooch of the paludamentum is sometimes omitted. Count de Salis classes some pieces reading COMOB (cp. Rev. belge, 1867, p. 156) as Italian imitations.

SILVER.—Sabat., No. 11, rev. monogram in wreath, has peculiar letters and high relief. Ostrogothic or Italian. Sabat., No. 12, rev. 'Invicta Roma'. Probably Ostrogothic, struck at Rome: see Friedlaender, Münzen d. Ostgothen, p. 55. The well-executed gold and silver coins of Theodoric the Ostrogothic monarch (A. D. 493) bear the name and bust of Anastasius, but are distinguished by Theodoric's monogram (Keary, op. cit., p. 45 f.).

VITALIANVS. Most of the coins that have been published as those of Vitalian (for whose revolt see Introd., supra, § 2, 'Anastasius I') are undoubtedly barbarous pieces of the time of Justin I, Justinian I, &c. Thus a tremissis which reads IAVITA JIVOVAVG, and which has been attributed to Vitalian, is undoubtedly a barbarous coin (Visigothic), probably of the time of Justin I or later. (Two specimens in British Museum.) See further Sabatier, i, p. 157; de Saulcy, Essai, p. 6; Friedlaender, Repertorium, p. 426; Rev. belge, 1857, p. 10. There is a tremissis, however, in the possession of Mr. J. W. Barron (1907) which appears to read DNVITALIANVS (obv. beardless diademed head, rev. Victory). Unless this legend has been altered from DNIVSTINIANVS the coin must be of Vitalian.

BRONZE.—Small Æ with rev. V in wreath. The wreath, the Roman (instead of Greek) numeral and the style of the obv. (with type and letters in rather prominent relief) indicate that this coin is of Italian mintage. This being so, it cannot have been struck by Anastasius, but must be an Ostrogothic coin bearing the head and titles of the Emperor as was usually the case with the 'barbarian' coins.

² Rev. num. iv (1839), p. 244; Pl. X. 3, with DNIVS IVSTVSP, is apparently of Justin I and Justinian I.

COINS WITH THE NAME OF JUSTIN I NOT STRUCK AT THE IMPERIAL MINTS.

SOLIDUS.—As stated above (note 2, p. 11) even the solidi that appear to have emanated from the Imperial mint are deeply tinged with barbarism. Besides these we have the following Italian imitations: (i) rev. Victory l. with broad cross. COMOB. obv. of fairly good work; (ii) rev. Victory with monogrammatic cross, rude work; (iii) later, extremely barbarous. Other imitations, apparently Burgundian, are very similar to the 'Italian' both of classes i and ii. Montagu Cat., lot 1092 (now in British Museum) belongs to this series. TREMISSIS. Burgundian and Visigothic imitations; rev. Victory r. with wreath. The Visigothic pieces are of rough work. There are also 'Italian' imitations with the same rev. type as those of the Imperial mint, but distinguished by the high relief of the letters. (The treatment of the letters in high relief is characteristic of the Æ coins struck in Italy—Ostrogothic, &c.)

VANDALIC SILVER.—Obv. name and head of IVSTINVS in profile; rev. FELIX CARTA; female figure standing. Though this coin is assigned by Sabatier (No. 17) to Justin I, it is clear that it cannot have been struck by the authority of Justin I, i. e. before the taking of Carthage, which did not occur till the reign of Justinian. Mr. Keary (Coinages of Western Europe, p. 36; cp. p. 32) supposes that the coin was struck by Justin II, and though this is a possible view, I am inclined to doubt it for the following reasons:—(i) We have other Æ (African) coins of Justin II with obv. head facing; rev. FELIX RESPVBL(ica). (ii) The Felix Carta type first occurs on coins of Hilderic the Vandal king, A. D. 523–30 (Friedl., Vandalen, Pl. I, and pp. 30–3). There is great difficulty in supposing that Justin II would have adopted a Vandal type, and one, moreover, that had been for many years disused, for it was never adopted by his predecessor Justinian for his African coinage.

It will thus be seen that there are difficulties in assigning the coin either to Justin I or to Justin II. I therefore regard it as a Vandalic issue of the period of Justin I. There are, of course, numerous instances of the barbarian rulers placing the name and head of the reigning Emperor on the obverses of their coins.

OSTROGOTHIC SILVER.—There are a number of small Æ (rev. CN; ^P_{†*} &c.; also Æ with rev. K) which bear the name and head of IVSTINVS. It is certain from style and provenance that these were struck in Italy. They closely resemble (on the obv.) the silver coins that bear the names or monograms of the Ostrogothic kings, and I believe the whole series to be Ostrogothic, struck either during the lifetime of Justin I, or possibly even after his death, for in style (especially in the case of the obv.) many of them seem to be later than the silver coins of Justinian. Baduila, when at war with Justinian, is known (Keary, Coinages of Western Europe, p. 52) to have placed on his money the head and name of the long-deceased emperor, Anastasius I, and he may also have adopted on his money the head of Justin I.

BRONZE.—Small Æ with rev. V in wreath. These must be Ostrogothic; cp. similar coins with name of Anastasius, supra, p. 10, 'Bronze'.

Small Æ with rev. € and † in wreath. Although these have the Greek (not Roman) numeral, I am inclined to regard them as Ostrogothic on account of the wreath and the style of the obv., with head and letters in prominent relief. (One specimen (British Museum) has rev. EN, the wreath being omitted.)

I. CONSTANTINOPLE
Circ. A. D. 534?
			DNIVSTINII (sic) ANVSPPA VC Bust of Justinian, nimbate, three-quarter face to r.; wears richly ornamented helmet with plume of peacocks' feathers; also diadem, cuirass and military cloak fastened by brooch; in his r. hand, spear; behind l. shoulder, shield. Border of dots.	SALVSETCLORIA RO- MANO RVM Justinian on horse riding r., preceded by winged Victory in chiton and mantle, holding in l. palm-branch and trophy of arms. Justinian is nimbate and diademed, and wears plumed helmet, cuirass with pteryges, military cloak and boots. On the horse is a decorated saddle-cloth and jewelled trappings. In field, star; in ex., CONOB: border of dots.

FRONTISPIECE.—A, size 3.35 inches. Photographed from an electrotpe (in the British Museum) of the original, which was formerly in the French Collection. The only specimen of this medallion that has ever come to light was found in 1751 at Caesarea in Cappadocia. It passed into the French Collection, but was melted down by the thieves who plundered the coin-cabinet in 1831. A mould, fortunately taken from the original some time before this date, has been preserved in the British Museum, and from this electrotypes have been made for the French and English collections. See Babelon, Mélanges numismatiques, iii, p. 305 f., and his article in Rev. num., 1899, p. 1 f.; Pinder and Friedlaender, Münzen Justinians, p. 18 f., Pl. II. Cp. note, infra, under Tiberius II Constantine, as to the gold medallion sent to Chilperic.

The original weighed 'cinq onces deux gros', equivalent to 36 solidi or half a Roman pound (Babelon, Mélanges, pp. 312 and 321). The head-dress on the obr. is like the τοῦ φη worn by the equestrian figure of Justinian in the Augusteum at Constantinople; see Diehl, Justinien, p. 27. With the rev. type compare the Barberini ivory (frontispiece to Diehl's Justinien), where, however, the imperial figure has been called by Strzygowski (Der Dom zu Aachen, p. 49) Constantine the Great. Cp. also the Kertch silver disk (Diehl, op. cit., p. 30) and a plaque in British Museum, Dalton, Cat. Christian Antiq., No. 543.

With regard to the date of the medallion, Babelon (Mélanges, iii, p. 331) cites Cedrenus (vol i, p. 649, ed. Bonn) to the effect that this Emperor struck a coin representing himself on one side and on the other side his general Belisarius in armour and the inscription Βελισάριος ἡ δόξα τῶν Ῥωμαίων. In this passage Babelon sees, and no doubt rightly, an allusion to this gold medallion, though the description of the reverse figure as Belisarius is an inexactitude. The description of Cedrenus may, however, give a clue to the date, and Babelon would assign the issue of this medallion to the time when Belisarius celebrated at Constantinople his triumph for his conquest of Africa [spring of A. D. 534]. It may be added that the bust on this medallion bears a general resemblance to the bust that appears on those gold solidi of Justinian that were issued previous to his twelfth year, i. e. 538/9. In that year a new bust (differing from the bust on the gold medallion) was introduced. The date of the medallion is therefore in all probability not later than A. D. 538, and may be as early as A. D. 534.

² A rare coin (cp. the specimen at Paris, also with I, figured by Pinder and Friedl., p. 71= Sab., No. 1). Both the 'three-quarter face' and the later 'full-face' solidi have on the rev. a facing Victory. The appearance of this profile Victory is, therefore, remarkable. Possibly the coin may not belong to the Constantinopolitan mint, but there is no particular evidence in the matter.

¹ Probably the numerals have no significance at this period, and are more or less blundered. Cp. Pinder and Friedl., op. cit., p. 22.

² These are of careless work, especially on the rev. In spite of this they appear to belong to the Constantinople mint; the style of the Italian tremisses is very different. A specimen of the Constantinople tremissis of better style than our Nos. 22-5 belongs to the Nikosia Museum, Cyprus.

There is, no doubt, considerable difficulty in supposing that Constantinople issued this double series of coins in year 14, and it may be thought that the K coins without mint-names cannot belong to Constantinople. On the other hand, it would be surprising if the capital which issued 1 coins (with mint-names) did not issue the higher denomination, K, year by year. The small K coins marked CON can hardly be its sole issues of this denomination, and I am disposed to attribute the whole series of K coins to this mint.

K coins marked  and  are attributed infra to Antioch.

² This rev. type is produced, unintentionally, by the impression of the obv. type of another coin (from the same die), which, through an oversight, was not removed from between the dies after being struck. Similar instances are found in the earlier Roman mints, and indeed in mints of most periods and countries.

³ The letter P occurs on K coins assigned infra to Antioch. But all the dated I coins of that mint have the full-face type on obv. Constantinople seems to be the most likely mint.

DNIVSTINI ANVSP
PAVC Bust of Justinian r. beardless, wearing diadem, cuirass and paludamentum.

¹ The coins with € are without the mint-name. Some € coins with a letter (numeral) in front of the € were struck by Anastasius I (Pl. II. 1) presumably at Constantinople—or, at any rate, not at any African or Italian mint. The € coins of Justinian I may, therefore, with some probability, be attributed to Constantinople, with the exception of one class, which shows the € encircled by a wreath and which is of thicker fabric than usual. These thick coins, in type, resemble the Ostrogothic bronze pieces bearing the name of Justin I (cp. also those with the name of Justinian), and I am inclined to regard them as Ostrogothic issues, although the style and lettering of their obverses is not distinctively Italian. Of these Ostrogothic € coins there are two obv. types, profile and full-face.

The coins of the € denomination with rev. monogram of Justinian within C (i. e. €), obv., a head and blundered legend, are described infra under 'Uncertain mints' of Justinian I. Another series of € coins with obv., monogram of Justinian I, is also described among the 'Uncertain' of Justinian.

There are also scarce € coins of Cyzicus, marked K (see infra): the fabric of these is like that of the € coins here assigned to Constantinople.

¹ Varieties exist with a cross (Pinder and Friedl., p. 41) and ✠ (Revue belge, 1862, p. 183) above the Δ . No. 180 was found at Athens (Finlay, Hist. of Greece, i, p. 446), as were also Nos. 181, 182, marked ┐ and B. The ┐ and B coins closely resemble in the style of their obverses the obv. of No. 180, and I have no hesitation in attributing them to Thessalonica. The coins of this mint are pieces of 16, 8 and 4 units, with 3 and 2 as smaller change. The ordinary Imperial system of 40, 20, &c., only makes its appearance here at the end of the reign (see coins with K). In Mommsen's view (Monn. rom., iii, p. 166), the coins of Thessalonica marked '16' (Ϟ), '8,' and '4' are probably 'des seizièmes, trente-deuxièmes et soixante-quatrièmes de siliqua, et peuvent être évaluées à 15 ⁵/₈, 7 ¹³/₁₆, 3 ²⁹/₃₂ deniers.' CHERSON. For a coin attributed by Sabatier to this mint, see Sab., No. 130 (Justinian I); cp. Pinder and Friedl., p. 41.

¹ The coins of this mint which bear the name ‘Antioch’ must be earlier than Nov. 29, 528, when the city, having suffered severely from an earthquake, assumed the name of Θεούπολις, which is henceforth always found on the coins (H. Leclercq in Cabrol’s Dict., ‘Antioche’, p. 2390). (The title of the Patriarch was ὁ πατριάρχης τῆς μεγάλης θεοῦ πόλεως Ἀντιοχείας, Pinder and Friedl., p. 32 n.; Schlumberger, Sigil., p. 314, &c.)

The coins with the name ‘Theoupolis’ (written sometimes in Latin) probably extend from circ. A. D. 529 onwards. There are three obv. types: (i) profile, (ii) seated figure, (iii) full-face. The full-face type, introduced at most mints in year 12, i.e. A. D. 538/9, here first appears in year 13=A. D. 539/40. There are no coins of year 14=April, 540–March, 541, a circumstance accounted for by the destruction of Antioch by Chosroes in June, 540. Subsequently the city was again rebuilt and beautified by Justinian, and there are coins of many of the later years of his reign.

The name of Theoupolis is still found on a seal of a Byzantine Duke of Antioch of the eleventh century—ΔΟΥΞ ΤΗΣ ΜΕΓΑΛΗΣ ΘΕΟΥΠΟΛΕΩ(ς) ANTIOX(εας), Schlumberger, Sigil., p. 310, No. 4.

² There are two principal varieties: (i) with the mint-name written in Greek, (ii) with the mint-name in Latin. S at end of the Greek name is an abbreviation mark.

¹ Nos. 317-23 may be attributed to Antioch on account of ¹, P, and P, which seem to indicate abbreviations of the legends ΤΗΥ, ΤΗΥP, and ΤΗΕΥP found on the M coins of Antioch. In point of style also these pieces agree fairly well with the M pieces. The obv. of No. 319 is remarkably like in style to the obv. of an I coin bearing the name of Antioch, No. 327 infra.

The coins with ¹ had already been attributed to Antioch by Sabatier (No. 79), as well as another variety with ΤΗ (No. 78).

² These appear to be the earliest coins issued at Alexandria during the 'Byzantine' period. The Alexandrian coins marked IB, assigned by Sabatier (Pl. XI. 15) and other writers to Justin I, may, it seems to me, be much more conveniently assigned to Justin II (see Pl. XIII. 1), (i) because the increase in the number of the mints of the Empire appears to begin with Justinian, (ii) because these pieces are ruder in style than the corresponding coins struck by Justinian, but (iii) chiefly because IB coins of Alexandria are needed for the reign of Justin II, otherwise there would be an inexplicable gap between Justinian I and Tiberius II Constantine, both of whom issued Alexandrian coins of the same type and fabric.

² Though the bust is worn and the inscription illegible, the coin may with probability be attributed to Justinian. It has the thick fabric and the broad border (on the rev.) of the Alexandrian mint, and differs in fabric from the Γ coins of Thessalonica described supra. Cp. the Æ in Pinder and Friedl., p. 32; obr. Γ, rev. palm-tree.

³ Possibly at the end of A. D. 533; see Introd., supra, § 2, Justinian I (Carthage).

The mint-place may have been Catina, the name of which is recorded on Æ of Maurice Tiberius and later coins. The full-face type of the obv. almost certainly proves that the coin was not issued earlier than A. D. 538. It is thus a few years later than the conquest of Sicily by Belisarius (A. D. 535).

Nos. 400, 401 (rev. cross) are of ruder work on the obv. than No. 399, but the thick fabric and the stars (on rev.) are in favour of the Sicilian attribution. They are evidently of the same denomination as No. 399, and the cross can be so turned that it presents nearly the appearance of X.

¹ On this mint see Introd., § 2, Justinian I, Italian mints; also infra, on 'Coins with the name of Justinian not struck at Imperial mints'. The word ANNO and the date on this coin recall the money of Ravenna (cp. Pinder and Friedl., p. 47), but the attribution to Rome seems preferable (i) from the resemblance to the Æ of Rome struck by Justinian's successors, (ii) because Greek (not Latin) numerals (for the denomination) appear to be usual on the Ravenna coins of Justinian's reign.

XI. UNCERTAIN MINTS

Silver

Small silver pieces with obv. helmeted head, rev. K (also rev. R, &c.), are assigned by Sabatier (i, p. 180, Nos. 23, 24, Pl. XII. 9, 10) to the time of Justinian I 'on grounds of style', but it can hardly be said that their style is conspicuously like that of the coins of this emperor. Some pieces are of neater work than others, and some of the heads may be compared with the heads on the Invicta Roma series of Æ Ostrogothic coins (Sab., Pl. XIX. 25). A solitary specimen (obv. bearded head, l., rev. K) occurred in the Chatby (Alexandria) find (see infra) of 'Byzantine' gold coins, which ranged in date from Constantius II to Heraclius, i. e. fourth cent. A. D. to circ. A. D. 641. Their date is not easily determined, but they would seem to be not earlier than the fifth or later than the middle of the seventh century. I think also it may be a question whether these pieces are not tesserae rather than coins.

Sabatier interpreted K and R as 'Constantinople' and 'Rome', but he did not know of a third variety with P on the rev., which can hardly be identified as the initial-letter of a city-name.

The British Museum possesses the following specimens (sizes .45 in. to .6 in.):—

I.

¹ Cp. Pinder and Friedl., p. 55 f.; Koehne, Mus. Kotschoubey, i, p. 205. The obv. legend appears to be always blundered, and it is possible that these coins are not the product of any Imperial mint.

² Sabatier's interpretation (i, p. 191, No. 125) as Φ. IOVCTINIANOVOC, or rather Φ. IOVCTINIANOV, seems almost certain, though the use of < for C or Γ is somewhat curious (Sabatier's Pl. XVII. 5 is incorrectly drawn).

Most of Justinian's coins of the E denomination appear to have been struck at Constantinople (see note, supra, p. 39); some others at Cyzicus. The specimens here described (No. 414 ff.) have usually jagged or irregular flans, like the smaller Æ of Thessalonica. They might, therefore, be attributed to that mint, were it not that the denomination E (5) does not readily find a place in the system of division (16, 8, 4) that predominated at Thessalonica. Information as to the usual provenance of these coins is desirable. Some pieces are of thick fabric. (Koehne, Mus. Kot., i, p. 203, strives to read the inscr. as the name of Cherson, and assigns the coins to that city.)

COINS WITH THE NAME OF JUSTINIAN I NOT STRUCK AT THE IMPERIAL MINTS.

GOLD.—Visigothic. Chiefly tremisses of very barbarous work (rev. Victory in profile with wreath). Some solidi classed by de Salis as Hispano-Byzantine are rather rude on obv. (facing type) and read P.P.AV or PAVI sic.

Burgundian. Solidus. Obv. inscr. blundered; rude bust with head in high relief. Rev. Victory in profile.

Ostrogothic and Italian. Solidi. Three-quarter face type of bust on obv. Rev. Victory in profile holding broad cross, inscr. COMOB. These are certainly not Imperial. Also obv. Full-face type. Rev. Victory facing, holding long cross. Some of these are obviously non-Imperial, with the face very broad and large eyes, a caricature of the ordinary full-face type. On the other hand some of the better-executed specimens of this full-face type may possibly be issues of the Imperial mint (Rome or Ravenna), but this is doubtful. On the whole, however, a comparison with the non-Imperial Italian coins (especially with the obv.) rather suggests that these pieces also are not Imperial but Ostrogothic. A solidus at Berlin (Z. f. N., i, p. 303) and a neatly executed tremissis (Brit. Mus.; cp. Pinder and Friedl., p. 23), each inscribed ROMOB, also have some claim to be regarded as Imperial coins.

The Ostrogothic or Italian tremissis is easily recognized by the comparatively high relief of types and lettering (cp. Pinder and Friedl., p. 24, Pl. III. 5). The Victory on the rev. has a blurred and rough appearance. There are also some very flat thin specimens (Lombardic?).

Indian Imitations.—A thin, bracteate-like gold piece with barbarous legend imitating the solidus (obv. full-face head of Justinian). This was acquired by the British Museum in 1886 from Lieut.-General G. G. Pearse, a well-known collector of Indian coins. There can be little doubt that it was made in antiquity in India, probably in Southern India, where imitations of ancient coins are generally found, according to the information given me by Prof. Rapson.

SILVER.—There are many small coins of various types which are of undoubted Italian work. Specimens in British Museum: rev. cross on globe; star; sacred monogram; monogrammatic cross and stars; CN; PK; PKE, &c. All these have the rev. type enclosed in a wreath. Comparison (especially as regards the high relief of the obv.) with the money of the Ostrogothic kings suggests that these pieces also are Ostrogothic and not coins of the Imperial mint. There are similar Æ with the head of Anastasius and the head of Justin I.

BRONZE.—Pieces of minute size with various rev. types, and obv., usually of barbarous work, diademed head, accompanied by the more or less blundered name of IVST . ., IVSTINIAN . ., &c.; cp. Friedl., Vandalen, pp. 42 f. and 50 f. Some of the rudest pieces appear to have circulated among the Vandals (though some specimens are found in Italy, Friedl., op. cit.), to whom small coins with the heads of earlier emperors had long been familiar. Possibly the issue of these—at a local mint (hardly Carthage)—continued even after the conquest of Africa. These pieces have been little studied by numismatists, and may be left over for description among the coins of the Vandals and Ostrogoths.

The Italian Æ coins are of peculiar style and may be generally recognized by the high relief of the obv., the wreath enclosing the rev. type, the patina, &c. The fine bust of Justinian on the Roman Æ with rev. M in wreath is closely modelled on the bust of Theodahat, as portrayed on his large, thick Æ coinage.

² Cp. Sab., No. 9. The word VICTORIA (which is not the main legend) would at first sight seem to label the figure as Victory. But an unwinged Victory is improbable, and the figure is evidently identical with the figure on Justin's solidi, which (from a comparison with other similar representations) would appear to be Constantinople. VICTORIA, then, is probably an ejaculation, like the VITA on other coins of Justin and Sophia.

An upright projection of the throne is shown on the side of the Empress; this has at first sight the appearance of the side of the throne, but probably it is the upright support of the back of the throne (see the details clearly given on a M coin of Cyzicus of year X, infra, note).

On the mosaic of St. Sophia above the doors of the narthex the Christ is seated on a throne with a horizontal crossbar at the back, which is supported on each side by a nearly semicircular support. In front of the throne is a solid dais-like footstool (Bayet, L'art Byz., p. 53, Fig. 12).

The introduction of this detail on the coins is probably due to a desire for symmetry—the projection of the throne is made to balance the globus cruciger held by the Emperor.

(a) With head of Justin II
See Sab., i, p. 225, No. 4, Pl. XXI. 4. The obv. has the head of Justin II facing, holding globe on which is Victory (like the corresponding K coin, infra). The coin described by Sabatier is of year 2.

			DNIVSTI NVSPP AVC (usually blundered or unintelligible). Justin II (on l.) and Sophia (on r.) nimbate, and wearing tall head-dresses and long drapery, seated facing on double throne. 197	203.5	Æ 1.3	(VNTAC. .ΤΑΜ. 4A) (border of dots)	On r., 4; beneath, Γ II (border of dots)	7= 571/2

² These blundered and unintelligible legends must have been engraved by workmen ignorant of Latin. In most cases letters seem to have been arbitrarily inserted without meaning and without attempt to adumbrate the forms of the original inscription. The only element that remains nearly constant is VN=DN (dominus noster). It is not easy—nor perhaps very important—to reproduce the exact forms that occur in these barbarous legends. On most of Justin's coins (Constantinople, &c.) the D is badly formed (sometimes becoming nearly O) or is placed sideways. This D has given rise to V.

² The I is here both the mark of value (10) and the initial of the Emperor's name. Pinder and Friedl., Münzen Justinians, p. 50, cite Corippus, In laudem Iustini, i. 353-6, where the sanctum Iota of Justin's name is mentioned. So also in the same poem (ii. 139 and 140; cp. Bury, Hist. Later Rom. Emp., ii, p. 70) it is said that the Emperor raised on a shield at his coronation stetit ut sua rectus littera. For other I coins see p. 101.

² An acclamation for the long life of the Emperor and Empress—Iustino et Sophiae vita. Cp. Vita tibi, Felices vivatis, Vivas in Christo, &c., of the inscriptions, and see art. 'Acclamations' in Cabrol, Dict. d'arch. chr. It is doubtful whether VITA occurs on the coins earlier than the reign of Justin II; cp. note on p. 24, note 3, supra. At the coronation of Justin II, according to Corippus, In laud. Iustini, ii. 167-9; cp. l. 1310.

The usual formula of the πολυχρόνιον was εἰς πολλὰ ἔτη 'qua acclamatione mirum quam Graeci delectati fuerint: hinc nihil crebrius apud illos quam illa πολυχρονιάζειν, πολυχρόνισμα, πολυχρόνιον' (Comm. in Codin., De Off., cap. xiv, p. 163, ed. Bonn). Such acclamations were used at the coronation of an Emperor and Prince; at the imperial table (Cod., cap. vii, p. 55, Bonn); at the Christmas Day service attended by the Emperor: ψάλλουσιν οἱ ψάλται τὸ πολυχρόνιον (Cod., cap. vi, p. 52), &c.

¹ The bracteate-like fabric and prominent relief of these gold coins prove that they were struck in Italy, and I am inclined to regard them as Imperial issues of the Ravenna (possibly the Roman) mint. That there was an Imperial mint for gold coins in Italy is in itself probable, and at Ravenna at the end of the sixth century we find mentions of the scrinium aureae massae and of the monetarii auri (Diehl, L'Exarchat de Ravenne, p. 164). The exarch was liberally supplied from the Imperial treasury at Constantinople. Thus, in A.D. 577, 3,000 pounds of gold were sent to him (Diehl, p. 200).

Gold Medallions
Tiberius II sent as presents to Chilperic, king of the Franks, gold coins each weighing a pound. On the obv. was the inscription TIBERII CONSTANTINI PERPETVI AVGVSTI and the image of the Emperor; on the rev. GLORIA ROMANORVM and a chariot and charioteer. These coins were shown by the king to Gregory of Tours (Hist. Franc., vi, 2), but are not now known to exist. In general appearance they must have resembled the large gold medallion of Justinian I described supra, p. 25. ¹ Justin II died 5 October, 578, after inaugurating Tiberius as Emperor in the previous month.

² Most specimens of this type are of very careless work on the obv., but in spite of this they are probably of the Imperial mint; at any rate they have not the unmistakable fabric of Italy. This type of the solidus was probably issued in the first few months of the reign, if we may judge by comparing the obv. type of the Æ M coins (infra, No. 18) struck at Constantinople in year '4' (Sept.-Nov. A. D. 578).

This type of the solidus was probably struck some time between December, 578, and November, 579, because a similar obr. begins to appear on the bronze coins of Constantinople and provincial mints in year '5'=578/9. The type commemorates the first consulship of Tiberius II; cp. Pauly-Wissowa, art. 'Consul', p. 1137.

¹ This specimen was formerly in the Soleirol collection, and was figured in de Saulcy, Ess., Pl. III. 10. It was bought by the Museum of MM. Rollin.

² This obv. type differs somewhat from those that follow. It is copied from an obv. of Justin II and Sophia, but curiously enough not from the obv. used under Justin at Thessalonica, but from one that appeared on the coins of Antioch: Pl. XII 10. Other coins (with obv. like No. 60), infra have year III (Sab., No. 41; Mém. soc. d'arch. St. Pét., iv (1850), p. 305; Photiades Cat., No. 237). Sabatier, No. 28 (= Mém. soc. d'arch. St. Pét., iv (1850), p. 304), describes another piece with year II and with obv. Bust of Tiberius II (alone) facing. Does the coin really belong to the Thessalonica mint, and is Sabatier's reading TES correct? On the date I, see infra, p. 126.

DATES ON THE COINS OF TIBERIUS II.

On the dated coins bearing the name of Tiberius II we find marked the years (ANNO) 1-8 inclusive. [At Antioch on the M coins there is an exceptional year '9', referred to below.] As already remarked under 'Constantinople', supra, p. 108, note 1, the years 5-8 cannot have been reckoned from Tiberius's accession to the Empire—he reigned only about four years—but are calculated from his Caesarship, which began in Dec., A.D. 574, under Justin II. Year 5, therefore, corresponds to Dec., A.D. 578-Nov., 579; year 6 to Dec., 579-Nov., 580, and so on.

It does not appear to have been sufficiently observed that a complication arises when—as at Antioch—we find the whole series of years 1 to 8. At first sight the coins marked 1, 2, 3, 4 would seem to belong to the years of Tiberius's Caesarship (under Justin II), while those marked 5, 6, 7, 8 would be the pieces struck when he became sole ruler. But there are considerable difficulties in supposing that Tiberius II struck coins during his Caesarship, because (i) on coins of years 1-4 he is called Augustus (not Caesar); (ii) it can be proved (from extant dated coins) that during the Caesarship of Tiberius the various mints were issuing money in the name of Justin II; (iii) at Antioch, coins marked 1, 2, 3, and 4 represent Tiberius on the obv. in the character of Consul, a dignity which there is every reason to suppose he did not assume till after he became Emperor, i.e. in his regnal year '5' = A.D. 578/9.

If then the coins of years 1-3 (or 4) were not struck by Tiberius as Caesar, they must, in some way, be compressed into the period of his Imperial rule.

The coins may best be studied at the mint of ANTIOCH, where we find not only the whole series 1-8, but curious variations in the obv. types. Thus years 1, 2, 3, 4 have the 'Consular' obv. But of year 4 there is also an 'Imperial' obv. (Emperor holding globus). Of year 5 there are both Consular and Imperial obverses. (So also in year 7.) Year 8 has the Consular type. There is thus (apparently) an Imperial-type issue running side by side with a Consular-type issue, or rather side by side with two Consular-type series.

The dates on the 'Consular' series must be (as regards 5-8) regnal years reckoned from the Caesarship. Years 1-4 may be either years of the Consulship issued simultaneously with the regnal coins of years 5 to 8, or, possibly, years 1-4 may have been issued en bloc at the accession of Tiberius so as to complete the series of regnal years reckoned from the Caesarship. The following table, compiled from coins in the British Museum and other sources, shows the various 'years' of which coins exist and the alternative schemes for their arrangement:—

DATED COINS OF ANTIOCH

	Obv. Imperial bust		Obv. Consular bust
Sept.-Nov. A. D. 578	Regnal year 4	No coins
Dec. 578-Nov. 579	Regnal year 5	Consular year 1 + Regnal year 5

581-582	No coins	" " 4 + " "	8

(ALTERNATIVE ARRANGEMENT)

	Obv. Imperial bust		Obv. Consular bust
Sept.-Nov. 578	Regnal year 4	No coins
578-579	Regnal year 5	Regnal years 1, 2, 3, 4 + Regnal year 5
579-580	No coins	Regnal year 6
580-581	Regnal year 7	" " 7
581-582	No coins	" " 8

[The year '9' found only on the M coins of Antioch—if not an engraver's error (4111) being written instead of 4111)—may have been arrived at by counting Dec. A. D. 574 when Tiberius became Caesar as a complete year: thus Dec. 574 would be year 1; Jan.-Dec. 575 would be year 2, and so on, yielding nine regnal years. In this case the dating in the tables given above will be slightly disturbed, but the arrangement is not substantially affected.]

At CONSTANTINOPLE (M coins) the Consular type occurs on years 5-8 inclusive. On year 4 we find the Imperial type. [According to Rev. belge, 1862, p. 184, there is a year '1' of the Imperial type.]

At NICOMEDIA and CYZICUS only the Consular type—not earlier than year 5—is found. (The numeral II (= 2) found here is not accompanied by the usual ANNO and perhaps does not indicate 'year 2'; cp. p. 114, note 1, supra.)

The case of THESSALONICA (K coins only) is peculiar. Here the Consular type, which at other mints first appears in year 5, i. e. shortly after Tiberius's accession as Emperor, is not represented at all. The obv., as under Justin II and Sophia, shows the Emperor and Empress seated side by side.

Years 5-8 must here be regnal years, but the rather curious coin in the British Museum (p. 112, No. 59, supra) gives year '1' and Sabatier mentions year 3 (cp. note 2, p. 112, supra). '1' and '3' evidently belong to the sole reign of Tiberius, and not to his Caesarship, because he represents on them the Empress Anastasia as well as himself. In this case there is a double system of dating: years '1' and '3' are reckoned from his accession to the Empire, Sept. 578, and years 5-8 are reckoned from his Caesarship, Dec. 574.

In spite of the rude style of the obv. these coins are perhaps best assigned to the Constantinopolitan mint. At any rate they have not the distinctive fabric of Italian mints. Specimens with Δ and Z occurred set as jewellery in the Cyprus find of Kyrenia: see A. Sambon in Le Musée, iii, April, 1906, pp. 125 and 126.—In the same find occurred also, set as jewellery, four gold 'medallions' of Maurice Tiberius (rev. Emperor in chariot). According to M. Sambon each of these pieces weighed, with its setting, 46 grammes (more than 700 grains) and was of the value of at least six solidi. As they were apparently cast, and not struck, they were doubtless jewellers' ornaments, probably modelled on actual coins. On coins of Maurice Tiberius, Justinian, &c., used as jewellery in the Cyprus Treasures, see Dalton, in Archaeologia, vol. 60, pp. 2 and 11, and in Burlington Magazine, 1907, p. 356.

From the peculiarities of this coin I believe that it should be classed with the Hispano-Byzantine imitations (see infra, 'Coins not issued at the Imperial Mints'), though it has not the letters AN usually characteristic of the obverses of those coins.

³ Tremisses with rev. VICTORI MAVRI. Maurice (Tiberius) held the chief command in the Persian war in the reign of Tiberius II Constantine. In A.D. 581 the Romans gained a great victory at Constantina, and in the summer of 582 Maurice returned from the East. On Aug. 5 of that year he was elected Caesar by the dying Emperor and given the name of 'Tiberius'. He succeeded to the Empire a few days later (Aug. 13) on the death of Tiberius II (Bury, Hist., ii, p. 82).

These tremisses with the name of Maurice on the rev. can hardly be earlier than the last few days of the reign of Tiberius II. It is conceivable that their issue was ordered directly Maurice was elected Caesar, the name on the obv. being that of the Emperor Tiberius II. On the other hand, it seems to me a preferable supposition that they were issued by Maurice himself after he became Emperor. The reasons are: (i) On the rev. Maurice is called 'Augustus', and not 'Caesar'. (ii) There are some divergences of style and lettering between these tremisses and the corresponding coins of Tiberius II (p. 107, Nos. 14-17, supra), e.g. we find on the obv. ON (=DN) instead of the OM characteristic of the coins of Tiberius II. (iii) On the obv. the Imperial personage represented is called 'Tiberius' (only). It has been assumed by Sabatier and others that this must mean Tiberius II, but that Emperor on the obv. of his coins is accustomed (with rare exceptions) to style himself 'Tiberius Constantinus', or 'Constantinus' on the obv. and 'Tiberius' on the rev.; see especially the tremisses (supra, p. 107, No. 14, &c.) with obv. COSTANTINVS, rev. VICTORIA TIBERI. (iv) Phocas the Emperor who succeeded Maurice had the same legend VICTORIA (FOCAS), and presumably imitated the then current coins of his predecessor. The 'Tiberius' mentioned on the obv. of our tremisses I take to be Maurice, who uses his new name 'Tiberius' on the obv. (corresponding to the 'Constantinus' of Tiberius II) and his original name 'Maurice' on the rev., VICTORIA MAVRI, corresponding to the VICTORIA TIBERI.

² In contrast with the M found on the corresponding coins of Tiberius Constantine. In Windisch-Grätz Cat., No. 171, M of year IIII is described of Maurice Tiberius. Is not this coin, possibly, of Tiberius Constantine?

² Only the plume or crest of the helmet is represented.

¹ Cp. Penon, Rev. belge, 1857, p. 14. Sabatier (ii, p. 41, No. 5) assigns this coin and those here described infra to the Emperor Theodosius III of Adramytium, A. D. 716-717. But as Penon and Duchalais have already pointed out the coins in style and types incontestably belong to the sixth or early seventh century (cp. Æ of Carthage, of Maurice Tiberius and previous emperors, with our No. 293; with Nos. 294, 295 cp. the Æ of Heraclius I, rev. Heraclius II and Martina in British Museum, 'Carthage,' infra); they can only belong, therefore, to Theodosius, the son of Maurice Tiberius.—Amoenitas seems to have its classical sense—'voluptas quae ex amoenis rebus percipitur,' as in amoenitates studiorum quaerere (Pliny, praef. Nat. Hist.); uxor mea, mea amoenitas (Plautus). In mediaeval Latin amoenitas has the technical sense of a 'pleasaunce' or 'pleasure-ground' (see Du Cange, s.v.).

For a silver coin ascribed to Theodosius with rev. ^{N.M} CC see Rev. num., xviii, p. 211, and Sab., ii, p. 42, No. 6.

² Cp. Sab., ii, p. 42, No. 8 ('Theodosius III of Adramytium'); C. Penon in Rev. belge, 1857, p. 18 f. Penon, who published a specimen of this coin, rightly assigned it to the time of Theodosius, son of Maurice Tiberius, but his identification of the busts on the rev. as the infant son (otherwise unknown to history) and the wife of Theodosius is very improbable. The marriage of Theodosius—his wife was the daughter of Germanus—only took place in A. D. 601-602, and it may be further noted that these busts are inscribed Augusti (cp. AVC, AVC on the Æ supra, No. 291). The simplest explanation is to regard the bust on the obv. as that of Theodosius and the two busts on the rev. as those of Maurice Tiberius and Constantina the Empress. The very youthful appearance of the busts on the rev. is probably not intentional, but due to the unskilfulness of the engraver.

COINS WITH THE NAME OF MAURICE TIBERIUS NOT ISSUED AT THE IMPERIAL MINTS.

LOMBARD IMITATIONS.—Chiefly tremisses, some very rude. There are also silver coins, type CN in wreath, which are probably Lombardic. Also a series of solidi classed by de Salis as Hispano-Byzantine. Some of these are of unusually small module and of thick fabric, and are characterized on the obv. by the letters AN followed by a numeral (A, B, Γ, &c.). Montagu Cat., No. 1111, is a specimen of the solidus of small module. Montagu Cat., No. 1108, is a coin of larger module, and is in that catalogue mistakenly attributed to 'Tiberius Constantine, Maurice Tiberius, and Anastasia'.

On the Merovingian imitations, see Prou, Cat. des monn. Mérov., p. xxiii, &c., p. 300, &c.; de Belfort, Monn. Mérov.; Babelon, Traité, i, p. 540; Keary, Coinages of West. Eur., p. 71 f.

¹ Cp. Sab., i, p. 252 (Phocas), No. 2 with OB. XX. A similar exergue occurs on a solidus of Tiberius II Constantine, supra, p. 106, No. 9. On a solidus of Heraclius and his son (Brit. Mus. infra) we find BOXX in the exergue.

² SILVER.—See infra, under Carthage and Ravenna. There is also a small silver coin, rev. cross between two palm-branches (mint, ? Carthage), weight 6 to 7 grains: see descriptions in Sab., No. 6; Photiades Cat., p. 17, No. 258; Sabatier in Mém. soc. d'arch. St. Pét., iv (1850), p. 314, Pl. XX. 38; Thomsen Cat., No. 408. with a similar rev. type (wt. about 215 grains) is published by A. Tauber in Num. Zeit., iv, p. 31. I have not seen the original, but the engraving (p. 31) and some other circumstances tend to suggest some doubt as to the authenticity of this piece. Sabatier, i, p. 253, No. 7, also publishes a silver coin with the same types as the tremissis (correctly described as of silver?); also a silver coin with rev. $\overline{\text{TORA}}$: Sab., i, p. 254, No. 9;

² A corresponding coin of Cyzicus has NPERAV (or NPEPAV); at Antioch we find NEPEAV (cp. blundered legend on XX coins of Thessalonica). de Saulcy (Essai, p. 50) suggests that the exclamation Ne Pereat is intended, but adds: 'Voilà une interprétation qui rappelle quelque peu le P. Hardouin et pour la défense de laquelle je ne suis vraiment pas disposé à rompre des lances.' Probably the legends are only blundered. Such blunders would not be surprising at Antioch, though somewhat strange at Cyzicus.

² These coins are so barbarous that it is difficult to believe that they were struck at the Imperial mint. Yet they appear to belong to the time of Phocas, because (i) the Alexandrian coins of his predecessors (Justinian I, Justin II, Tiberius Constantine, and Maurice Tiberius) are of different fabric, size, and lettering, and (ii) the Alexandrian coins of his successor Heraclius present new obv. types. None of the specimens in the British Museum show the inscr. DNFOCAS recorded by Sab., i, p. 257, No. 43. On one or two specimens the legend rather suggests the name Justinus (II), but the coins cannot be with certainty assigned to his reign.

² The solidi, Nos. 50-80, present many varieties on the rev. It is probable that most (if not all) of these varieties were represented at each of the different officinae.

Although, for convenience of reference, the solidi in this Catalogue are arranged under officinae (all coins of officina A being placed together, followed by those of officinae B, Γ, &c.), another instructive arrangement might be made by grouping each set of varieties together without regard to the officinae. Thus, the specimens in the British Museum might be classed as follows:—

1. Monogram (P) and A at officinae A, Γ, Δ, Ε, Σ, Ζ, Η
2. " " € " " B, Ζ, Η [I in private coll.]
3. " " Θ " " Σ, Η, Ι
4. " " Ι " " A, B, Γ, Σ
5. " " Β " " A, B, Δ, Ε, Ζ, Η, Ι
6. " " K at officina Ε
7. Monogram only at officinae Ε, Σ, Ζ

(The exact chronological order in which these varieties appeared can hardly be determined.)

² These legends share some of the barbarity of the obv. type. From No. 85 it would seem that the legend intended was Dn. Heracli(us) [et?] [Co]nst[antinus] or Dn. Heraclius Constantinus. On other coins we can read Dn. Heraclius T. PP. Au. Svoronos (Journ. int. d'arch. num., 1904, pp. 149, 152) assigns these pieces to Heraclius Constantine. This may possibly be correct, but on the semissis and tremissis (which are always highly conventional) an Emperor who is on other denominations bearded is often represented as beardless. The absence of the beard does not necessarily, therefore, exclude Heraclius I, and it seems to me a little doubtful whether Heraclius Constantine would be represented alone. I have described the bust as Heraclius (I). A good many specimens occurred in the finds at Athens (Journ. int. d'arch. num., 1904, p. 152 f.).

of Constantine IV Pogonatus with his two brothers, Heraclius and Tiberius. Year 15 of Constantine IV's reign reckoned from A.D. 654, when he was made Augustus by his father, Constans II=A.D. 668/9. But it seems to me improbable that the Cyprus mint should burst forth into activity for a single year only—A.D. 668—especially at a time when this island had come, in part at least, under the Saracenic domination. Probably Nos. 273–274 are coins of Heraclius (with Martina and Heraclius Constantine) struck in year 15 of the reign of Heraclius, but afterwards countermarked and used as his own currency by Constans II.

² Δ is probably (as Mr. R. S. Poole long ago suggested in N. C., xvi, p. 121) the basis or steps of the cross misunderstood; cp. No. 288, supra. I am inclined to think that M arose in the same way, the bar above being really the base or step of the cross. Poole supposed that M, no less than IB, was a mark of value (op. cit., p. 120), but probably Sabatier (cited by Poole, p. 121) is right in thinking that Δ and M have nothing to do with the value of the coins.

² ◇BV? is probably a blundered rendering of ABA (see No. 305), ◇ being put for Λ as in the ΠAN and ΠON coins described, infra, pp. 228, 229. On a IB coin published by Kubitschek (Num. Zeitschrift, vol. xxix, 1897, p. 193, MΛCΠ occurs, equivalent, in Kubitschek's view (p. 195), to Magd., and perhaps indicating the town of Magdolon.

The same explanation applies to ◇BV? [= ABA?]. The rev. type IMB is probably derived from the three-figure coins (Nos. 297-301, supra, with IMB, q.v.). On ABAΞ see further Kubitschek in Num. Zeitschrift, xxix, 1897, p. 195.

⁴ Nos. 306-8. Pinder and Friedlaender (Münzen Justinians, p. 32) are doubtless right in attributing these coins to Alexandria. They assign them to the reign of Justinian I, of whom there are S coins of another type. But it seems to me that the thick fabric is more suited to the time of Heraclius, of whom, also, we have S coins of another type. (In the intervening reigns the S denomination does not seem to have been employed at Alexandria.) In either case there is a certain difficulty. If we attribute the coins to Justinian, we have another series of S pieces weighing only about 50 grains; if they are attributed to Heraclius, we have also a second series of S coins weighing 50 grains or less.

² No. 315 has the thick Alexandrian fabric and an obv. type similar to No. 288, which is undoubtedly of Alexandria. The other pieces here described are, however, of thin fabric. ΠΑΗ or ΠΟΗ gives the name of no known Imperial mint, and may, perhaps, be a degraded form of ΑΛΞ (cp. the blundered coins supra, Nos. 303, 304; also Sab., i, p. 281). Kubitschek (Num. Zeitschrift, xxix, 1897, p. 195) thinks that possibly we have here the name of Panopolis (or Panephysis) which may have been a mint during the siege of Alexandria by the Arabs.

At that time the legends ending in IA and IΓ were unknown. The legend is clearly equivalent to Domino nostro Heraclio consuli, and IB and IΓ must be numerals (12, 13). The rev. legend of No. 337 CONSABIB, unless blundered, must be equivalent to consulibus IB (12). Cp. No. 339 with CONSABIA. The obv. of No. 339 = Domino nostro [H]eraclio consuli and BA?

Egypt. A few Roman coins and several coins of Alexandria were included in the same purchase. A similar specimen in Montagu Cat., No. 1117.

¹ Nos. 337-40. The coins of Heraclius with consular types have been discussed by A. de Barthélemy in an interesting but not entirely satisfactory article in the Rev. num., 1857, p. 247 f.; cp. R. N., 1860, p. 129. Barthélemy did not recognize the Carthaginian origin of the gold coins, which, however, is hardly to be doubted in the case of our Nos. 337 and 338. Nos. 339 and 340, on the ground of their types and inscriptions, may be conveniently assigned to Carthage, though their flat fabric and crude style (on the obv.) differentiate them from Nos. 337 and 338. The style of the obv. of Nos. 339, 340 rather resembles that of the coins assigned in subsequent reigns to the mint of Rome. IA, IB, IF in the legends of the gold coins are almost certainly the numerals 11, 12, and 13, though BA on the obv. of Nos. 339 and 340 is hard to explain. (On the rev. of 339 we have IA=11.) If '11', '12', and '13' are regnal years they correspond to A.D. 620/1, 621/2, 622/3. Possibly, however, they are only the numbers of officinae, as '10', '13', '14', and '15' doubtless are on the gold described, p. 230 f. In spite of the appearance of two bearded busts on Nos. 339 and 340, I do not feel sure that these coins are necessarily later than the coins 337 and 338, which show one of the busts beardless. Nos. 339 and 340 are in fact highly conventional, and evidently done by an unskilful artist, and on the rev. of one of these coins, i.e. 339, we find IA (=11), which might seem to show that they were issued earlier than Nos. 337 and 338, which are inscribed IB (=12).

Unless we accept 11, 12, and 13 as regnal dates (A.D. 620-3), it will probably be best to suppose that the coins were issued circ. A.D. 629, when Heraclius Constantine was instituted consul (Bury, ii, p. 247 n.; cp. Barthélemy, l. c., p. 256 f.). Barthélemy regards our Nos. 339 and 340 as representing Heraclius and his son Heraclonas who was consul in A.D. 640. I prefer the simpler view that the busts are those of Heraclius and Heraclius Constantine.

² Cp. Sab., i, p. 264, Nos. 1 and 2; Barthélemy in Rev. num., 1857, p. 250, No. 3, and p. 261. One specimen was procured from Tunis (Rev. belge, 1855, p. 407). The descriptions of similar coins with a bearded head seem to be erroneous. The rev. legend is arranged so as to form a cross, and Barthélemy has suggested that the upright limb of the cross forms I, so that the legend is VICTORIA C[onsulis?].

² With the obv. cp. Sab., Pl. XXIX. 16. The Æ coin attributed by Sabatier (ii, p. 42, Pl. 39. 6; Thomsen Cat., No. 634) to Theodosius III is, almost certainly, a misread specimen of a coin like our No. 347.

Il ne pouvait pas exister d'atelier monétaire à Catane. San Quintino était dans le vrai en attribuant ces monnaies à Carthage, et en les comparant à celles qui ont KAT, KRT, CTÇ. (Le monete de Giustiniano, ii, p. 6).' I am unable to conjecture on what grounds M. Sambon asserts that Catina cannot have been a mint. It is certain that the Emperor's head on the 1 coins of Catina (Nos. 402 ff. infra) is identical with his head as it appears in the

COINS WITH THE NAME OF HERACLIUS NOT ISSUED AT THE IMPERIAL MINTS.

The imitations (chiefly Lombardic?) are mainly the semissis (rev. globus cruciger) and tremissis (rev. cross potent) with the obverses very rude and the legends blundered.

There are also (Brit. Mus.) some solidi (possibly Arab imitations) with obv. Heraclius and two sons standing facing. The obv. is very roughly engraved and does not appear to be of any Imperial mint. One of these has, on the rev., the cross potent represented as $\overline{\text{T}}$: cp. the early Arab imitations of the thick gold coins of Carthage where the cross is treated in the same way (Brit. Mus. Cat. Oriental Coins, Additions I-IV, Pl. III). In Brit. Mus. is also a solidus (acquired in 1906) which is a barbarous imitation of our No. 10, &c., supra (obv. busts of Heraclius and Heraclius Constantine. Legend blundered; rev., cross potent on three steps. Legend, $\text{VICTA } \Delta\text{OVNI}$; beneath, NONOC). The provenance is unknown.

On the Merovingian imitations see the works of de Belfort and Prou.

¹ If Sab., i, p. 298, No. 15; Pl. 32, 18 is to be trusted there are coins with a similar obv., but inscribed on the rev. ANNO III CON. Cf. the coins, infra, of Constans II of Sicily, inscribed SC^s. The word ANANEO (which rather seems to have been suggested by the familiar ANNO that had so long appeared on the Μ coins) is followed by Υ or ς, or Σ or SS, these signs being either (as Warren has suggested, N. C., 1861, p. 51 n), equivalent to Σ, or ΣΙΣ, or marking an abbreviation (so Σ or Σ, in INΔ^s = ἰνδικτιῶνος, cp. Byz. Zeit., 1905, p. 12). We have thus the word ἀνανέωσις = 'renewal', 'restoration'. Warren (loc. cit., p. 48) compares it with such imperial coin-legends as Fel. temp. reparatio and Restitutor orbis. The word has also the meaning of renovation in a religious sense as ἀνανέωσις κατὰ θεόν (Athan. ii. 245 A). This legend was first introduced by Constans II and not by Heraclius as sometimes stated (e.g. by de Saulcy, Essai, p. 61).

² This coin and other coins of Constans II marked as 'Cyprus find' were presented to the British Museum by Count de Salis. They formed part of a hoard of 512 Byzantine bronze coins of Constans II and his sons, discovered in Cyprus in 1858, and purchased at the time by the Hon. J. L. Warren (afterwards Lord De Tabley), who gave an interesting account of the hoard in the Num. Chron., 1861, p. 42 ff. All these pieces bear a circular countermark containing the monogram J or J i.e. the name 'Constantinus'. This monogram is found on the coins of Constans II (e.g., Pl. XXXIV. 13), and also on those of Constantine IV (e.g. Pl. XXXVII. 21). It is further found as a countermark on a coin of Constantine IV, Pl. XXXVII. 2. It therefore seems likely that it was Constantine IV, rather than Constans II who countermarked the coins of the Cyprus hoard. Since, however, this is not quite certain, and as it is practically certain that the coins were originally issued by Constans II, I have described them under Constans II. Mr. Warren was inclined to think that the pieces in this hoard were struck in Cyprus itself, but it seems to me much more likely that they were the product of the Constantinople mint: some are inscribed CON, and others KWINCTAN, which latter I take to be the mint 'Constantinople' and not (as has been suggested) the mint 'Constantia' in Cyprus, or the name of 'Constans II'. Three coins in the hoard were inscribed with the name of the Cyprus mint, year 15?. Warren supposed that these were struck in A.D. 668/9 (Constantine IV). I have suggested, supra, p. 223, that they were issued under Heraclius and countermarked by Constans II (or Constantine IV?).

[I have seen a coin (brought to Brit. Mus., April, 1906) similar to the Cyprus hoard pieces, but not countermarked, which was stated to have been obtained from Bethlehem.]

² The Δ belongs to ΔΑΝΑΕΟ: see note 1, p. 266, supra. The numerals in the exergue of this series are curious. ΔΙ, ΒΙ, ΓΙ might be the dates 11, 12, 13, but ΔΙΙ, ΒΙΙ, ΓΙΙ, seem impossible dates. We may say, therefore, with confidence that Ι does not represent ten, but simply the numeral one. If we add the numerals in each series together, we have the following results:—

ΔΙ = 2	ΔΙΙΙ = 8 and ΥΓ (5+3) = 8.
ΒΙ = 3	ΕΙΙΙΙ = 9
ΓΙ = 4
ΓΙΙ = 5
ΔΙΙ = 6
ΣΙΙΙ = 9
ΖΔΙ = 11? (i.e. 6+4+1)

If these are really dates they are doubtless regnal years, stopping short in year eleven when (as already stated) a new type was undoubtedly introduced.

An alternative theory would be to suppose that the first numeral in the exergue indicates the officina, while the following numerals indicate the date (thus, ΒΙΙ = Year II of officina B). We should thus have:—

Year I	of officinae	Α, Β, Γ
" II	" "	Α, Β, Γ, Δ (6)
" III	" "	Δ (5), Δ
" IV	" "	Δ, Ε

The main objections to this latter theory are (1) that (on the supposition that the Brit. Mus. collection is fairly representative) it provides coinages for four years only, (2) that it does not account for the exergue ΖΔΙ.

[ALEXANDRIA]
Some of the more barbarous coins described supra under Heraclius (p. 227) may possibly have been struck at this mint in the early part of the reign of Constans II, at some time between A. D. 641-646; see Introduction, § 2, Heraclius I, Alexandria.

² I have ventured to assign to this mint certain solidi of flat fabric which differ in several respects from the pieces struck at Constantinople. The differences are (i) in the fabric, usually very flat; (ii) the somewhat high relief of the inscription on the rev., and sometimes the substitution of a linear border on the rev. for the usual dotted border; (iii) the peculiar marks of the officinae at the end of the inscription and in the field (with these compare the marks on the semisses and tremisses described infra).

² Cp. Photiades Cat., No. 323, with ANNO Δ. A similar specimen in an English collection (1905).

² Up to this point, I have described the busts of Emperors as being clothed in 'paludamentum and cuirass'. But in some reigns already described (as, e.g., in the case of some coins of Heraclius), it may be doubted whether a non-military costume is not intended, though the engraver seems to have been influenced by the traditional manner of representing a Roman Emperor on coins, namely, in a cuirass and paludamentum.

From Justinian II, onwards, the Emperor (except when he appears armed, as on coins of Tiberius III, infra) seems to be almost certainly represented in non-military costume, i.e. in a robe over which is a mantle fastened on the right shoulder by a circular brooch from which hang three (jewelled) cords or pendants (cp. the costume of Justinian I in the famous mosaic of San Vitale at Ravenna). I refer to this costume as 'mantle and robe'. (It may be noted, however, that a buckle and pendants appear also even in the case of a military costume: this may be clearly seen on the large gold medallion, frontispiece to vol. i.)

² ON²O, often written OND, is apparently for domino. Garrucci (Annuaire soc. num. franc., 1877-81, p. 506) thinks that it is an engraver's blunder, but it is found also in the following reigns.

² Also a smaller denomination of this type (tremissis?): see Sab., ii, p. 58, No. 3.

¹ On the solidi of this reign two Leos and two Constantines are represented, but each is accompanied by a distinguishing epithet. Leo III is called the 'grandfather' (πάππος), and Constantine V the 'father' (πατήρ) of the reigning Emperor Leo IV. Constantine VI, Leo IV's young son, is described as ὁ νέος. The name of Leo IV himself is followed by an enigmatic inscription which seems to be rightly read VSS[?]ESSON (sometimes VOSSESSON; on No. 6. VSS[?]ESSON). Friedlaender (Zeit. für Num., iv, p. 150) has interpreted VS (or VOS) as viōs, and this is a probable abbreviation, though one would have hardly expected an epithet of relationship to be applied to Leo IV, as his 'sonship' is already implied in πάππος and πατήρ. The rest of the inscription, SS[?]ESSON, is explained by Friedlaender as, perhaps, a participle σέσσαν connected with σέσσω 'the Imperial throne'. But no such verb is known. Possibly the second S may be the sign of et or καί (as it is on the Æ of this Emperor, and elsewhere), and we might read VS S[?]ESSON, i.e. viōs καὶ ἡσσαν. But this is not very satisfactory.

XXX would be equivalent to 30, and Α (the usual indication of the officina) would be employed as the initial of annis (NNN). The thirtieth year of Irene's reign (reckoned from 17 December, 768, the date of her coronation soon after marriage to Leo IV) corresponds to 798/99 A.D. In this case therefore 'XXX' might well be a date. In the very next reign, however, and in several subsequent reigns, XXX NNN are used by Emperors who reigned for a much shorter period than thirty years. It becomes doubtful, therefore, whether (even in the case of Irene) XXX can be a date, and it seems best to adopt the explanation of Paul Lambros (cp. Rev. num., 1859, p. 210) that XN means Χριστὸς νικᾷ, as it undoubtedly does on the bronze coins struck by Irene in conjunction with Constantine VI, only it is here thrice repeated. (Or XN may be Χριστὸς νικᾷ: cp. an inscription (temp. Leo III?) on a city-tower of Constantinople (Van Millingen, Byz. Const., p. 100):—ΧΡΙΣΤΕ Ω ΘΕΟΣ ΑΤΑΡΑΧΟΝ ΚΑΙ ΑΠΟΛΕΜΟΝ ΦΥΛΑΤΤΕ ΤΗΝ ΠΟΛΙΝ ΟΥ ΝΙΚΑ ΤΟ ΜΕΝΟΣ ΤΩΝ ΠΟΛΕΜΙΩΝ.)

¹ With X, Ponton d'Amécourt Cat., No. 948; Montagu Cat., No. 1202. Sabatier, ii, p. 78, No. 5, describes and figures a bronze coin with types similar to the solidus and describes it as in the British Museum. I can find no trace of this coin, and there is doubtless some error in his description. I believe that this coin, which he engraves as bronze (Pl. 42, 5), really represents a gold solidus in the French collection, of which there has been for many years a sealing wax impression in the British Museum. Sabatier (ii, p. 78, No. 1; Pl. 42, 1) and other writers have assigned to Michael I a solidus of which the rev. is a head of Christ. It is impossible, however, to separate this coin from the similar solidi which Sabatier himself (Pl. 44, 12) attributes—and no doubt correctly—to Michael III. Cp. the solidus, infra, of Michael III and Theodora, with rev. Bust of Christ (as on Sabatier's coin): cp. also coins of Basil I. In the time of Michael I, the mint-engraver had not yet broken with the stereotyped designs of the iconoclast Emperors.

² ΘEOF may, of course, be equally well an abbreviation of Theophilus, in which case these coins would have been struck by Michael II in conjunction with his son Theophilus. This appears to have been de Salis's view. Yet an attribution to Michael I and Theophylactus seems to me preferable (i) because we have, otherwise, no Æ coins of Constantinople of Michael I and his son; (ii) because Michael II and Theophilus are already provided with Æ.

² The tremisses assigned by Sabatier by Michael II alone, have here been attributed, supra, p. 407, Provincial gold, to Michael I.

³ Cp., an inscribed stone (A. D. 858) now in the church of the Koimesis at Nicaea (Diehl, Études byz., p. 357):—ΠΥΡΓΟΣ ΜΙΧΑΗΛ ΜΕΓΑΛΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΕΝ ΧΩ ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡΟΣ.

² The attribution of these is a little difficult on account of the two differing busts each of which bears the name of 'Michael'. I am inclined to regard the presence of the two busts as due to the unthinking convention of the Provincial engraver. Michael III had no son of the same name and there would be the same difficulty if the coins were assigned to Michael I or to Michael II.

³ These letters (cp. Sab., ii, p. 104) have been interpreted as O ΠΡΟΤΕΥΩΝ ΧΕΡCΩΝΟC which does not seem satisfactory. Π may perhaps = ΠΟΛΙC, X being the name of Cherson. Under Basil I, O occurs without X CHRONOLOGY OF THE COINS OF LEO VI, ETC.

The coins fall into three main classes:—

- I. With name of Leo VI only. Λ, Δ, Æ.
- II. With names of Leo VI and Alexander. Æ.
- III. With names of Leo VI and Constantine VII. Λ, Δ.

The only class that can be dated with exactitude is III, which belongs to the end of the reign of Leo and cannot be earlier than the coronation of Constantine in A. D. 911.

The relation of I to II is difficult to determine. From the lapidary inscriptions, &c. it is certain that Leo and his brother Alexander were associated as joint-emperors. But it has been supposed (Sp. Lambros in B. Z., iv (1895), p. 92 ff.) that from circ. A. D. 904 Leo reigned actually, or at least practically, alone, and Lambros would assign all the coins with the sole name of Leo to the end of his reign (i. e. after circ. 904). The numismatic evidence seems to me, however, to suggest that the coins of Leo VI alone were struck in the beginning or middle of his reign rather than in the later part of it. Leo was, no doubt, the ruling spirit—the Basileus—while Alexander was, as it were, the despotes, and Leo may have chosen to strike coins in his own name solely, without thereby formally denying the existence of his co-regent Alexander. On the present evidence, Alexander is seen to be relegated to the bronze coinage, but it would not be surprising if gold and silver money with the conjoint names of Leo and Alexander were one day to come to light. It may be by some accident that such coins are not now extant, just as it must be by some accident that the gold and silver coins of Leo VI (alone) are still rare, seeing that they must have been struck in considerable numbers during his lengthy reign.

We may now comment on the coins of classes I and II according to metals. Gold. The solidus of Leo VI alone (Pl. LI. 8) would seem at first sight, from the long beard worn by the emperor, to belong to the latter part of his reign, for at his accession in 886 Leo was only about twenty years old. But, on the other hand, if we do not assign this solidus to the earlier part of his reign, we have no gold coins for the whole period 886–911, which is a great difficulty. I am inclined to believe, then, that this solidus—of entirely new types—was struck by Leo at his coronation. He places himself, for the first time, under the protection of the Blessed Virgin, who, on an ivory in the Berlin Mus., is represented in the act of crowning him (see Schlumberger, Mélanges, i, p. 111 f. and additions at end of volume. This ivory bears the name of Leo—evidently Leo VI). Silver. It seems likely that the coins with the sole name of Leo were first struck near the beginning of his reign—otherwise we should have no silver coins till 911, the date of the coinage of Leo and Constantine. Bronze. This coinage is evidently closely modelled on that of Basil I. Thus, we have Leo and Alexander (like Basil I and his son Constantine) represented (α) as enthroned figures, (β) with their busts only. The coin of Leo VI alone (Pl. LI. 12), showing the emperor seated on a richly ornamented throne with curved arms reproduces a coin of Basil I: I think that it may have been struck at or near the time of the coronation of Leo, just as the coin of Basil seems to have been struck. (There is also the bust type of Leo VI: the three specimens in the British Museum are in remarkably fine preservation, almost suggesting that they have never been in circulation.) The bronze coins of Cherson have the name of Leo alone, and also the conjoint names of the co-regnant emperors.

CONSTANTINE VII, Porphyrogenitus

ROMANUS I

17 DEC. 919—16 DEC. 944

The period covered by these two reigns (913–959) may be divided into three main epochs:—

a. Constantine VII with Zoe as regent

A. D. 913–919.

β. Constantine VII with Romanus I

A. D. 919–944.

γ. Constantine VII, independent

A. D. 945–959.

Three sons of Romanus I, viz. Christopher, Stephen, and Constantine, and the son of Constantine VII, viz. Romanus II, were also associated with their fathers, so that the period may be further subdivided as follows:—

I. Constantine VII with his mother ZOE as regent

June 913—919.

II. Constantine VII and Romanus I, co-emperors

17 Dec. 919—921.

III. Constantine VII, Romanus I, and CHRISTOPHER, son of Romanus I (crowned May 921)

921—May 924

IV. Constantine VII, Romanus I, Christopher (d. Aug. 931), STEPHEN (son of Romanus I, crowned May 924) and CONSTANTINE (son of Romanus I, crowned May 924)

May 924—Aug. 931

V. Constantine VII, Romanus I, Stephen, and Constantine

Aug. 931—16 Dec. 944

VI. Constantine VII, Stephen, and Constantine

16 Dec. 944—27 Jan. 945

VII. Constantine VII (alone)

27 Jan.—April 945

VIII. Constantine VII and his son ROMANUS II

² Notice that on the preceding solidus Constantine wore only the mantle and Zoe the ornamented robe. On that solidus, too, his hand holding the cross was below the hand of Zoe. Here, Constantine wears the ornamented robe and Zoe the mantle, and Constantine's hand is placed above the hand of Zoe. Both on solidus and bronze the son is represented as of nearly the same height as his mother.

¹ Sabatier (ii, p. 132, No. 3; Pl. 47, 6) assigns type 2 to Romanus II (son of Constantine VII) leaving only our type 1 to Romanus I. At first sight this seems a plausible division, but its correctness may be doubted because (i) it does not appear certain that Romanus II struck any coins during his sole reign even at Constantinople (see infra under Romanus II, though he struck with Basil II at Cherson); (ii) the cross reverse type at Cherson belongs rather to the time of Romanus I (see our No. 30). Constantine VII also used the cross reverse, but afterwards introduced the monogram, or rather, monogrammatic cross, p. 467, as his reverse, and a similar reverse was used by his successors.—With regard to Sab., Pl. XLVII. 7 (also Burachkov, Pl. 17, 147), a bronze coin not in the British Museum, I should say that it was of Romanus II, possibly struck during his sole reign or, perhaps, during the lifetime of his father Constantine VII; cp. the Æ of Constantine VII, No. 59. infra, with obv. bust facing; rev. K

Type 3, where Christopher's name precedes that of Constantine VII, may have been first struck in the latter part of 927 when Christopher had precedence of Constantine VII.

CONSTANTINOPLE It does not seem possible to identify any extant specimens as the Constantinopolitan coinage of Romanus II. The bronze coins with the name of 'Romanus' formerly assigned to this Emperor are now proved by the evidence of restriking to have been issued by Romanus I. Sabatier (ii, p. 131, No. 1) was inclined to attribute to Romanus II a solidus assigned by Du Cange (cp. de Saulcy, Pl. XXI. 5) to Romanus IV. Unfortunately, the coin described by Du Cange had already disappeared when Sabatier wrote. The type (bust of the Virgin crowning the Emperor) is certainly, as Sabatier remarks, more likely to be of Romanus II than of Romanus IV, for we find it on the solidus of John I Zimisce, A. D. 969-976. But I am inclined to suspect that the ΘΕΟΤΟC ΡΟΜΑΝΩ ΤΕΣΡ of Du Cange's coin is a misreading of a solidus of John Zimisce, like our Pl. LIV. 11 with ΘΕΟΤΟC ΡΟΜΘ/ΙΩΤΕΣΡ (obv., bust of the Virgin crowning the Emperor). Of course it is possible that Romanus II may have instituted this type, but it does not seem probable that he did so, because Nicephorus II Phocas, who intervenes between Romanus II and John Zimisce, uses a different type of the Virgin (see Pl. LIV. 5).

² Sabatier in Revue belge, 1859, p. 312 f., publishes specimens ending BACIA/ AVΓ K' P' and BACIA/ AVT' R' and suggests that the title Autokrator is intended. Photiades Cat., No. 460, has a specimen stated to read AVΓ' RΓ'. Our No. 2 (similar to Montagu Cat., No. 1231) has again a different legend, ending BK' (or BR'?).

This is the first appearance on the coins of the Virgin of this type, i.e. with the medallion of the Infant Christ. The medallion is in reality the nimbate head of a figure of the Infant seated on the knees of the Virgin, facing the spectator, as e.g. in the mosaic group of the Virgin in S. Apollinare Nuovo at Ravenna (6th century; Venturi, La Madonna (Milan, 1900), p. 4; cp. the Virgin and Child, ib., p. 6, Rome, 9th cent.). Later on, the head of the Infant Christ appears as a medallion, as here, and on other monuments, e.g. the Madonna of St. Mark's, Venice (10th or 11th cent.); Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., i, p. 665; medallion of Infant Christ held by Gabriel and Michael, mosaic of St. Mark's, Venice, 11th cent.; ib., ii, p. 576. Cp. Cabrol, Dict., 'Baouit,' fig. 1281.

The coin (No. 7) may have been struck about August 972 when John I celebrated in Constantinople his triumph for victories over the Russians. These victories were specially ascribed by the Emperor to the Mother of God, and her image with the Infant Saviour was displayed on a triumphal car. See Gibbon, vi, p. 161, ed. Bury; Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., i, p. 176; cp. p. 84.

² The first institution by John Zimisceos of the anonymous Æ coinage is referred by Scylitzes (Cedren, vol. ii, p. 413, ed. Bonn) to the year 972. See Muralt, sub ann., p. 556, and Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., i, pp. 183, 184. See further on this coinage the dissertation infra at end of this reign.

ANONYMOUS BRONZE COINAGE OF JOHN I ZIMISCES AND HIS SUCCESSORS

(see also Introduction, supra, § 2, under 'John I Zimiscès').

The coins that may be attributed to the reigns extending from John I Zimiscès to Constantine X Ducas, a period during which no bronze pieces (except at Cherson) were struck with Imperial names or effigies, are mainly as follows:—

Class I. Obv. Bust of Christ. Rev. Inscr. Ihsus Xristus Basileu Basile. Pl. LV. 1-8.

Class III. Obv. Half-length figure of Christ. Rev. IC XC NI KA in angles of Cross. Pl. LX. 6, 7.

Class IV. Obv. Christ seated; r. hand extended (throne without back). Rev. ISXS Basile Basil. Pl. LX. 10.

Class V. Obv. Christ seated (throne with back). Rev. ISXC Basile Basil. Pl. LXI. 6.

Class VI. Obv. Bust of Christ. Rev. ISXC Basile Basil. Pl. LX. 15, 16.

Class VII. Obv. Bust of Christ. Rev. Bust of Virgin orans. Pl. LIX. 6-8.

Class VIII. Obv. Bust of Christ: pellet border. Rev. Half-length figure of Virgin orans: pellet border. Pl. LIX. 9-12.

Class IX. Obv. Constantine X and Eudocia standing. Rev. Christ standing. Pl. LXI. 7.

Class X. Obv. Bust of Constantine X, facing. Rev. Bust of Christ. Pl. LXI. 9.

The general order of issue may be determined with some exactness by noting the instances of restriking.

Class I (Pl. LV. 1-8). The types of this class are struck (a) on well-spread broad flans; (β) on smaller flans. The smaller flans often prove, on examination, to be coins of Nicephorus II Phocas, or of Romanus I (Thomsen Cat., No. 717, 'Romain II'; cp. No. 718). This Class I, then, is later than Nicephorus Phocas.

Class II (Pl. LVIII. 3, 4) is restruck on Class I.

Class III (Pl. LX. 6, 7) is restruck on Class II.

Classes IV and V (Pl. LX. 10; LXI. 6) (they are difficult to distinguish) are restruck on Class III.

Class VI (Pl. LX. 15, 16) is allied by its rev. to IV and V.

Class VII (Pl. LIX. 6-8). The types of this class are restruck on Class I, but as coins of this class are used as flans for restriking by Romanus IV (de Saulcy, p. 250) they probably belong to one of the latest of the anonymous series.

Class VIII (Pl. LIX. 9-12) is allied by its rev. to Class VII.

Class X (Pl. LXI. 9) is restruck on Class IX.

It is more difficult to determine the particular Emperors who issued these different classes. Sabatier (Pl. 48) has assigned several classes to John I Zimisce (our Classes I, II, III, V, VII, &c.), but this attribution may be criticized as clearly providing too many coins for John I and too few for his successors (cp. Sab., ii, p. 149). de Saulcy had already observed that some of these classes must belong to the successors of John I, but he did not attempt to allocate them. (So also Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., i, p. 321.) One curious clue to the attributions has not, I believe, been previously noted (except briefly in my paper on Byzantine Numismatics, in Corolla Num., 1906, p. 334), namely, the varying forms of ornamentation displayed by the cross of the nimbus on the obv. The rev. also presents a variety of ornamentation which is of some service in the matter, and the ornamentation of the book of the Gospels held by the Saviour may also be taken into account.

Class I (LV. 1-8). These coins, or a considerable number of them, clearly constitute the currency of John I Zimisce. (i) They correspond exactly to the description of Scylitzes (Cedren. vol. ii, p. 413, ed. Bonn; cited Introd., supra, § 2, under 'John I Zimisce'), who informs us that this Emperor inaugurated (A. D. 972) the anonymous bronze coinage. (ii) They are usually of large module, while the later anonymous coins are generally of smaller size. (iii) They are struck on new flans, i. e. they are not (as a rule) restruck on coins of earlier reigns. In such cases of restriking as occur, the coins of Nicephorus II Phocas, the predecessor of John Zimisce, are generally found to be employed.

Type and inscr. remain the same throughout, but, besides varieties of dies, there are extremely numerous varieties of type. Thus, more than eleven forms of nimbus-ornamentation occur, and each variety of nimbus is accompanied by one variety or more of reverse-ornamentation. It seems likely, therefore, that some varieties of Class I may have been struck by the successors of John Zimisce.

To Basil II and Constantine VIII (joint reign) I would attribute the following:—

(a) All those with a nimbus-ornamentation of star-like form (Pl. LVI. 13, 14; Pl. LVII. 2, 3). A starry nimbus with the form  or  is found on the gold of Basil II and Constantine, and not on the gold of John Zimisce.

(β) The coins with a cross (+) in the nimbus (Pl. LVI. 12). The 'cross' nimbus is not, indeed, found on the bronze either of John Zimisces or of Basil and Constantine, but one coin of this series has on rev. a spear-head (Pl. LVI. 12), and this unusual device is found on the nimbus of the gold of Basil and Constantine (Pl. LVI. 1).

To Constantine VIII (alone) I attribute the coins with crescent-nimbus (∪) (Pl. LVII. 11, 12). The crescent is found on the gold of Basil and Constantine and on the gold of Constantine (alone), but not on the gold of John Zimisces. These Æ may belong to the joint reign of the two Emperors, but the ∪ seems, as a nimbus-ornament, to be more distinctive of Constantine (alone) than of Basil and Constantine jointly.

To Romanus III I doubtfully attribute the Æ with □ (precious stone) in nimbus (Pl. LVII. 14); see further under Class II.

The remaining coins of Class I are assigned to John I Zimisces (Pl. LV). These are chiefly characterized by the pellet nimbus. Such pellets are found on the nimbus of the gold of John I to the exclusion of other devices. Although pellets occur on the gold of Basil II and Constantine VIII, we find also on their coins several other kinds of nimbus-ornament (spear-head, star, &c.).

Class II (Pl. LVIII. 3, 4). A variation of Class I (the cross being added to the inscr. on the rev.). The nimbus is ornamented with □ (apparently a jewel), and a pellet (•) is placed in two of the angles of the cross of the nimbus. The Gospel-book is ornamented with ☩. Some of these peculiarities are found on those coins of Class I that were assigned to Basil II and Constantine VIII, but it seems reasonable to assume that the comparatively new type of Class II was introduced by a new Emperor. It would be satisfactory to assign it to Romanus III (the successor of Constantine VIII), but there is nothing to connect it decisively with his reign, and the nimbus on his gold coins is devoid of ornamentation.

There is rather more reason, however, to assign this class to the successor of Romanus III, viz. Michael IV, whose gold shows the nimbus-ornament ☩ (Pl. LVIII. 1, 2).

With regard to Romanus III, I attribute to him (as already stated supra, under 'Class I'), though doubtfully, the coins of Class I with □ nimbus and ☩ on the Gospel-book (Pl. LVII. 14). This ☩ adorns the Gospel-book on the gold of Romanus III. It is also found on the Æ of Class I attributed to Constantine VIII, alone.

□ is not found—as has already been remarked—in the nimbus of the gold of Romanus III, but it is found in the next reign (Michael IV; and on the gold attributed to Michael V). The bronze of Class I with this device in the nimbus may, therefore, provide some coins for Romanus III, who during his six years' reign can hardly have failed to issue bronze.

Class III (Pl. LX. 6, 7) may be assigned to Theodora (A. D. 1055–1056). The half-length figure of the Saviour is similar to the standing figure on the gold of Theodora, and shows the same neat treatment.

Class IV (Pl. LX. 10) is, according to de Saulcy, restruck on Class III (here assigned to Theodora), and may be attributed to Michael VI, the immediate successor of Theodora.

The seated figure of Christ is identical with that on the gold coin (type 2) of Michael VI (note the outstretched hand, the plain nimbus, the throne without back, the cover of the Gospels with ☩☩). The same figure is, however, also found on the gold coins of Isaac I (Class VI, infra).

Class V (Pl. LXI. 6) closely resembles Class VI. It may, with considerable confidence, be assigned to Constantine X Ducas (successor of Isaac I) on a comparison of the obv. type with the Christ on the gold of Constantine X, Pl. LXI. 1 (note the back of the throne, the position of the right arm, and the cover of the Gospels with ☩☩).

Class VI (Pl. LX. 15, 16). I am not aware of any specimens of this class being restruck, but the rev. type evidently indicates that the coins were struck in or near the time of Isaac I and Constantine X: the rev. ornaments — + — and — ∪ are found on the coins assigned to Constantine X, the successor of Isaac I. I assign this class to Isaac I. It will be noted that the silver coin of Isaac I (Pl. LX. 14) bears on the obv. a bust of Christ which closely resembles the bust on these Æ (note the two pellets in nimbus). On the rev. of the silver we also find the ornamentation — + —.

Class VII (Pl. LIX. 6–8) (rev. bust of Virgin orans). A specimen appears to be restruck on a coin of Class I and another was used as a flan by Romanus IV (de Saulcy, p. 250). This class was struck, therefore, at some time between A. D. 1025 and 1067. It may be assigned to Constantine IX, for whom no bronze coins have at present been provided. The Æ coin (Pl. LIX. 4) of Constantine IX with the Virgin orans seems to show that he placed himself under the special protection of the Virgin, and the Virgin on the bronze bears considerable resemblance to the Virgin represented on the two silver types of Constantine IX.

Class VIII (Pl. LIX. 9–12). In type and fabric this differs little from Class VII. I do not know of any quite decisive evidence from the restriking. Perhaps it is best to regard it—like Class VII—as issued by Constantine IX. (A later Emperor, Michael VII Ducas, might also perhaps claim this class, for his silver has representations of the Virgin similar to those on the silver coins of Constantine IX. But Michael VII Ducas is already supplied with a named bronze coinage.)

Classes IX and X are named and belong to Constantine X: cp. p. 480.

² Coins of this type were imitated contemporaneously or nearly so in Denmark (Hauberg in Congrès International de Numismatique, Paris, 1900, p. 338; Pl. 26, No. 1, obv., cp. No. 2); and imitations with barbarous legends have been found in Russia, Georgia, and in Frisia (Engel and Serrure, Traité de num., i, p. 338 f.). The British Museum possesses a specimen (de Salis gift; 26.6 grains) of unknown provenance which is a close copy of the Byzantine model, but the legend on each side is blundered and unintelligible.

¹ ΘCE = ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ. The attribution of this type to Romanus III was due to de Saulcy, Essai, p. 263. The Museum has a barbarous imitation of No. 3 (Royal Coll.; Wt. 64.5 grains), possibly an ancient forgery. The gold is of a light colour.—The head of Romanus III may be compared with his portrait as shown in the MS. of Zonaras at Modena (Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., iii, p. 532).

¹ Coins of this type appear to be unpublished, unless, as I am inclined to suspect, a nomisma assigned by Banduri (ii, p. 751 = Sab., ii, p. 175, No. 3) to Michael VII Ducas is really of this type (AΥ TOC misread as ΔV KOC?). The obv. type is evidently borrowed from the nomisma of Romanus III (Pl. LVII. 13), and it is possible, therefore, that this may be the earliest nomisma of Michael IV, the successor of Romanus. But I attribute it to Michael V, (i) because Michael IV is already provided with gold coins while Michael V is without a coinage; (ii) because the rev. type closely resembles the bust of the Saviour on some of the nomismata (Pl. LVIII. 9, 10) of Constantine IX, the successor of Michael V. It may also be added that the dress of Michael V (on obv.) resembles the dress of Constantine IX.

			PARIS. Æ Size .75. Wt. 1 gram. 22 (about 19 grains). Published by Schlumberger in Rev. num., 1895, p. 88 = his Mélanges, i, p. 311; also by Dieudonné, Rev. num., 1899, p. 197, with photograph, Pl. III. 27. Schlumberger and Dieudonné are inclined to attribute the coin to the period (A. D. 1051-1055) when, after the death of her sister Zoe, Theodora 'régna obscurément aux côtés de son beau-frère Constantin [IX] Monomaque'. Schlumberger supposes that it was issued simultaneously with the Æ of Constantine IX, Pl. LIX. 5, which it closely resembles, and he contrasts the title despoina with the title Augusta found on the gold coins of Theodora as sole Empress. Without undervaluing these arguments, I would point out that it does not seem very likely that Theodora during her period of eclipse would be commemorated on the Imperial currency. Again, despoina has already been used on coins as a title of the Empress Theodora the mother of Michael III (see N, supra, p. 429), and on one Æ coin of Constantine IX it is applied to the Blessed Virgin (p. 502, No. 16, supra); despoina does not, then, seem necessarily to indicate a rank inferior to Augusta. I therefore adopt the simple plan of assigning the coin to Theodora's sole reign as Empress (A. D. 1055-1056), a period during which we naturally look for a silver coinage to match her gold currency.

			The types of this coin were closely imitated on the silver money of Sven Estridsen, King of Denmark, A. D. 1047-1075 (P. Hauberg, Myntforhold og Udmyntninger i Danmark, Copenhagen, 1900, Pl. VIII, No. 7, &c.; p. 50 f.; p. 128; p. 250 f. According to Hauberg ('De l'influence byzantine sur les monnaies du Danemark au xi^e siècle', published in Congrès internat. de numismatique, Paris, 1900, pp. 339, 340), there is evidence that Sven's coin was struck before his accession, circ. 1046/7, so that the Danish imitation would be earlier than the Byzantine prototype. If the Danish imitation can really be assigned with certainty to circ. 1046/7 A. D., it is clear (as Hauberg has pointed out) that the Byzantine prototype here (and by Sabatier attributed to Michael VI (A. D. 1056/7) must belong to an earlier Michael — Michael IV or Michael V (d. 1042). Yet there seems to me to be considerable difficulty in assigning this nomisma to any Michael except Michael VI, and I therefore, though with some hesitation, allow the attribution to stand.—Cp. also O. Montelius, Kulturgesch. Schwedens (1906), p. 228 f.

¹ Constantine X had by Eudocia three sons who survived him, namely Michael VII, Andronicus, and Constantine. The last named was born after his father had become Emperor. de Saulcy (Essai, p. 298 f.) refused to assign this nomisma to the regency of Eudocia on the ground that one of her three sons—Andronicus—did not appear on the coin. He suggested that it was struck by Eudocia some years later when her second husband Romanus IV was in captivity, and he accounted for the omission of Andronicus by the supposition that he had died before the issue of the coin. But we now know from Psellus (Hist., p. 243, ed. Sathas) that Eudocia reigned (in A. D. 1067) with her two sons Michael and Constantine; Andronicus was evidently kept in the background (cp. Psellus, p. 240; cp. p. 264), though he appeared, later on, upon the family coin issued by Romanus IV (Nomisma, type 1, infra). There is no difficulty, therefore, in assigning our nomisma (Nos. 1 and 2) to the regency of Eudocia, May-Dec. 1067.

			the attribution to Romanus IV, which seems very probable, especially when we compare the figure of the Emperor with the bust of Romanus as shown on obv. of type 4 of his AR, infra. The type of the Emperor standing appears to be imitated on a Danish coin of Sven Estridsen, who reigned A.D. 1047-1075. This coin is dated by P. Hauberg ('De l'influence byz.' in Congrès internat. de numismatique, Paris, 1900, p. 341) to some time before the accession of Sven, and if this dating is certain, our coin cannot be of Romanus IV (1067-1071) but must be of some Emperor who ruled earlier than circ. 1046/7. There is the same difficulty about a Danish imitation of a coin of Michael VI: see supra, p. 510. The side representing the Virgin may be treated as the obv. on account of the inscr., a hexameter line:—Παρθένε σοι πολύαινε ὅς ἤλπιε πάντα κατορθοί, 'Whoso hath set his hope on thee, Virgin all-glorious, prospereth in all his works.' (Cp. G. Macdonald, Coin-types, p. 242). On the type of the Virgin, see Introd., supra, § 2, 'Romanus IV.'

Æ Size .8. Wt. ? This description is repeated from Sab., ii, p. 181, No. 8; Pl. 51, 17. A similar inscr. and type are found on seals of Nicephorus III (Schlumberger, Sigillogr., p. 625; also in Rev. num., 1905, p. 339). Seal and coin (as Schlumberger has indicated) must have been engraved before Nicephorus ascended the throne. (ΣΕΒΑΣΤΟΣ was at this period the title of a high-court functionary and not distinctively an Imperial title; Schlumberger, Sigil., p. 581 f. Cp. B. Z., 1904, p. 644.) This silver piece if intended for a coin must have been issued by Nicephorus when he set up as pretender to the throne, 1077—March 1078; but it is curious that he does not take the Imperial title, for Nicephorus Melissenus, another pretender who issued a coin (see p. 539), calls himself δεσπότης. Possibly our silver piece was not a coin but merely an impression of the seal of Nicephorus. (Cp. the large cameo at Vienna representing the Virgin orans; round the edge is an inscr. in which the Theotokos is implored to send aid, ΝΙΚΗΦΟΡΩ ΦΙΛΟΧΡΙΣΤΩ ΔΕΣΠΟ[Τ]Η ΤΩ ΒΟΤΑΝΙΑΘΗ: Mély in Monuments Piot, vi, p. 195 f.; also figured in Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., iii, p. 593.)

conservateurs à mon égard.' Though the coin is in poor condition it still remains very rare. (Cp. a billon specimen not well preserved published by F. van Vleuten in Z. f. N., vi (1879, p. 676), where I am inclined to doubt the reading 'Manuel' instead of 'Irene', more especially as van Vleuten has not recognized that a female figure is represented.) Sabatier at first supposed it to have been issued by John II, Comnenus, and to commemorate this Emperor and two of his sons. A comparison with the gold nomisma, p. 544, type 7 (from Sabatier's description) seems, however, to prove almost certainly that 24 is a coin of Alexius I, with his wife Irene and son John II. The seal assigned by Sorlin-Dorigny (Revue archéol., 1877, Pt. I, p. 90, No. II, Pl. IV. 6) to John II and his family would also seem to be of Alexius I, Irene, and John.

Svoronos (Journ. internat. d'arch. num., ii, p. 382) interprets C (here and elsewhere) as Σταυρέ, the appeal being made to the cross represented as the type. (Cp. a coin of Baldwin of Edessa, Rev. num., 1897, p. 533 f., which appears to read σταυρέ Ἰησοῦ νικῆς.) Similarly, he would interpret the familiar legend IC XC NI KA placed in the four angles of a cross as Σταυρὸς Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ νικῆ.—This legend is modelled on the C Φ Ν Δ of the previous reign, Pl. LXIII. 10, but it is not the earliest type of Alexius as it is found restruck on type 3.

Emperor. But the obv. of our type 10 so closely resembles the obv. of type 9 that I think both classes must belong to the same Alexius, i.e. Alexius I. The letters $\Lambda A K \Phi$ (as read by de Saulcy and Sabatier) are hard to interpret: de Saulcy (Essai, p. 359) says $KVPIE \Phi\bar{\nu}\Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi \Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi\text{ION} \text{A}\Gamma\Gamma\text{E}\Lambda\text{ON}$, and adds 'il n'y a contre cette lecture que le fait de l'abandon du nom "Ἀγγελος par l'empereur Alexis (III), qui voulut prendre le nom de Comnène'. (Svoronos, Journ. internat. d'arch. num., ii, p. 382, interprets $\Sigma\tau\alpha\upsilon\rho\acute{\epsilon}$ —alluding to the type—'Ἀλέξιον Ἀγγελον Κομνηνὸν φύλασσε.) I am inclined to think that on our type 10 the inscription intended is $\Delta \Delta K \Phi$ and not $\Lambda \Delta K \Phi$, the Δ being sometimes carelessly formed like Λ ; if this is so we should have the legend $\Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi\text{ION} \Delta\text{E}\Sigma\text{ΠOTHN} K\bar{\nu}P\text{IE} \Phi\bar{\nu}\Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi$, or, perhaps, ($\Sigma\tau\alpha\upsilon\rho\acute{\epsilon}$) $\Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi\text{ION} \Delta\text{E}\Sigma\text{ΠOTHN} K\text{OMNH}\bar{\nu}\text{ON} \Phi\bar{\nu}\Lambda\Lambda\Xi\Xi$, and either of these interpretations would be suitable for Alexius I.

¹ de Saulcy (Rev. num., 1836, p. 202 f.; cp. Essai, p. 323 f.) is inclined to doubt whether coins of this type were minted at Constantinople. One specimen bears a couple of Oriental countermarks which Sabatier has read as an Arab word 'good' or 'current' (Sab., Descript., ii, p. 191, No. 21; Pl. 52, 19; and in Mémoires Soc. d'arch. et num. St. Pétersb., 1850, p. 15). The British Museum possesses a barbarous imitation of type 11 with the rev. legend much blundered. This has to me something of the appearance of a coin of an Eastern mint (Antioch ?) of the time of the first Crusade.

ANONYMOUS BRONZE COINS

Usually assigned to the LATIN EMPERORS (A. D. 1204–1261), but probably Crusaders' coins of the period of ALEXIUS I.

These coins (figured by Sabatier, Pl. 58, Nos. 15–19; Pl. 59, Nos. 1, 2, and by de Saulcy, Num. des Croisades, Pl. XIII) form a homogeneous series—anonymous, flat in fabric and with ornate cross on rev.—which has been attributed by de Saulcy and Sabatier to the Latin Emperors of Constantinople, A. D. 1204–1261. But, as M. Schlumberger has pointed out (Num. de l'Orient latin, p. 274), there is really no positive evidence for this attribution; and I would go farther and say that the style and fabric of these pieces is of the eleventh and twelfth centuries rather than of the thirteenth century—of the time of the first rather than of the fourth Crusade.

(i) Evidence from restriking. These coins, as I have ascertained from specimens in the British Museum, are found restruck on coins of Isaac I (1057–1059), or Constantine X, Ducas (1059–1067); on Michael VII, Ducas (1071–1078); on Nicephorus III (1078–1081). We are thus conducted to about the reign of Alexius I and the period of the First Crusade.

(ii) An ornamented cross is characteristic of coins of the early Crusaders struck in Syria (Schlumberger, op. cit., Plates I and II), and of the flat Æ of Alexius I, type 9. With the ornamentation of the cross cp. also Schlumberger, L'Épop. byz., ii, pp. 69, 516; Engel, Num. et sigil. des Normands, Pl. I. 7; p. 84.

I assign these coins, then, to the time of Alexius I, and I am disposed to regard them not as Imperial issues but as coins of the Crusaders struck in Syria or Palestine. This is the view—at least in part—of M. Schlumberger (Num. de l'Orient latin, p. 22; cp. p. 274), who states that it was finally acquiesced in by de Saulcy. The coins are of circular, spread fabric, resembling some of those of the Counts of Edessa and the Princes of Antioch. On the other hand, the Constantinopolitan bronze coins of Alexius I and his successors are of irregular (not circular) form and are usually thick, resembling in their fabric the silver coins. Type 9 of the Æ of Alexius I is partly an exception. Though specimens of these coins have been obtained from Constantinople (de Saulcy, Num. des Croisades, pp. 122, 123), the more usual provenance appears to be Beyrouth, Aleppo, and even Bagdad, and they occur mixed with Æ coins of the Counts of Edessa and of Tancred of Antioch (Schlumberger, Num. de l'Orient latin, p. 22).

ALEXIUS II, Comnenus

24 SEPT. 1180—SEPT. 1184

ANDRONICUS I

joint ruler, OCT. 1183—SEPT. 1184

Alexius II is not known to have issued coins bearing his name; but possibly some of those inscribed with the name of Andronicus I may belong to the period of the joint rule of Alexius and Andronicus, i. e. Oct. 1183—Sept. 1184.

ANDRONICUS I, Comnenus

OCT. 1183—12 SEPT. 1185

The tunic of the Archangel is ornamented like the dress of the Emperor Andronicus I, as seen in Plate LXXI. 4, and also like that of Isaac II on No. 44, infra.

COINAGE OF ISAAC DUCAS COMNENUS, A. D. 1184-1191,
'EMPEROR,' IN CYPRUS.

Sabatier (ii, p. 227; Pl. 58, 9) has assigned, with probability, to Isaac of Cyprus (see Introduction, supra, § 2, under 'Isaac II') a bronze nomisma in his collection: obv., Imperial figure standing, ICAAKIOC ΔΕCΠΟ Ο ΔΟΥΚΑΣ; rev., St. Theodore. The seal of Isaac (published by Schlumberger, Sigillogr., p. 425) also bears the figure of St. Theodore and is inscribed ΚΕ ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ICAAKIW ΔΕCΠΟΤΗ ΤΩ ΚΟΜΝΗΝΩ.

P. Lambros, in his Avékdota (cited, supra, p. 591), assigns to Isaac of Cyprus various coins which I have here catalogued as of Isaac II, the Emperor, namely the nomismata of types 3, 4, 5, 6 and the bronze of type 2, &c. (Lambros, pl. I and p. 17 f.). These he assigns to Isaac of Cyprus because of their being found in Cyprus and because they differ (as he states) in style and execution from the coins of Isaac II, the Emperor. M. Lambros's treatment of the question is far too summary. (i) Provenance. There is, no doubt, evidence that coins of the class under discussion come from Cyprus (coins from Borrell sale described supra under 'Isaac II'; cp. Warren in Num. Chron., 1892, p. 209, found in Cyprus?), but Lambros has not stated whether Cyprus is the exclusive provenance of the coins or whether they are found also in other parts of the Empire. (ii) Style. These coins do not seem to me to differ materially in style from the coins of Isaac II, or from the bronze nomismata and bronze coins issued by earlier Emperors. (iii) Lambros has not noticed that Sabatier's coin (accepted by Lambros himself as of Isaac of Cyprus) bears the qualification Ο ΔΟΥΚΑΣ but all these coins have simply ΙΣΑΑΚΙΟΣ ΔΕΣΠΟΤΗΣ. On the present evidence, therefore, it seems to me hazardous to withdraw any of these coins from Isaac II and to assign them (as Lambros has proposed) to Isaac of Cyprus.

¹ Another specimen is described by Rollin in Rev. num., vi (1841), p. 175 with ornamentation (✕ ✕) instead of letters on the back of the throne. A specimen of this type in the Moustier Cat., No. 4153, is described as being of silver. Borrell (N.C., iv, p. 20) considers this type 2 to have been struck by Michael VIII while Emperor of Nicaea (1 Jan. 1260—July 1261). The chief argument in favour of this plausible view would be that the rev. type (the Virgin) breaks the sequence of reverse-types with the view of Constantinople, introduced by Michael VIII at Constantinople and continued by his successor Andronicus II. The type would therefore for this reason be more conveniently assigned to Nicaea than to Constantinople. In the absence, however, of strong evidence that coins of this type are found at Nicaea, I prefer to place the coins under Michael's reign at Constantinople. It will be noticed, moreover, (i) that the obv. type is identical with the obv. type of Michael's nomisma (type 1, p. 608, Nos. 1-5, supra); (ii) that the rev. resembles the rev. of the bronze nomismata described infra, Nos. 9, 10, especially in the treatment of the throne.

Silver
A silver coin (rev., Christ seated) is described in Photiades Cat. , No. 573.

¹ Sabatier assigns other bronze nomismata to Michael VIII:—Sab., Pl. 59. 7. The fleur de lis rather suggests that this may be a coin of Nicaea. Sab., Pl. 59. 10 and 11, belong to Michael I, Despot of Epirus, according to Schlumberger, Num. de l'Or. lat., p. 373. Sab., 59. 12 may belong to Michael I or Michael II, Despots of Epirus (Schlumberger, l.c.).

² The legend is almost certain though somewhat obscure; Sabatier, Pl. 60, 10, assigns a very similar specimen to Andronicus II.

Bronze Coinage
(i) MICHAEL VIII alone
The bronze piece assigned to Michael VIII by Sabatier, Pl. 59, 15, is a misread coin of Manuel II (see infra under his reign).
The absence of bronze (apart from the bronze nomismata) is remarkable. Possibly the gap might be filled by attributing to Michael VIII the 'Uncertain' pieces figured by Sabatier, Pl. 70, Nos. 11, 12, 17, 18.

¹ Both figures are (apparently) bearded and both are represented as equal in dignity. It is, therefore, difficult to determine (as de Saulcy has already remarked, Essai, p. 430) whether the coins belong to Michael VIII and his son Andronicus II, or to Andronicus II and his son Michael IX. I am inclined to ascribe them to Michael VIII and his son, because Andronicus II and his son are otherwise well provided with bronze coins. There is perhaps the difficulty (in this attribution to Michael VIII and Andronicus II) that Andronicus is (apparently) represented bearded, though he is said to have been only fifteen at his coronation as joint Emperor in A.D. 1273; he, however, reigned with his father till 1282, and these coins may have been struck a few years later than his coronation.—Sabatier also attributes to Michael VIII and Andronicus II (Pl. 59, 17; vol. ii, p. 243, No. 14) a bronze coin with ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡΕC ΠΩΜΑΙΩΝ on the reverse. Cp. Penon in Rev. belge, 1858, p. 276, 'Andronicus II and Michael IX.' Sab., Pl. 59, 16; ii, p. 244, No. 15, does not seem to me to be of Michael VIII and Andronicus II, nor even, perhaps, of Constantinople: de Salis appears to have assigned the British Museum specimen to John Angelus Comnenus, A.D. 1232–1234, Emperor of Thessalonica. There is another specimen of the coin described in the Windisch-Grätz Catalogue, No. 337.

² The letters ΜΓ are perhaps to be classed with the other large letters found on the gold of Andronicus II (BΛ, ΒΧ, &c.), but it is also possible that they are to be taken in conjunction with the IC XC, thus making up the well-known sacred formula ΧΜΓ (on which see H. Leclercq in Cabrol, Dict., s.v. 'Abréviations', p. 180, and see B. Z., 1905, pp. 672, 755).

² The general appearance of this coin would lead one to assign it to Andronicus I Comnenus (cp. Sab., Pl. 57, 7) rather than to Andronicus II; but the name 'Palaeologus' on the obv. is hardly to be mistaken: see also the specimen described and figured in Thomsen Cat., No. 821.

PERIOD III

ANDRONICUS II (alone)

13 OCT. 1320—1 FEB. 1325

The coins issued during this period—if any—must probably be looked for among those that we have included in period I. Or, again, it is possible, if not very probable, that Andronicus III was associated on the coins with his grandfather Andronicus II even before the date of his formal coronation, i.e. before 2 Feb. 1325. On this supposition, some coins assigned infra to period IV (Andronicus II and III, joint reign) will belong to period III.

¹ Cp. Sab., ii, p. 253, No. 22 and p. 254, No. 23. Sabatier says 'le mot ΔΩΚΙΜΙΟΝ pour δοκίμιον, qu'on y lit, semblerait prouver que ces exemplaires étaient des essais.' But a much simpler explanation would be to regard the word as simply ΡΩΜΑΙΩΝ blundered, the obv. legend being practically the same as the rev. legend. As to exagía of the period of Andronicus II, see Svoronos in Journ. int., ii, p. 341 f.; Schlumberger, Mélanges d'arch. byz., i, p. 35 f.; Photiades Cat., p. 48, No. 675.—Sabatier (ii, p. 259, No. 43; Pl. 62, 3) further attributes to Andronicus II and III a large scyphate bronze piece. This specimen is in the British Museum. There are traces (not noticed by Sabatier) of a legend on r. and l. of obv., probably identifications of the two Emperors represented, possibly Andronicus II and Michael IX, though the legend is obscure. On l., Α; on r., Χ; but most doubtful. The figure on l. (i.e. the spectator's left) is beardless, the figure on r. has a forked beard. In the British Museum collection I have found the coin placed (by de Salis?) under John V and John VI.

¹ Sabatier, ii, p. 269, No. 1, assigns this coin to Andronicus IV, but it does not fit in well with the smaller and ruder silver coins which seem to be rightly assigned to Andronicus IV. Svoronos (Journ. int., ii, p. 386) doubts whether our No. 1 belongs to the Imperial series of Constantinople, but I do not quite understand to which personage of the name of Andronicus ('Andronicus of Thessalonica') he would assign it.—St. Demetrius, who on No. 2 is represented as an armed warrior, is here shown in a tunic and mantle holding a cross. Similar representations of the most popular military saints, St. Theodore Tyron and St. George, are known, e.g. on a Byzantine enamelled medallion in the British Museum. Portable crosses, probably of cypress wood, were distributed by the Emperors to high officials to be carried in procession on festivals (Dalton, in Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries, London, 10 May, 1906, Fig. 6).

² Sabatier assigns to Andronicus III the Æ piece (rev., patriarchal cross and Θ Β) described by him, ii, p. 262, No. 2; Pl. 62, 13. The obv. is described as having 'pas de légende', but his plate gives the letter M. A similar coin in the British Museum shows a longer but very obscure legend, and I do not venture to ascribe it to Andronicus III, though the coin may belong to about this period. The British Museum does not possess specimens of Sab., Pl. 62, Nos. 14, 15 with monogram on rev.; cp. Photiades Cat., No. 611; Thomsen Cat., No. 826; Rev. belge, 1859, p. 319.

1	15.4 (pierced)	Æ .65	[de Salis gift]	[Pl. LXXVI. 6.]
			This is the identical specimen engraved by Sabatier (Pl. 63, 5) whose attribution to John V, if not quite certain, may be accepted, after comparison of the coin with Sab., Pl. 63, 4, though the latter piece is inscribed ΠΟΛΙΤΙΚΟΝ (see p. 632, infra) and is probably a ticket and not a coin.
			There are no other coins in the British Museum that can be assigned with certainty to the long reign of John V. The small bronze piece (Brit. Mus., Wt. 28.7 grains), with the Virgin and Magi on rev. , described by Madden in Num. Chron. , 1878, p. 194 and p. 214, No. 10; Pl. X. 10 (cp. Thomsen Cat. , No. 829, and de Marchant, Lettre X), was ascribed by de Salis to this reign, but it may be doubted whether it is a coin.

No.	Weight	Metal and Size	Obverse	Reverse
			Sabatier has assigned to John V three types only, all in bronze. Of these Nos. 17 and 18 in his Pl. 62 are, perhaps, rightly attributed, but No. 16 is probably not a coin but (as Schlumberger has suggested, Mélanges d'arch. byz., i, p. 294) a ticket connected with the public distributions of bread at the Imperial Palace; it is inscribed on the rev. ΠΟΛΙΤΙΚΟΝ, and must be considered in connexion with other pieces of the period in Æ and Æ which bear the same inscription but varying types: see Sab., Pl. 62, No. 16 = Thomsen Cat., No. 828; Rev. num., 1865, p. 291; Pl. 12, 6; Photiades Cat., No. 677; specimen in Brit. Mus. (Æ, Wt. 7.3 grains) with obv., cross, and ♂; B♂; ♂; B♂ each in an angle of the cross; rev. +ΠΟ ΛΙΤΙ ΚΟΝ in three lines. See also Sab., Pl. 63, 4 (John V and Manuel II) and Windisch-Grätz Cat., No. 342; Hoffmann Cat., 1898, p. 160, No. 2259 (Æ Andronicus IV). But de Sauley's view (l. c.) seems preferable, that the coin was struck by John VII when left as regent by his uncle Manuel II, during Manuel's absence in Europe, 1400-1402. The quaint group of Manuel II and his family represented in the miniature of the MS. of Dionysius the Areopagite, in the Louvre, and itself originally presented by Manuel to a French monastery is well known: see Du Cange, Gloss., vol. 7, Pl. vii; Bayet, L'art byz., p. 231.

¹ Pellets are inserted between several letters of both inscriptions.—The inscriptions on the portions of the fortifications of Constantinople restored by John VIII usually run:—ΙΩ ΕΝ ΧΩ ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡΟΣ ΤΟΝ ΠΑΛΑΙΟΛΟΓΟΝ (Van Millingen, Byz. Const. (Walls), pp. 104–107). In another inscr. we have ΠΙΣΤΟΣ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΚΑΙ ΑΥΤΟΚΡΑΤΩΡ ΡΩΜΑΙΩΝ &c. (Van Millingen, p. 126). The form Δ for Α is found, as on some of the coins.

² The specimen figured in de Saulcy, Essai, Pl. 33, 7; cp. Sab., ii, p. 282, No. 3, has in field of rev. the letters C and Π, which Grote (cited by de Saulcy, Essai, p. 468) has interpreted σῶζεις Παλαιόλογον. The same letters occur on a coin of Manuel II, supra, p. 637, No. 11.

MEDAL OF JOHN VIII. BY V. PISANO.

A GEOGRAPHIC LEXICON OF GREEK COIN INSCRIPTIONS

A. Florance

One of the major problems of the historian, archaeologist and numismatist is locating today the ancient cities known to have existed in the ancient world. Although many of these disappeared through the centuries, they have left behind clues for the historian in the shape of their inscribed coins. Often, helpfully, the entire city's name is inscribed on a coin and knowledge from literature and ancient history combined with some of archaeological topography can lead to the site. But sometimes a city only inscribed part of its name, and then its whereabouts are more difficult to ascertain. For instance, do you know where and what the Greek cities known to us from coin inscriptions only as AP, BAP or FA were?

Now, with the use of this excellent lexicon, most of these problems are solved. The original Greek coin inscriptions are classified alphabetically with the complete names of the minting Greek cities transcribed into Roman characters, and with indications of the appropriate area of the ancient world in which they were located. A handy manual which should be at the side of anyone involved with the history, numismatics, archaeology or geography of the ancient world.

BYZANTIUM AND NUMISMATICS

Aloisius Barozzi

During much of that period so commonly known as "the Dark Ages" the Byzantine Empire was the most stable and cultured power in the world. Although it has been much neglected by historians to date, there is a growing interest in this vast empire which lasted for over 1,000 years until the fall of Constantinople in 1453. Its emperors were successors of the earlier Roman rulers, and it is via their coins that we have learned much of what we know about their reigns, trade relations and, in fact, about the economic history of the western world.

This book includes as an introduction the monograph "Byzantine History in the Early Middle Ages," by Frederic Harrison of Wadham College, Oxford. Mr. Barozzi writes of the importance of Byzantine coins as historical and economic documents and has compiled a select bibliography of reference works together with an alphabetical list of the emperors and empresses who appeared, or who may have appeared, on coins, with the dates of their reigns, for use by the historian in studying this civilization to which our own is so closely tied.

ARCHITECTURA NUMISMATICA

T. L. Donaldson

Only by means of representations on coins and medals do we know today what many of the temples and public buildings of ancient Greece and Rome were actually like. The ruins and fragments found by archaeologists provide us with some dimensions and architectural details, but it is to ancient coins and medals that we must turn to piece together the ruins or to create reconstructions of the classic buildings.

The outstanding religious and public buildings of each free city, province or vassal state, especially during the period of the Roman Empire, were chosen to embellish new issues of coins and medals. This is fortunate for us, for nowhere else is there so complete and excellent a group of reliable illustrations of the outstanding architectural creations of Greece and Rome. T. L. Donaldson, an architect, made a detailed study of the major examples of architecture shown on ancient coins, and his enlarged drawings of these which show each detail clearly, provide a basic handbook for anyone wishing to study the evolution of ancient architecture. He drew not only from one coin of a type, but from as many examples of each as were available in order to incorporate the best features of each one into his drawings. In this sense Donaldson's detailed drawings are superior even to the best possible photographs of these ancient coin types since they combine all of the best points of the known coins and have no flaws as most ancient coin illustrations do.

Archaeologists and architects find Donaldson's drawings useful for another reason, for there are many temples and buildings shown in them which never have been excavated or the ruins of which have entirely disappeared. Thus Architectura Numismatica has become a guidebook to unknown, unstudied, or undiscovered antiquities. The author was one of the most energetic and productive of the pioneers in classical archaeology and it was he who first pointed out in this text, before any excavations had been done, the locations of the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus and the site of the famous oracle of Dodona in Epirus. There are undoubtedly still more remains of ancient architecture to be located in future excavations in the classical lands, but which are already known to us from their numismatic representations illustrated, discussed and identified in the plates and text of this unique book.

Our new edition contains a new historical introduction and an updated bibliographical essay.

"This work is still a classic, for its method of investigation and for the enlarged drawings which show details that might otherwise escape the eye."—Cornelius Vermeule, Curator of Greek and Roman Art in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (in Bibliography of Applied Numismatics, p. 120)

ANCIENT GREEK AND ROMAN COINS:

A HANDBOOK

G. F. Hill

This first American edition of a classic work is perhaps the most methodical and comprehensive introduction to ancient numismatics. Virtually every aspect of ancient coinage is discussed, from the origins of coins as currency to the technical information concerning the metals used, their weights and standards. There is also important information on the methods of locating and dating coins and on reading their inscriptions. Included in the appendices is a lengthy new select bibliography in addition to Hill's original one. The sixteen plates show nearly 200 of the finest known specimens of both ancient and Greek and Roman coins.

"...a veritable necessity for most students of ancient coins, whether beginners or well-advanced numismatists."—Coin World $10.00
